New Honeywell Electronic Air Cleaner removes up to 95% of airborne dust and pollen

Out comes clean air to fill your home . . . to help free your wife from daily dusting and cut your cleaning bills. The Honeywell "whole-house" Electronic Air Cleaner fits in the return air duct of any forced air heating—cooling system—removing up to 95%* of the pollen and particles passing through it.

Your home contains millions of impurities. You only see the larger particles of dust that settle on table tops and shelves. It's a time-consuming . . . sometimes even a daily dusting to get rid of them. But that's only half the story. The smaller invisible particles—over 90% of the total—the pollen, soot, smoke, cooking gas, bacteria and industrial wastes do most of the real damage.

They may cause discomfort, soil furniture and draperies, put a dingy haze on windows and mirrors, and leave white areas or "ghosts" lurking behind pictures. The Honeywell Electronic Air Cleaner is highly efficient when it comes to catching these smaller particles—the ones that can pass right through ordinary filters.

You'll notice the difference! Your family will enjoy the comfort of purer air. Mirrors, windows, walls and furnishings will stay and look cleaner. You'll save money on cleaning bills. Of course, your wife won't throw away her dust cloth—no air cleaner can remove particles that settle before they enter the system. But her dusting time will be reduced. And the money you save can pay for your air cleaner.

Get the benefits of the same filtering system used extensively in hospitals. On a 3-year FHA loan, it can cost as little as $14.38 a month, installed in your present home. In a new home it may be included in the mortgage for under $2.00 per month.

If you don't have a forced air system or are renting a home, the Honeywell Portable Electronic Air Cleaner could be your answer. Ideal for your office—or conference room, too.

Do yourself and your wife a favor. Just mail the coupon for information on Honeywell's whole-house or room-portable Electronic Air Cleaners.

*As measured by the National Bureau of Standards Dust Spot Method.

MAY RELIEVE ALLERGIES. The Honeywell Electronic Air Cleaner removes up to 95%* of the airborne irritants passing through it. Of course, it is not a cure, but it may relieve allergies. Ask your doctor if it might help you.

INCORPORATING LIVING FOR YOUNG HOMEMAKERS

JULY, 1965 VOL. 128 NO. 1

GRIGSBY

On the cover: Quietly gleaming, orderly under every operating strain and serene in repose, the Richard Dents' kitchen in Fairfield County, Conn., represents the ideal of families who like to keep all their kitchen equipment out of sight. Behind the smooth façade of closed doors and drawer fronts hides a collection of antique china and glassware, table linens, silver, plug-in appliances, pots and pans, trays, table leaves, flower-arranging gear, foodstuffs, liquor, cook books, trash containers and everything else a well-run kitchen needs. (For a look inside the doors and drawers, see page 92.) Mrs. Dent, a knowledgeable antique lover, has filled the rest of her house with fine examples —some of them museum pieces. But as a perfectionist striving for greater efficiency in her kitchen, she wanted, for this one room, modern equipment and materials and a thoroughly businesslike plan that would tend to streamline her operations automatically. At the same time the soft color, the mellow brick, the antiqued wood and old beams all serve as visual links between the kitchen and the mood of adjoining rooms. St. Charles cabinets; Elkay sinks. Kitchen designer: Bette Sanford Roby. For the on-stage type of kitchen storage preferred by other families, please see page 94.

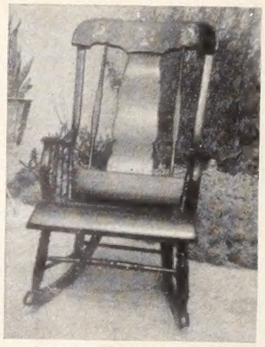
Antiques Questions & Answers



By Thomas H. Ormsbee

AMERICAN PIER TABLE AND MIRROR

We have just acquired this hand-carved antique table with mirror. The mermaids are about 3 feet tall, the mirror nearly 5 feet and all in beautiful condition. Any information on its age and origin will be appreciated. E. C. McC.—Springfield, Mo.

Your pier table with carved caryatid supports is probably American of the Directoire period, 1810–1820. The mirror seems of the same period, and the two pieces were probably made by a New Orleans craftsman to grace the drawing room of a fine mansion.

PENNSYLVANIA DUTCH ROCKER

I'd like very much to know what I have in this old Boston rocker which is different from any I have seen. We bought it in the Ozarks. W. H. B.—Independence, Mo.

Yours is not a Boston rocker, but of a type made in the Pennsylvania Dutch country about the same time—1840–1860. It probably came west by covered wagon.

THOMAS SATCHWELL'S ENGLISH HALLMARKS

Last summer at an estate sale we bought a small silver pitcher with the enclosed marks. We know the family came from England about 125 years ago. Can you help us find out who may have made it? C. H.—Minneapolis, Minn.

From your sketch of the hallmarks we believe you have an English solid silver cream jug. It was made in London by Thomas Satchwell, who worked there from 1773 to 1789. The date letter M indicates that your pitcher was made in 1787.

Happy Birthday,
Happy Anniversary

all at once.

Give the wife a new KitchenAid Superba VariCycle or Imperial DuaCycle convertible-portable dishwasher. It's a front-loading mobile dishwasher with Guide Bar. And a built-in, too. When and if you remodel. Hook it up to any sink. Click. It's done. Both convertibles are topped by a maple cutting board. Bet she can use that! They come in copper tone or white finish. And they feature 4-Way Hydro Sweep, which eliminates hand rinsing. And Flo-Thru drying. So dishes come out bone dry. Big, versatile capacity, too. We'd sure like to show them to you. But bring the Little Lady along. Then we can sing Happy Birthday together.

AMERICAN GLASS BREAD DISH

Would you be able to tell from the enclosed drawing anything about this glass dish, which I presume was used for bread? M. M. R.—Santa Fe, N. M.

It is an American pattern glass bread dish, probably bought at the Centennial Exposition of 1876, held in Philadelphia. The design was patented July 6, 1875, probably by the factory of Gillinder & Sons of Philadelphia, who made many pattern glass dishes for the Exposition.

FRENCH MINIATURE PLAQUE

What information can you give me on my 6-inch bronze plaque of a woman in classic Roman dress feeding a large bird? There is no mark. F. G.—New York, N. Y.

I am inclined to consider it of French provenance of the late eighteenth or early nineteenth century. As it bears no signature or foundry mark, it can't be traced.

AMERICAN SHERATON CARD TABLE

This table was made for a Bath, Maine, family many years ago. Can you tell me anything about it? K. L. S.—Newport, R. I.

You have a double-top card table with serpentine front and spiral-turned legs of the American Sheraton period, 1815–1830. The table appears to be of New England origin.

ART GLASS VASE

My small glass vase has color decorations and is rather irregularly shaped. Do you think it an American piece?
C. S. P.—Batesville, Ark.

It could be either European or American; I would date it about 1900 or a little later. Such art glass vases were decorated in enamel colors fused by a second annealing in a gloss kiln.

SCOTTISH CLOCK

How old would you judge our tall case clock to be? The name J. & C. McNab is very faint on the face. The antique dealer said it was English. M. H.—Los Angeles, Calif.

J. & C. McNab, clockmakers, worked in Perth, Scotland, from 1790 to 1800. The design of the case, which is of the Hepplewhite period but by an unknown cabinetmaker, corresponds with these dates.

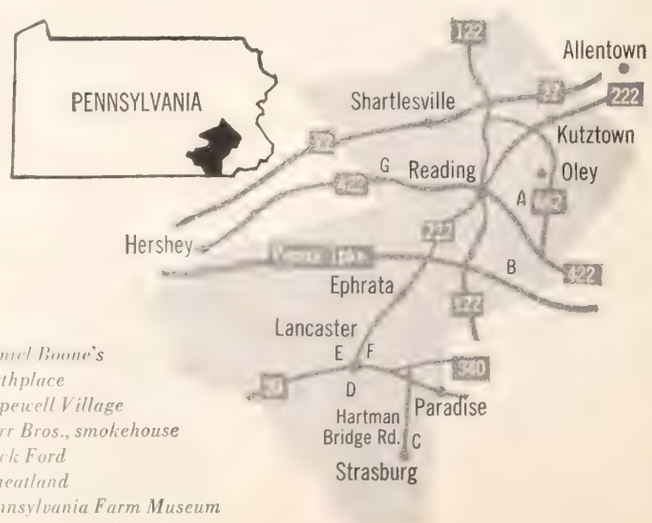
Going places, finding things in The Pennsylvania Dutch Country

The first of a now-and-then series of weekend vignettes on wayward excursions within easy distance of major U.S. cities

by José Wilson



EDITOR'S NOTE: Driving through southeastern Pennsylvania with colleague Denise Otis (whose camera kept a photographic record of the trip), H&G's travel and food editor discovered that you don't have to leave the country to sample new dishes or hear a strange language spoken.

Travel is a bug that bites Americans regularly. The urge to get up and go someplace can come on at any time, but it is especially strong on spring, summer or autumn weekends when the sun shines and the road beckons. What can you see in a weekend? A surprising amount. It's time enough to explore unfamiliar terrain in your own state, to visit historic houses and brand-new museums and to discover the vestiges of an older, less homogenized America that still flourish in various pockets of this country.

Given a long holiday weekend, your scope is even wider. On a recent long weekend, we investigated a part of Pennsylvania that, while only three hours' drive from our offices in New York City, has managed to retain a unique, old-world ambiance—the Pennsylvania Dutch region. In the eighteenth century, this part of Penn's tolerant colony became the haven for European Protestants—mainly Rhineland Germans, but also Swiss and French Huguenots—fleeing religious persecution, all of whom have left traces of their ancestry in the architecture, crafts, food and language. The local dialect known as Pennsylvania Dutch (from Deutsch or Deitsch) has its roots in old German dialects, although it has since been overlaid with English. Religion is still a guiding force in this part of the country, noticeable not so much in the Gay Dutch, who belong to the Lutheran or Reformed churches and look and behave much like everyone else, but in the Plain People—the Mennonites, Amish, Dunkers and River Brethren—who cling to their austere customs, sober dress and simple farm life.

Berks and Lancaster counties are the heart of this region. We decided to split our time between them, making our headquarters first at Reading and then at Lancaster, the county seats, each of which has a Holiday Inn motel conveniently situated on the outskirts of town. (With the Holiday Inn directory, which lists more than 550 motels strategically dotted around the country, you can map out an itinerary from town to town and never have to hunt for a place to lay your weary head at the end of the day.)

Now my friends listen when I talk

...all because I've become a regular reader of THE NATIONAL OBSERVER, the new national weekly newspaper that costs me less than 11¢ a copy

"As far back as I can remember, I've felt a little inadequate in group conversation. My friends always seemed so much better informed about world events, the latest scientific discoveries, educational trends, fashions, books, and so on. My contributions were few and unimpressive.

"Then last June I subscribed to The National Observer, a new kind of national news weekly in newspaper form. I hoped it would add scope and depth to my knowledge.

"The results have far exceeded my original expectations.

"For the first time, my friends are not only listening attentively to what I say, but are actually seeking my contributions. One evening last week, for instance, I was able to tell our group . . .

- . . . why the British Army recently recruited 35 apes
- . . . why a commercially available arthritis treatment is causing concern among public health officials
- . . . why swallows are defecting from Capistrano
- . . . why a New Jersey five-and-dime store offered merchandise costing up to $150,000
- . . . why Soviet sunbathers can get tanned through their shirts
- . . . why many little boys will be playing with dolls next year
- . . . why the space race may be helping to keep peace between Russia and the United States
- . . . why the British are playing radio soap operas for quarantined dogs

"There's a whole storehouse of important, useful, and entertaining information like this in every week's National Observer. That's why I read it from cover to cover. It makes me feel so much more alive and aware of the world we live in."

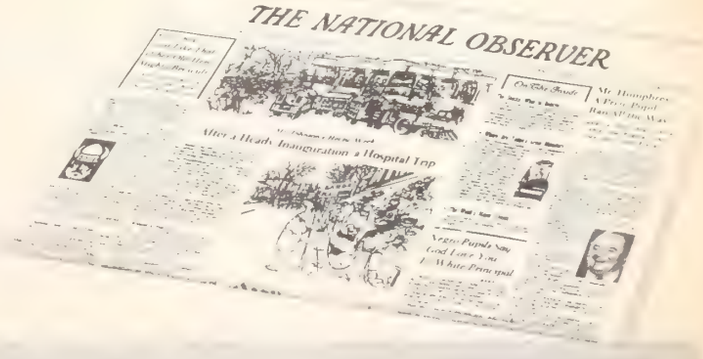
So many people are talking this way about The National Observer these days. Why not join them?

The National Observer is published by Dow Jones & Company, the same world-wide news-gathering organization that publishes The Wall Street Journal. For two successive years, The Observer has won top national awards for distinguished news reporting.

Because The Observer is printed simultaneously on high-speed newspaper presses in its four modern printing plants across the country — and because newspapers can be "made up" and printed faster than magazines — last minute stories can be filed only hours before the paper comes off the press.

You get more news — and you get more out of it. In only 18 to 32 full-size newspaper pages (printed on our own special crisp, white newsprint) you often get more reading material than in other news weeklies. The newspaper format permits not just one major "cover story," but five or six. Inside pages are important, too — there's no "let-down." Well-written headlines let you learn a lot quickly, and invite easy browsing for the stories that interest you most. More than 50 excellent pictures open windows not only on people, places and events in the headlines but also on such colorful sidelights as the Laguna Indians doing a traditional dance to celebrate their new electronics plant . . . or the spectacle of an elephant giving his autograph.

MANY ENJOYABLE SPECIAL FEATURES



Each week, too, The National Observer brings you more than a dozen special features that add to your enjoyment or broaden your knowledge in important areas. "The Week in Washington," for example, can be read in seven minutes or less, yet brings you up to date on significant happenings in Congress, the White House, Government agencies, the courts and politics. Similarly, "How's Business?" fills you in quickly on important trends in industry, the performance of the stock market, economic indicators, and company and executive highlights.

For Bridge enthusiasts, there's "Better Bridge"; for crossword fans, a really challenging puzzle; for recipe collectors, a gem or two almost every week in "Food for Thought." And for both you and your youngsters, there's a weekly news quiz, plus "Current Events Classroom" — a column which brings you news background on such topics as the long history of Black-nationalist groups in the U.S. . . . the 400-year-old tradition of congressional immunity, and why it is in danger . . . the growing significance of a never-used method of amending the Constitution . . . why a country devalues its currency. "A Chat With the Doctor" brings you helpful medical hints on subjects ranging from indigestion to high blood pressure. On the lighter side, "Reflections" explores random aspects of life: the "good old days" when a pocket watch was a major status symbol . . . what it's like to be a female "handyman" . . . the adventures of a hobo in New Orleans for the Mardi Gras. And the whole family will enjoy the dry humor of "Grass Roots Philosophy," culled from the hometown press. ("Brush your teeth regularly with an electric toothbrush and see your electrician twice a year.")

As Reading was our nearest point, we made it our first stop, leaving Manhattan in late afternoon and arriving in good time for dinner at Stokesay Castle, a copy of a thirteenth-century English castle, built as a private home in 1932. It was the address that attracted us—who could resist a restaurant at Hill Road and Spook Lane? But the meal turned out to be well above average and we ate on a large, canopied dining terrace overlooking the lights of the valley below.

In and around Reading

The city of Reading is an agreeable mélange of architectural styles—modern buildings, gingerbread Victorian and eighteenth-century red-brick town houses, brooded over by one of the most startling landmarks ever to dominate a skyline, the Pagoda. This curious edifice of stone and shingle with wood porches and five tiers of red-tiled roofs was built as a private home in 1908 and is now owned by the city. For a closer look at its eccentricities, we followed the curves of Duryea Drive (named for Charles Duryea, inventor of the hill-climbing automobile, who tested his vehicles there) to the point on Mount Penn where the Pagoda commands a panoramic view of the city below (we couldn't help thinking what an ideal restaurant site it would make). Before leaving Reading, we stopped at the Berks County Historical Society at Spring and Center Streets, a small museum with a comprehensive and well-displayed selection of furniture, antique toys, painted Bible boxes and bride's boxes (the last, decorated with primitive two-dimensional figures and loving mottoes in German, were given by bridegroom to bride) and such early handcrafts as Stiegel glass. Named for the colonial ironmaster and self-styled "Baron," Henry William Stiegel, some of the glass is clear and fragile: tumblers, flasks and perfume bottles engraved or enameled with colorful designs of animals and flowers, parrots and roosters in the European peasant style, while heavier pieces (decanters, pitchers and bowls) are in solid glowing shades of amber, amethyst, green and blue.

Restored buildings at Hopewell Village conform to contours of the land. Ironmaster's house at left, added to by successive owners, contains American Empire furniture owned by the Brooke family, who lived there from 1800 to 1935.

Taking U.S. 422 south from Reading, we stopped first to look at the outside of the Mordecai Lincoln House, built in 1733 by Abraham Lincoln's great-great-grandfather and still lived in, and the homestead where Daniel Boone was born in 1734 (it was news to us that both families originally hailed from this section of the country, moving westward in the late eighteenth century). All that remains of the original Boone log cabin is the foundation. It was replaced later in the century by a two-story stone house that has been furnished with pieces of the period: ladderback chairs and sawbuck table, Betty lamps, pewter dishes and iron pots, trundle and four-poster beds, a dower chest painted with the Pennsylvania Dutch tulip design. The homestead barn holds a Conestoga wagon—the forerunner of the prairie

Not much of a wedding gift, maybe...but it will fit in an all new Frigidaire Dishwasher

That's one of the things people used to complain about in automatic dishwashers—odd-shaped dishes like that awkward item above. Or 12-inch dinner plates. Or pilsner glasses. Platters. Goblets. Wouldn't fit. Now, mark our words, the all-new Frigidaire Dishmobile will hold them. Bigger on the inside, smaller on the outside? Not exactly. When we designed our new washing action (Super-Surge, it's called), we found we could also redesign the racks to hold more and bigger things. We're amazed at the difference it makes. You will be, too. And our engineers have eliminated some other complaints you've heard. Like hand-rinsing dishes before loading—you just don't have to do it with the new Custom Imperial Dishmobile. Ask your Frigidaire dealer why. And ask him soon. Why waste any more time doing dishes by hand?

Sanitize your dishes sparkling clean schooner that carried pioneers across the continent.

From here we headed south to French Creek State Park and Hopewell Village, a colonial ironworks that flourished between 1770 and 1883 and is now being restored and developed as a National Historic Site by the National Park Service. Nestled in the pastoral quiet of the countryside, Hopewell is a felicitous example of early community planning. It was not only a working furnace but a self-sufficient iron "plantation" with a Big House for the ironmaster; smaller tenant houses for blacksmiths and molders, woodcutters and wheelwrights; an office store; spring houses and bake oven. The buildings are spread out in a way that relates them both to each other and to the land, and their scale and structure have a visual harmony that pleases the eye and soothes the spirit. The day we were there the old casting house, of which only the walls and pier stones have remained standing, was being reconstructed by the helping hands of a group of pink-cheeked, black-hatted Amish men. Deftly they lined up the immensely long rafters that meet to form the framework of the roof, without benefit of ridgepole, securing them not with nails, but with hand-whittled locust pegs. Near the casting house was the blacksmith's shop and we stopped to examine its unusual roof tiles, which were deeply grooved to shed water easily. Made with an old German technique by which the potter formed the run-off grooves with his fingers before baking, these tiles are so scarce that they have become collector's items.

From Hopewell we drove north on U.S. 662 through the fertile Oley Valley, passing decorous, prosperous farms; two-story red-painted Swiss barns gaily decorated with distinctive hex signs of six-pointed stars and whirling raindrops; white tobacco-drying barns, their side planks propped open at the bottom like louvers to allow air circulation; and here and there a house with the steeply pitched roof that harks back to the French Huguenot settlers. This part of Berks County boasts some fine Georgian stone houses, of which the Fisher mansion, one mile from Yellow House on 662, is a first-rate example. You also see a wealth of intricate ironwork porches, balconies and fences—in fact, the sleepy little town of Oley itself is a treasure trove of iron patterns. It was in Oley that we met Dan Boyer, a local craftsman who weaves rag rugs to order in a workshop behind his house. (The extremely reasonable price is even lower if the customer supplies his own rags, a hard-to-get commodity in this day of the ready-made.) Craftsmen like Dan Boyer and Charlie Wagonhurst, a fifth-generation tinsmith, can be seen at work during the two big summer Pennsylvania Dutch folk fairs—the Pennsylvania Dutch Folk Festival held at Kutztown from July 3 through 10 and Hershey's Pennsylvania Dutch Days, August 24 through 29. Here you can watch baskets, brooms, rugs and quilts being made, tole and barn signs painted, apple butter simmered and shoofly pies baked—and even observe practitioners of the ancient art of fraktur, the hand-illumination of manuscripts and baptismal and marriage certificates.

The antique trail

No one should visit Reading without hitting the antique trail, for every highway and byway in and around the city yields a shop, sometimes no more than a couple of rooms in a private house. The easiest way to track most of them down is to pick up the leaflet put out by the Antique Dealers Association of Berks County, which lists twenty association members and pinpoints their location on a map. Studying this, we decided that U.S. 222 north of Reading was a likely route and after five miles

The notes of a happy housekeeper

BY MARY ELIZABETH FALTER

DIANA NORMAN

One of the projects we gave our attention to this past spring was the old all-too-human problem of the storage of the myriad belongings a big family accumulates. Even though our house is roomy, we have never had enough closets, and our cupboards were not always arranged for top capacity. By the time the first summer days came, we had worked out some satisfactory storage arrangements for many of our possessions.

For one thing, we licked the where-to-store-the-woolens question. The winter clothing and cold-weather accessories of six people can occupy quite a lot of space. For lack of closets, we've been squeezing our belongings into odd nooks and corners all over the house, with the result that we never quite knew where anything was. But when Tina outgrew her crib this spring and moved to a real room down the hall, Tom and I had a brilliant idea. Tina's outgrown nursery was too small, really, for a bedroom—so we decided to turn it into a super-efficient storage room.

Converting it was simple. We moved everything out except the chest of drawers. Then I telephoned a department store and ordered two roll-around hanging racks similar to the kind you see in check rooms. These each hold three jumbo garment bags, labeled for every member of the family, plus some matching hatboxes to go on the shelf-like rack on top. I also ordered three large metal storage boxes for blankets, sweaters and the outgrown clothes I want to save for hand-me-downs. Other odds and ends are stowed in the chest of drawers and closet, and everything is marked and readily accessible. The garment bags and hatboxes are made of a soft green print that matches the rug, so the room looks nice, too.

Discovered a way to get maximum use out of some awkwardly deep shelves in the pantry. They offer lots of room, but my sets of company-best china had to be set up in tall graduated stacks—eight butter plates atop eight salad plates sitting on eight dinner plates—that sort of thing. Recently, however, I found some dish storage racks of vinyl-coated heavy steel wire that fit the shelves perfectly and hold the china in a much better way. One rack holds 40 pieces of china, yet occupies a space only 19½ inches long by 6 inches high by 10 inches deep.

In addition to china storage racks, Artwire makes other shelves for many different kinds of storage. Another of their racks, called the Shelf Expander, 10 inches long by 5¼ inches high, can fill the normally dead space above canned or packaged goods on a kitchen shelf. You could even use these racks on a coat-closet shelf and put every inch of vertical space to good use.

We set up a nifty storage system for garden tools quite by accident. Tom brought home a new galvanized steel garbage can, but before we could put it to use in the prescribed manner, someone came along and stuck the rake and hoe in it as a temporary resting place. It suddenly occurred to us that a garbage can would be ideal for storing all the garden equipment, so we bought another one plus a roll-around rack to hold it. After filling it with all the long-handled tools, Tom drilled small holes in the side that would hold pegboard hooks so that all the small tools like the trowels and weeders could be hung up on the outside of the can. It may not look beautiful, but the whole works can be rolled out into the garden, and we haven't lost a garden tool all summer.

One storage problem a family always seems to have is for seldom-used or once-a-year trappings like holiday decorations, winter sports gear, painting and heavy housecleaning equipment, playthings that one child has outgrown and the next child is not quite ready for—i.e., semi-dead storage. To take care of all this in our family, we got a set of Sears, Roebuck Masonite Presdwood cases. These sliding-door cases are set in sturdy enameled-steel frames, come in two sizes—54 by 36 inches or 27 by 72 inches. You can stack them vertically or set them side by side to form an efficient storage unit. Ours are red and white in a sort of checkerboard scheme. Neatest arrangement you ever saw for the safekeeping of miscellany.

The duties of any Happy Housekeeper, of course, extend to the housekeeping of the family car, and this raises the subject of storing the necessities for good automobile housekeeping—equipment to clean up the inside of the car quickly after picnics, outings to the beach, weekend trips and other summer drives. Fortunately we have a comparatively spacious glove compartment, so the question was not where to store but what. I stashed away a roll of paper towels, disposable washcloths, a spray can of window cleaner, a good stiff brush, paper garbage bags, a bottle of nonflammable cleaning fluid. No excuse now for sand on the seats and sticky fingerprints on the sills. Oh yes, the road maps—a manila envelope holds them neatly.

In our cellar we had some huge steel storage shelves that held canned goods, liquor, paper towels and other nonperishables that we buy in case lots. Since these shelves are near the outside door, which is almost always open in summer, we decided to enclose them so we could put them under lock. Tom had some plywood sides and doors cut to measure, put them up around the open shelves and created a cupboard. Now we can padlock the door and keep the contents from being a temptation to all who venture by.

The original owners of our comfortable old farmhouse did not equip it with anything so frivolous as a wine cellar, but Tom feels that wherever you put it, even the most modest wine collection should be correctly stored in the proper racks. He found a clever set of separate round aluminum cylinders that lock together and form a honeycomb that can be fitted into almost any space. In fact, you can use them for any type of bottle storage. Made by Invento, the cylinders are available in sets of eight or twelve, in gold or silver aluminum, or black or white plastic. Tom arranged a set of eight white ones on a shelf in a cupboard that was too low and too deep to reach into easily, yet was a perfect place for bottles on their side.

Beautiful "Kohlapuri Chappals"

INDIAN SANDALS

Hand-Made of Water-Buffalo Leather

FOR Women and Men
Men will especially appreciate their own "Kohlapuri Chappals". The traditional foot-gear of the hard-riding Maratha fighters, they are cool, comfortable—and the sturdy leather improves with wear to develop a rich, mellow look that men love.

These famous sandals were originally designed in the town of Kohlapur in the 18th Century. They combine the wonderful freedom and comfort required in a warm climate with the graceful beauty of the loveliest of India. Strong Water-Buffalo leather is worked carefully to give full pliability and long wear. Then it is beautifully embossed. Leather is a rich, deep natural color that looks even more beautiful after wearing a while.

This classic design flatters a woman's feet—is handsome on men. We guarantee you will find "Kohlapuri Chappals" the most comfortable and handsome sandals you have ever worn —or seen. Order in sizes from 5 to 12 for men and women. A remarkable bargain, too. These usually sell at $12 to $15. Our price as direct importers is only $5.95

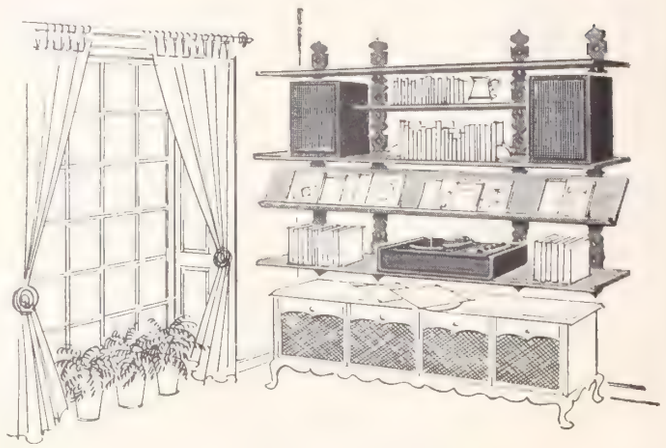
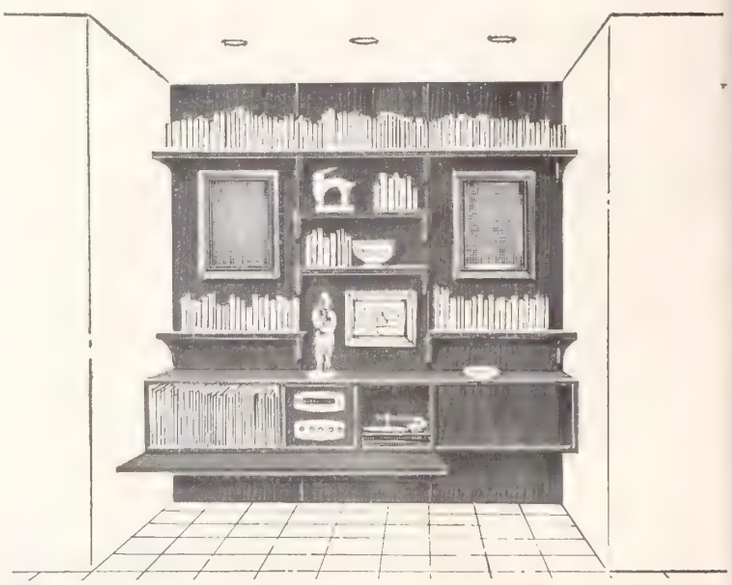
Modular music components

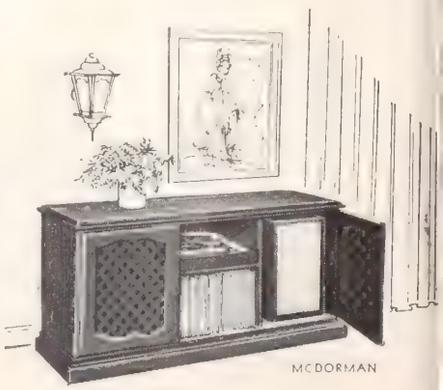
take the guesswork out of assembling a stereo system



Hi-fi components that can be bought separately without enclosing cabinets have always been popular with two groups of people. One includes those who want a system to build into a wall or insert in a cabinet of their own—an antique, perhaps. The other consists of dedicated buffs who love to choose each component individually and to replace it as soon as something better comes along. But everyone who wants built-in music is not a buff, and for the less technically knowledgeable, the selection of tuner, amplifier, preamplifier, turntable and speaker can be perplexing. Now the perplexity has been eliminated by the advent of music modules or "packaged" components—both of which refer to the new preselected combinations of parts, prebalanced at the factory. Today you can buy (depending on the manufacturer) a turntable-amplifier-tuner ensemble contained in one chassis, or a turntable-amplifier and a separate tuner, or separate everything—plus, in every case, two speakers. Like the former unrelated components, these ensembles can be built into a wall or tucked into a cabinet. And since they are most presentable, they can also be put where many people like to keep their music equipment—on open shelves.



The room divider, a small apartment's most useful wall, offers an excellent way of combining stereo, TV, books and storage. Here, the turntable sits side-by-side with a tuner-amplifier module, the speakers are stowed away on upper shelves and TV gets a niche to itself. Music System by Electro-Voice, $675. Divider arrangement of shelves and cabinets by Hardwood House, $1,007.



For an off-the-floor arrangement, you might assemble your modules on an island formed by a long cocktail table. A tuner-amplifier-turntable ensemble with a plastic dust cover could sit between two library cases linked by a lighting valance. Speakers could go in niches over cabinets, records below. Scott music system, $429.90. Founders cases, $130 each. Table, $80.

An attractive music-and-reading center might be devised with wall-hung pilasters to support book, music and magazine shelves. The turntable and amplifier in a walnut module only 2 feet wide would fit on bottom shelf, speakers could sit on top and, for convenience, a record cabinet be placed below. Fisher music system, $269.50. Milling Road shelf arrangement, $652.

A dining L often makes a good home for a music center. In a depth of only 16 inches, you can assemble a composite of shelves, paneling and cabinets to hold a turntable, a tuner resting on an amplifier (the effect is of a single module) and two speakers hung on the paneling like paintings. Voice of Music system, $489.90. Royal System's "Cado" rosewood wall, $1,223.

Music modules will fit nicely into all kinds of cabinets. In a lattice-door credenza of pecan wood, for instance, an amplifier-tuner-turntable ensemble in a walnut chassis can be placed on the central sliding shelf, the speakers in the two end compartments. Music system by KLH, $399.95. Hooker credenza, $134.

Furniture with a future

THE NOMADIC CHEST

Before long, today's young couples may well be known as the on-the-move generation (an average of six dwellings per family has been predicted for their lifetime). Clearly they will need furnishings as ready to move as they are—pieces capable of serving multiple roles in new locations, sturdy in construction, and, at the same time, distinctive in design—the same criteria that govern each of H&G's selections of furniture with a future. This painted-accent credenza is a good example. It has a highly decorative finish—black lacquer with red door panels embellished with silk-screened designs in black-and-gold leaf—yet it would answer a number of workaday needs. Behind the four sliding doors are two adjustable shelves and a center vertical partition—engineering features that provide infinite storage possibilities. Since the chest is finished on the back, it could function beautifully as a low room divider. And it would look equally appropriate in the living-dining room or bedroom of a first apartment, in the foyer of a first house or in the bedroom of a teen-age daughter. Produced by the Lane Company, the credenza is 58 inches long by 26 inches high and comes also in a gold-leaf finish.

A CREDENZA FROM HAMMACHER SCHLEMMER, PHOTOGRAPHED BY MARGERIN

In a living-dining room, the credenza would provide safe, orderly storage for your party punch bowl and other outsize dishes for entertaining. And when you invite friends in for refreshments, you could make use of the top as a buffet.

Beside a bed, the credenza would serve as a generous night stand, might also give visual weight to a wall composition of prints. Behind the sliding doors you might store sweaters and handbags, or if closet space is short, the credenza would make a useful hideaway for bed linens and extra blankets.

In a foyer, you might convert the chest to a music-entertainment center. The turntable and amplifier-tuner would fit in one side, records and/or games in the other. Speakers could be placed on the nearest bookshelves in the living room.

a A family room reflects the comfort and convenience of a well-planned modern home. Here, an extension phone offers a relaxing way to make and take calls while saving countless steps and stairs for everyone.

b Modern, too, is the extension in a teen-ager's room, which can bring the family welcome peace and quiet. It's a fitting reward to a responsible son or daughter.

c A phone that's only a step away from the stove or the morning cup of coffee—that's one of the handiest phones any home can have.

These are only suggested locations. The important point is to have extensions where you need them in your home—to save time and steps for all the family. For a phone in any room, just call your Business Office or ask your telephone man.

How to find a place for everything you own

If you mull over the brute fact that things take up more space in the world than people, it is easy to see why the most critical aspect of any house today is its storage capacity. You can be in only one room at a time, but your possessions, if not severely disciplined, can spread all over a dozen, posing a continual threat to your equanimity. And by some inscrutable law of increase, the more space you have, the more things you have to find space for. Yet space alone will not answer the question of where to put all the things you need or enjoy. For if they are not readily on tap when and where you want them, they might as well be buried in the ground. Finding the most convenient place for everything is the real challenge. And what has been called our recent possession explosion makes the challenge tougher every day.

To get a line on the storage problems our readers find most frustrating, H&G recently quizzed scores of families—families with children and without, families whose homes ranged from city apartments and brand new suburban houses to a venerable mansion 274 years old. The big problem, the majority of our advisors recognized, was not lack of space, but lack of organization of the space they had.

What were the most exasperating things they had to store? Out-of-season clothing headed the list, closely followed by the vacuum cleaner, garden equipment, outdoor furniture, toys, bicycles, luggage, card tables, movie screen and projectors, Christmas decorations. But anything you have to store, we gathered, can be exasperating if you don't have a suitable place for it: books, records, blankets, linens, skis, sleds, the ironing board, the step ladder, and on down to a package of tacks.

"How about the garage?" we asked. "It gets too cluttered," seemed to be the prevailing opinion, "and there's no room left for cars." ("Something should be done about that," we said to ourselves.)

A big surprise came when we asked about the kitchen: "Do you prefer to hide everything behind closed doors—or to keep your pots and pans and staples out in the open?" On this point, our families were split straight down the middle.

Having pinned down the most vexing problems, we have dedicated this issue to solutions. Many are H&G's own inventions for storing the things that plague people the most. For instance, we have worked out three different ways for organizing space you already have—an ordinary minimum clothes closet. You will also discover ingenious ways of capitalizing on space you may not know you have—"found" space under stairs, over a bathtub or surrounding windows.

Drawers and shelves are not the only means for storing silver, china and glass. What about trays? And even if you belong to the school that likes everything in the kitchen hidden behind closed doors, do not overlook the decorative assets of things stored-to-be-seen in other rooms—i.e., on open shelves. Since many of the things you love best serve no other purpose than to be seen (paintings, sculpture, collections, objets d'art), the question of where to store them may seem irrelevant. But there is still the problem of where to put them for your continual enjoyment. Neglected wall space, panels, screens, table tops may supply unexpected answers.

By far the most effectual means of meeting the storage challenge, however, is one that should precede all other efforts. Many of our questionnaire families described this first step as "When in doubt, throw it out." If you need encouragement, read Aubrey Menen's philosophy on page 90.

H&G ANSWERS CURRENT STORAGE PROBLEMS

Bees and squirrels, faunal specialists tell us, have no storage problems. Innately clever and beautifully organized, they have a place for every acorn, every jot of honey. What, then, is wrong with even brighter bipeds? Nothing at all, thinks H&G, that a little know-how can't fix. We discovered, for instance, that two of the things our reader-consultants found most troublesome—cleaning and sewing equipment—can be telescoped into a neat package in a nook no larger than 7 by 2½ feet. The accouterments of a home office can be tucked into the corner of a guest room and more than enough sheet music and instruments to keep a whole family glued to the metronome can be packed into a single wall. Finding a place for extra clothing and for garden equipment are other common enigmas which have been solved brilliantly by people who put their minds to it. So have the special demands of gift-wrapping, Christmas-ornament storage and space-consuming hobbies such as photography and woodworking. You can get twice as much into any given closet once it is organized with enough shelves, enough partitions. And you can find exactly the right place for everything from wine to a safe if you take advantage of some of the new specially designed furniture or scan your house for space that lies fallow (the top of a lofty closet, the corner of a hall) and cultivate it by inserting a cunning built-in. On the next eleven pages you will see how numerous families have already done so by dint of practical inventions you can easily adapt to fit the idiosyncrasies of your own special needs.

Repeatedly, our questionnaire turned up a common bugaboo —cleaning equipment. H&G has designed a special closet to take care of it

About 17 square feet of kitchen floor space can end the cleaning-closet, ironing-board, sewing-machine struggle in a wonderfully handy, compact way. H&G's solution is a tandem cleaning closet and sewing center (see the latter in toto on page 71) organized with waxworks precision. The ironing board, mounted on a let-down bracket, is chained up, when out of use, to one of the double doors. Into compartments on the other door, a shampoo-polisher and a portable vacuum fit like gloves. The heavy-duty vacuum cleaner stands in an amply tall niche next to a swing-out cupboard for supplies, behind which is another tier of shelves, exactly one-can deep. Even with taller containers and bottles allotted a special shelf, there is still room for a bit of dead storage—a place for one of the family suitcases. General Electric appliances.

Wanted: a place for typewriter, telephone and files—the nucleus of a home office

REENS

An excellent answer to this need in Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Small's apartment is a built-in desk cantilevered from bookshelves in a corner of their guest room plus a mobile file cabinet with a pull-out typewriter shelf. (See the rest of the apartment on page 96.) Students of art history, the Smalls do their homework here, keep their art library on adjustable glass shelves that can be shifted and added to as the collection grows. A similar arrangement of desk top and file cabinet might be tucked into the corner of a kitchen or family room. Interior design by Paul Lester Wiener and Ala Damaz.

Wanted: by families with music-studying children—a "hold-all" for sheet music, instruments, record player

Cellist-conductor Alfred Wallenstein needed the same thing on a grand scale, and the lifetime of music packed into one wall of his bed-sitting room offers a guide to satisfying more modest amateur needs. Behind sliding doors, hundreds of scores, records and tapes, all alphabetized and indexed, keep company with his tape recorder, record player and two precious cellos. Everything except the cellos slips out on sliding shelves; the TV swivels, and with the doors closed, no one would know that the series of simple linen-covered panels hide what amounts to a wall-hung music room.

All our reader-consultants had difficulty storing special-purpose and out-of-season clothing

Shoes, sweaters, handbags and other articles small in size but great in number produce no end of clutter unless they are well regimented in space of their own. Such space often exists, unrealized, around doors and windows. In Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Regensburg's bed-sitting room the window was framed with shelves and sliding trays for shoes, gloves, lingerie, make-up and the air conditioner. To mask this hideaway, folding and sliding doors were covered in the same [illegible]ed cotton used throu[illegible]ut. The auxiliary wardrobe closed looks like a gaily upholstered breakfront. Designer: Howard Perry Rothberg. For other closet ideas, see pages 72-73.

Green-thumb families had more than a little trouble finding a place for their garden equipment

The alfresco potting shed in Mrs. Hortense Miller's Laguna, Calif., garden should inspire a remedy. Designed as an extension of the house, the partially roofed, cement-paved quadrangle is bounded by a storage shed at one end (seen from the house, the shed wall is a handsome mosaic mural: H&G, April, 1965, page 168) and protective panels along each side—some of them of heavy plate glass with sailcloth curtains to keep migrant birds from committing hara-kiri. A box-shelved counter holds pots, baskets, fertilizers, planters and a sink; opposite it, ladder shelves make a home for resting plants. The "shed" is also a paint-repair shop, designed as such by Donald Estep.

THE EXTRA DEMANDS OF DO-IT-YOURSELFERS

Many families had hobbies and habits that needed specialized storage

Gift-wrapping, a hobby with endless amplifications, takes place in Mrs. Richard Pidduck's Oxnard, Calif., house in a special center, opposite page, that might be adapted to any nook you can bridge with a tier of shelves. Floor-to-ceiling shelves hold wide papers on rollers, spools of ribbon on a dowel, big candy jars full of tiny ornaments and plastic containers for costume jewelry, shells, dried foliage—just about anything to make a gift gayer. The plastic boxes on top shelves are sacred to Christmas ornaments—always a stickler to store, and stowed away thus, comfortingly safe.

Sewing does not require a whole room to itself, pleasant as that might be. H&G's sewing alcove, right, measures only 7 by 2½ feet, holds a counter and cabinet in which the sewing machine can be hidden away on a swing-up shelf. Thread and shears are hung on a pegboard panel, and near it, down from the cleaning closet door (page 65), the ironing board waits for action. Singer sewing machine, General Electric TV and iron, Hamilton Cosco chair, Rid-Jid ironing board, Wiss shears, Tensor lamp.

A tiny darkroom installed in a closet provides Martin Wilmarth of Colusa, Calif., with a U-shaped counter for developing trays, sinks, enlarger, chemicals, et al.

A collector's hoard of silver is stashed away in Mr. and Mrs. David Evins' apartment in a special cupboard that offers two bright ideas for any silver storage: Pacific Silvercloth nontarnish lining on all surfaces; loops on the door to hold flatware. Designed by Mrs. Truman Parker Handy of Thedlow, Inc.

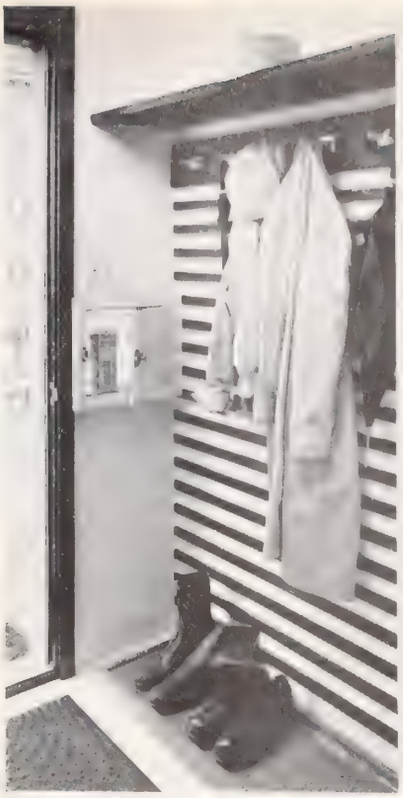
Home workshops don't necessarily call for garage or basement space. This one, a corner of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Shorr's guest room, makes a good show of new tools and, on the wall, old ones.

For shopping information, turn to page 128

Shallow shelves and vertical partitions do the trick on all four walls of a dressing room—Mrs. John Winterbotham's in Houston, Tex. Neat compartments hold bags, shoes in plastic boxes, hats. Lower drawers take care of lingerie, gloves and accessories.

Metal shelves from an Army surplus store, painted and installed at appropriate levels for shoes, plastic boxes and wicker hampers, make a dandy closet for textile designer Jack Lenor Larsen. Space, screened by plastic panels, was stolen from bedroom.

WELL-ORGANIZED WARDROBES



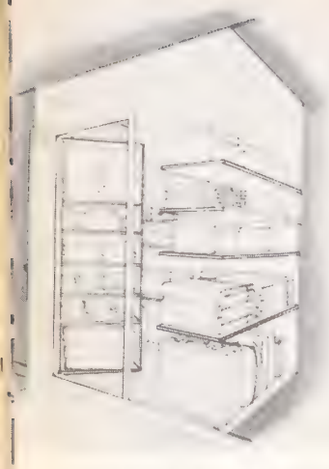
More than a quorum wished they knew how to organize their clothes closets

Ready-made plastic pull-out bins, some shallow, some deep, all light enough for a 6-year-old to manipulate, step up the capacity of twin closets for two little girls. Since clothes are only a fraction of a child's total belongings, juvenile closets are more conducive to order if divided, as these are, into thirds: hanging space, shelf space, drawer space.

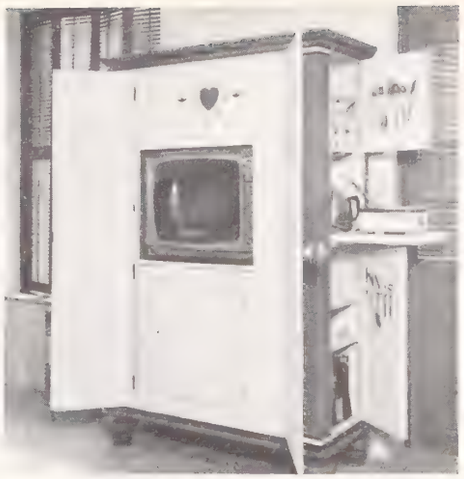
A hall closet can take care of more than guests' coats. In Mr. and Mrs. Clint Thompson's foyer in Modesto, Calif., a closet is fitted with not only hanging space, but game shelves and drawers, compartments for folding chairs and tables and, neat as a vest pocket, a mail slot.

Outdoor clothes come to rest in a nook next to the pass-through milk delivery box in Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kuzon's house in Longmeadow, Mass. A metal-lined trough holds boots, decorative slats protect wall against wet raincoats and umbrellas.

Old-fashioned closets were ripped out in Mr. and Mrs. Lester Dundes' bedroom and replaced by new hanging and shelf space—much of it designed for shoes. With the new storage area masked by sleek folding doors, the room is better looking, infinitely richer in storage efficiency—in the same space. Designer: Inman Cook.



One way to disguise the safe that every home needs is to surround it with carefully dimensioned pigeonholes for clothing: ankle-deep shoe shelves, closely spaced glass shelves that keep each shirt in distinguishable view. For another way to screen a safe, see page 75.



Eye-level shelves for shoes, an overhead compartment for out-of-season storage boxes and jacket cases stacked below jacket-length hanging section makes the most of a closet built in "found" space in the corner of a hallway outside the Charles Regensburgs' bed-sitting room (see page 68). A full-length hanging section at left holds coats and dresses.

A ladder with velvet upholstered rungs, pretty as can be, and nonslippery, makes overhead storage in Mrs. John Winterbotham's dressing room easily accessible.

Linen and towels can be stashed away speedily on the shelves of a swinging cupboard installed on the back or front of a door. It might be the door of the laundry, of a bathroom or of a housekeeper's closet like this one for out-of-season bed gear and the family luggage.

Everything to pamper your overnight guests—TV, bar, hot plate and all the apparatus for morning coffee and midnight tea—can be tucked away in a gaily painted cabinet that, when closed, looks like an elegant armoire. Designer: Edward M. Benesch.

The spice of the moment, label well-forward, is always within arm's grasp of an island cooking center when kept in a little cabinet extended from the ventilating duct and hood.

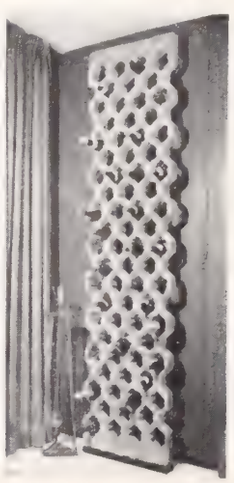
A PLACE FOR EVERYTHING

Here are twenty-one solutions for where-to-put-it problems. Some capitalize on found space, some on astutely designed furniture

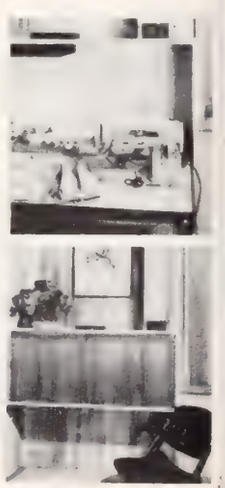
Silver—a galaxy of it—will find a fine refuge in a slate-topped chest with four drawers (two of them lock) and sets of removable trays covered in nontarnish cloth. 10 inches high. Basic-Witz.

Luggage is always ready for packing when it reposes in a countertop cabinet built in under your bedroom windows. The cabinet has a lift-up door and balances a second cabinet that hides the radiator.

Bath supplies and towels in a small bathroom may have no place to go but up. But don't overlook the possibility of building a cabinet over the tub. Only feasible, of course, for a nonshowering family.



Luggage can be hoisted to the unused upper reaches of a closet and kept well out of your way with an old-fashioned drying rack attached to the ceiling. Pulleys and ropes bring the bags down just as they would the laundry.



Toys can be kept out from underfoot with a hold-all cabinet designed for Junior. This one has three components (you can buy them separately): a mobile base, a section for large toys, a section for books, games and records. F.A.O. Schwarz.

A gun cabinet to make a hunter happy (and put his wife at ease) has the look of an armoire, locks as tight as a drum, keeps its armory rust- and dust-free. Bassett.

Wine, pleasant thing that it is, often encroaches on closet space. Here, it marches up the wall in a terra-cotta rack that makes a dashing dining room panel.

The sewing machine, ah, often a bête noire, can be permanently anchored to the pull-down door of a wall-hung sewing cabinet. Machine and accouterments tilt out of sight, below, in a jiffy

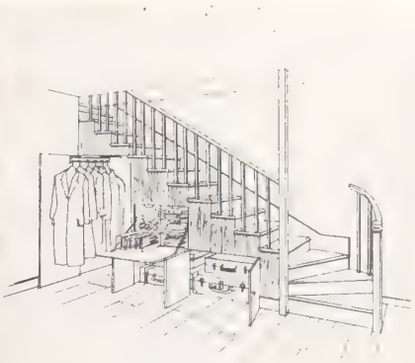
Out-of-season and in-season clothes can double up in a roomy closet fitted with a revolving hanging system. Clothes are hung on a circular rod attached to a shelf and fitted with the kind of riders used for traverse curtains. Nothing crushes. Luggage above, of course.

Outdoor paraphernalia—rubbers, boots, even fishing poles—stows away neatly in a mud room "window seat." Adjacent closet has pull-out bins for sweaters, scarves, mittens.



Valuables demand a safe, but not necessarily a whopper. This little one, of steel, is designed to fit into a wall niche, and is all the safer for being hidden with a swing-out painting mounted on hinges. By Meilink.

Toys, games, hobby materials, what-have-you are naturals for storage cubes, some open, some with drawers, some with pull-out shelves, that can be massed on a steel base for composite storage. Apart, they make good tables. Chesapeake-Siegel-Land.

Plug-in appliances stored in a cupboard of their own next to a good working surface with outlets leave your kitchen counters uncluttered. General Electric small appliances, refrigerator and freezer.

Luggage and clothes (in season or out) can be polished off by pre-planning or remodeling in a house with a winding staircase. "Found" space below stairs is boxed in, fitted with a pull-out hanging rack, luggage cabinets and, above them, a drop-front cupboard with plastic drawers.

Liquor and household bills will live together happily in a tall chest of walnut burl. Top "drawers" are really doors to a spirits cabinet (it locks), and a floor-level section is fitted out with filing partitions. Baker.

Towel and shower cap can be kept within a wet bather's reach in a little glass-doored niche of their own—right in the stall.

A gift-wrapping center comp into one drawer of an armoire consists, very simply, of spindles for ribbon and cord, a compartment for flat papers. Rolled papers go into cabinet above. Designed by Jay Dorf.

PRACTICAL FUN, A WALL PUNCTUATED BY SPECIAL-PURPOSE STORAGE

A right-angled adobe wall in the Alexander Girards' house in Santa Fe, N. M., screens three sides of the kitchen and offers its back to the breakfast room and a hall. Left to right: You can peer into a shadowbox display of bottles, take your pick of cigarettes from a specially dimensioned, two-pack-deep cabinet, then (if you are Mrs. Girard), open a door to choose paper cups and plates for the picnic basket. Around the corner opposite the breakfast room: a little cubby for the toaster and coffee grinder.

THE DEMOUNTABLE STORAGE WALL

Assembled to fit your special needs, shelf systems look built-in, but can be moved at the drop of a screwdriver. Today you can choose from among four types

A POLE-HUNG OR PLUG-IN SYSTEM, above, designed by George Nelson, is especially useful as a room divider since its parts are finished on all sides. The shelves are supported by extruded aluminum poles held in spring tension, which may be set up wherever you want them, and the brackets, walnut shelves and cabinets are easily installed with the special wrench that comes with the system. Incorporated in an arrangement that screens a living room's dining area is a plastic-laminate-topped desk which is one of the system's standard components. And the extension arm lamp in white enameled steel is one of several available lighting fixtures. The chest of drawers might take care of extra desk supplies as well as party games and accessories, and the small cabinet could store glasses for use at the drop-front bar. Omni of Charlotte, Mich.

WALL-HUNG SHELVES AND CABINETS, left, now come with their own demountable paneled walls, and to compound the architectural look you can continue the paneling on another wall of the room. The rosewood components are suspended from floor-to-ceiling tongue-and-groove rosewood panels screwed to four horizontal wood furring strips which have been nailed to the wall. Panels are bordered with oblique rows of holes into which dowels o components are slipped and remain firmly fixed. In addition to the flat shelves, sliding-door cabinets, stereo cabinet and drawer sections in this living room arrangement, the system also offers tilted shelves, drop-front cabinets, drop-leaf dining tables, a bar cabinet, a mirrored dressing-table cabinet and stereo speakers—all in rosewood, teak, oak or walnut. System Cado imported from Denmark by Royal System, Inc.

THE NEWEST STACKABLE STORAGE, above, is wholly freestanding, yet it looks as if it had been designed as an integral part of the room since the cabinets and shelf units are scaled to line up with the door and window lintels in the average house or apartment. In a library-guest-room, two types of cane-door cabinets stacked on solid-door cabinets might store all the guest blankets and linens plus extra blankets for other rooms. The long daybed, as well as the chest of drawers and desk, is one of the available components; so is the spacer with concealed lighting that bridges the upper cabinets and reinforces the built-in look. In addition to a variety of stackable oak storage, this system includes furniture to match or blend: chairs, beds, tables, buffets. Patterns 14 by Founders Furniture.

THE FRAME-SUPPORTED SYSTEM, below, combines the freestanding quality of stackable storage with the room-divider possibilities of pole-hung arrangements. The components may be finished on all sides, and all but the largest rest on the crosspieces of ladder-like frames that need no connection to wall or ceiling. In a teen-ager's bedroom (or any small room) one wall lined with components can take care of every possible storage and furniture need leaving the rest of the space clear and uncluttered. Among the available components, which come in four walnut finishes, are a Murphy fold-up bed and a two-door clothes closet. Sliding doors and drawer fronts may also be ordered in a cho of seven painted finishes. All screw holes are pre-drilled so modules can be assembled with only a screwdriver. Hardwood House.

STARTING WITH AN ORDINARY MINIMUM CLOTHES CLOSET,
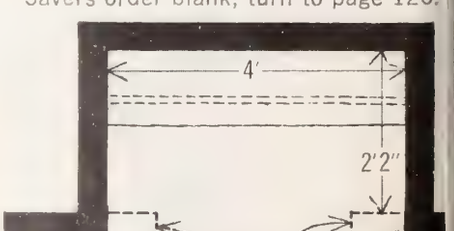
H&G DESIGNS

THREE SPECIAL-PURPOSE CLOSETS

So many of the families who answered our questionnaire suspected their storage woes might be solved by better use of space they already had that we decided to show just how much you can pack into one small, well-organized closet. For our demonstration, we picked an ordinary clothes closet, roughly 2 by 4 feet—the kind you see by the hundreds in today's apartments and ready-built houses. And by making the most of the ingenious fittings and containers you can buy at notions departments and hardware stores, we organized the interior three different ways, each specially designed to take care of things that give most families the most trouble.

Our first closet consolidates in one spot all the papers, household records and reference books essential to family business that are too often dispersed all over the house. Our second design provides a home for the outsize objects—big punch bowls, jumbo salad bowls, card tables, folding chairs et al.—that everyone needs for parties, but that rarely fit into conventional cabinets and closets. Our third plan, designed for decorative accessories, was inspired by our conviction that you will enjoy your objets d'art and decorative accents far more if you can send some into temporary retirement now and then and bring out alternatives you haven't looked at for a while.

Although each closet was built with a different technique, each plan is based on unvarying principles of satisfactory storage. The first requirement is accessibility—an arrangement that will give you an immediate view of what is where and let you get at any item without having to fumble blindly or take out nine things to reach the tenth. Since the least accessible place in any closet is the space above door-height, this hard-to-see, hard-to-reach area should be saved for seldom-used objects and—in the interests of safety—things that are light in weight. Doorbacks, on the other hand, rate high in accessibility, so in all three of our special closets we put them to maximum use, taking care to use racks that will keep objects in place when the door is in motion. An efficient closet must also be well lighted and easy to clean. Lining materials should be spongeable, and the over-all design should eliminate dust-catching corners and space pockets where little things can lose themselves.



Since there are no standard sizes for closets, the dimensions of yours may differ a few inches from our basic space, but our plans can easily be adapted by simple arithmetic, and carried out by a reasonably competent handyman. Whatever your dimensions, however, or whatever variations you make to fit your own special needs, you cannot dispense with one common tool, a tape measure. A careless shopper can hem up an overlong curtain, but trimming guessed sizes of lumber or steel is not so easy. When your aim is to fit the most things into the least space, precision pays off.

1. A FAMILY RECORD CENTER

To take care of the quantities of business correspondence, deeds, contracts, plans and receipted bills that accumulate in a large and busy household, we designed a home office center. Since our plan included pull-out drawers requiring wide-open accessibility, we started by removing the short stretches of wall at the front of the basic closet and substituting double doors. The backs of these and the upper half of the back wall were lined with cork tile for pin-ups, and the interior was filled wall-to-wall with a combination of ¾-inch pine shelves and commercial steel filing drawers, arranged in setback layers. To designate the various sections, we painted them in a series of H&G Colors.

The Fern shelf above the 4-inch toe space at the floor of the closet holds magazines, travel material, out-of-town phone books. On the next level, painted Green Gage, are lockable legal-width file drawers for important papers and correspondence plus pigeonholes for storing rolled-up blueprints and charts.

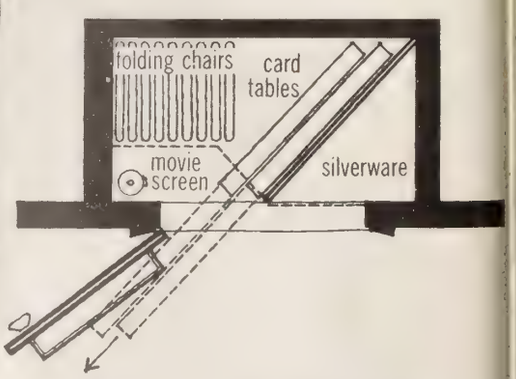
At this point the setback begins with a white Formica shelf, 8 inches deep, useful for parking papers while filing or for consulting directories. Above that is a row of shallow drawers in Bluebell, raised on a 2½-inch base so they can be opened without disturbing anything lying on the shelf. In these can be kept extra supplies of pencils, clips, scratch pads, etc. Flush with the Bluebell drawers is a pair of triple-bin files in Aquamarine Blue for catalogues, fabric samples, medical and school records. From here up, Green Gage shelves, set back a few more inches, hold business machines, ledgers, a row of House & Garden Magazine Savers. Electric pencil sharpener, Sumit adding machine from Hammacher Schlemmer; cork tiles by Dodge Cork Co. For H&G Magazine Savers order blank, turn to page 126.

Above: Removing 8-inch wall on each side of door increased accessibility, especially essential for the file drawers.

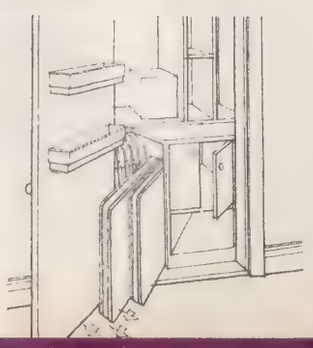
Right: Cross section of plan shows how shallow drawers, pull-out files and book compartments are set back above working counter. The ceiling lighting is fluorescent.

WORLD ATLAS

2. A STOREROOM FOR PARTY GEAR



When all the party props contained in this standard closet come out of hiding, they can fill a room, but after the party is over, they slip right back into storage like a Chinese puzzle. The key to the puzzle is a pair of diagonal tracks in which to slide card tables, making them far more accessible than if they were stored against the back of the closet, and at the same time saving space. There is room behind the tables for eight folding chairs and room in front for other things, yet any item can be removed without disturbing any other.



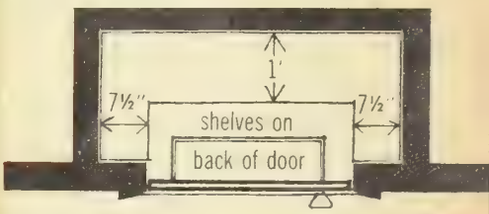
We started by lining the basic closet and the back of the door with a smooth black-and-white vinyl-finished cotton—easy to wipe clean, easy for the closet's closely spaced contents to slide by. Inside the closet we built a series of shelves and compartments and one double-door cupboard, each earmarked for a different kind of hard-to-store party gear. Color-slide and motion picture projectors go into the niche at the bottom to the right of the table tracks and tall silver serving pieces into the cupboard, which was lined with Pacific Silvercloth. A projection screen stands left of the door, in front of the folding chairs.

The upper shelves are recessed to make a ledge to work on and to leave room, when the door is closed, for the doorback racks of party glassware. These light and durable troughs, ideal for our purpose, are actually plastic planters sold in hardware stores.

The large upper compartment holds eight folding tray tables, a stationary drop-front box for coasters and ashtrays, a tall ceramic centerpiece. Narrow bins next door are designed for reels of film, dinner candles, paper and cocktail napkins. To the right of these there is room for two round 45-inch folding table tops. A punch bowl and big salad bowl go on the highest shelf.

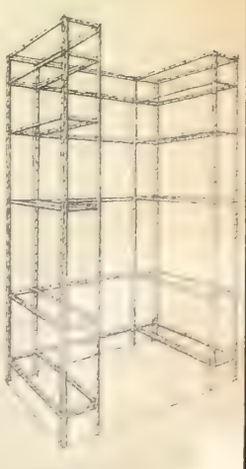
Above: By starting with the chair in the middle, you can pull out or put back all eight without disturbing the tables.

Left: When the door is wide open, each of the card tables slides back easily onto its track.



3. A CACHE FOR DECORATIVE ACCESSORIES

A periodic change of pictures, objets d'art, small rugs and sofa pillows can do wonders to wake up a room, but it also poses the problem of where to put the things that are due for a vacation. More than you might ever guess can be packed into one small closet if the space is organized along the lines of our decorative accessories wardrobe. Instead of building closet-deep shelves on which small objects would have to be placed one behind the other (making many difficult to see and reach), we planned a miniature walk-in arrangement of U-shaped shelves that keep every object in immediate reach and allow space for equally accessible doorback shelves. Together U and door shelves nearly equal the shelf area of the usual slab-shelf linen closet, but easily triple the convenience.



The basic closet and its door we lined with a vinyl embossed fabric in light beige. Inside the closet we constructed a frame of slotted steel strips that come packaged with nuts, bolts and corner plates like a giant Erector Set, and take only a pair of pliers, a hack saw and a plan to put together. On this frame we placed shelves of pine, painted H&G's Cyclamen. We put rims on door shelves for safety's sake.

The 4-inch space beneath the bottom shelf is designed specifically for rolled-up rugs, and the bottom shelf itself is reserved for Christmas decorations, stowed in a straw trunk. The second shelf holds flower containers; the third, candlesticks, covered containers and ornaments. Small planters, cigarette boxes and ashtrays go on the fourth, lacquer boxes of candles on the fifth and tray tables and small pillows on the very top. Door racks hold games, puzzles and lighter-weight accessories. Fabric by Gilford, Inc., shelves from the Door Store, steel framing by Dexion, Inc.

Right: Slotted steel frame was made from a do-it-yourself nut-and-bolt kit.

Left: Included in kit are corner plates that brace the structure in both directions at every joint.

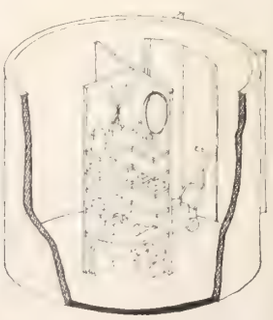
Main house at right and carport at left have the same type of roof, the same materials, so they look almost like one continuous building.

Architects often complain that a prospective client's first remark on walking into an astoundingly beautiful house is likely to be something as banal as "Where is the broom closet?" The fact is that the most arresting qualities of architecture—the shape and flow of space, the counter-play of materials and textures, the framing of views—can be enjoyed to the fullest only after it becomes evident that storage and utilities have been well taken care of. A dramatic example is a house that architect Mark Hampton designed for a man (it would be equally appropriate for a young couple) on a lake shore at Lake Wales, Fla. Every partition in the house and every wall that is not glass is, in effect, a storage wall. In addition, there is a separate little building designed exclusively for storage. The effectiveness of these arrangements is stepped up further still by the philosophy of the man of the house who believes in divesting himself without delay of every unnecessary object, even to discarding every newspaper the minute it has been read. In his house, where clutter is unknown, there is nothing to distract you from appreciating its beauty.



The well-ordered character of the house starts with the basic structural design. Architect Hampton used a simple, black-painted steel frame to support the roof so that the walls—mainly of glass interspersed with rich panels of teak and short stretches of cast brick—could be lighter in construction, serving almost like curtains sheltered by the broad overhang of the roof. It is a small house (often the most difficult to keep uncluttered), consisting of only three rooms plus a bath totaling 1,300 square feet. But the plan is a fascinating composition of straight lines and curves: a 56-foot-long rectangle bisected into two main areas and punctuated by a half-moon conversation area in the living room (see previous page), a round kitchen, a half-moon bathroom and a half-moon patio outside the bathroom. The separate storage house is a complete round and the separate guest house is sheltered by a high circular wall. These divisions create a delightful variety of three-dimensional spaces that seem to change continually as you move from one to the other.

Storage is adroitly placed where it is most useful

Instead of being dispersed into scattered closets and cabinets, all the storage space (indicated by yellow on plan, opposite page) is consolidated into a few large walls plus the separate storage house. The partition dividing the living room and the bedroom is a two-way storage wall, 14 feet long, that includes enough shelves, drawers and cupboards on each side to store practically everything needed in that half of the house. On the living room side are table linens, china, glass and silver plus, in the center section, all the heating, cooling and electronic filtering equipment for the house. (The living room also has a tier of open shelves for books.) The bedroom side houses music system components as well as drawers for fold-up clothes. Suits and jackets hang in a 16-foot-long storage wall on another side of the bedroom which is built out 2 feet from the house wall to free as much floor space as possible within the room itself. The round kitchen and the half-moon bathroom are lined with under-counter storage cabinets that curve around in easy-to-reach fashion. The 16-foot-diameter storage house (a version of the family warehouse first prophesied by H&G in January, 1961) is tucked under the roof of the carport, below left, and used for keeping all kinds of cumbersome possessions from cluttering up the main house and grounds. In the center is a forked wall, below right, with separate shelved cubicles that organize the contents into different lots, but plenty of room has been left for walking around it. The two smaller cubicles store gardening and hardware gear and the undivided front section houses large pieces of gardening equipment such as the wheelbarrow, the lawn mower and big power tools.

PLANS BY N. SIEGEL

ARCHITECT: Mark Hampton
LOCATION: Lake Wales, Fla.
SIZE: House, 1300 square feet
Guest house, 400 square feet

In the far corner of the living-dining room, above, a wall of open walnut shelves for books plus a writing desk create a small study area. Adjacent wall of translucent blue glass panels gives softness to the indoor light. The pool just inside the long wall of clear glass extends to the adjoining bedroom, is lined with blue glass mosaic and cast brick.

Walnut-faced storage wall separates bedroom, right, from living-dining room and includes both closets and tiers of drawers for clothing. Drawer pulls are brass ship's cleats. An outsize platform bed placed dramatically in center of room like an island is sum of furniture. Pecan ceiling and sweep of wall-to-wall carpet unify bedroom and living room.

Counter-height walnut cabinets in the round kitchen enclose two refrigerators, the range and a sink. Cooking top is recessed in the black Alberene countertop. Copper exhaust hood adds a gleam of contrast. Wedge-shaped blue skylight over sink lets in a stream of outdoor light.

Walnut cabinets line at least one wall of every room and store everything where it is used

A second source of constant delight is the warmth and richness of the interior materials: narrow-strip pecan on the ceiling from one end of the house to the other, walnut paneling and doors on all the storage walls, steps of black marble and walnut leading down to the conversation pit in the living room, a copper hood for the living room fireplace, black slate floors in the kitchen and bathroom and creamy wall-to-wall carpeting in the other rooms.

The house also enjoys remarkable views. Glass panel walls across the entire back of the house frame spectacular vistas of strange, twisted oaks festooned with Spanish moss, and beyond them, a wide sweep of the lake. At night when outdoor lighting floods the oaks, they look like exotic sculptures. Indoors, just inside the rear glass wall, a shallow pool shared by the living room and the bedroom catches the sparkle of both the sunshine by day and the lighting by night.

You leave the house with an indelible impression of serenity. The combination of well-ordered design and superb storage facilities has eliminated the need for all the little tables, lamps and oddments that so often clutter indoor spaces and inner states of mind. By peeling away all superfluous paraphernalia, a peaceable kingdom has been created—an environment that provides enduring inspiration for a free, uncomplicated manner of living.

At one end of the bedroom, carpeted steps lead down to a sliding glass door that opens onto the grounds at the back of the house overlooking the lake. Piled with cushions, the narrow, lower-level strip of the room is a pleasant spot to read or catch early morning sun. Ceiling-hung, adjustable lamp over island bed eliminates clutter of bedside table.

Walnut-faced curve of cabinets in the half-moon bathroom stores towels and bulky medical supplies, also provides a camouflage for the water tank of the toilet. Round tub lined with blue glass mosaic is sunk into the black slate floor. Sliding glass door opens into the bathroom's own walled, private patio, but for extra privacy there is a wall-wide curtain.

Circular walls around guest house create quarter-round courts at front and back.

You enter the guest house through tall black-painted double doors that swing open like gates.

Round, lakeside terrace at back of house is sheltered by trees and the walls enclosing house.

The guest house, too, is divided by a storage wall

About 50 feet down the slope from the main house toward the edge of the lake stands the guest house—a completely private retreat behind high, circular walls. Entering the gates, you come first into a tiny pebbled forecourt. A sliding glass door directly ahead leads into the house itself. As in the main house, the plan is a rectangle (28 feet long in this case and curved at the ends) divided into a bed-sitting room and a bath-dressing room by a storage wall that houses all the essentials for both rooms. On the bedroom side are open shelves for books, a radio and decorative objects plus a small kitchenette screened by sliding doors. On the bathroom side are linen storage shelves and abundant hanging space for clothes. The back of the house, walled completely with glass panels, opens onto a round sunning terrace overlooking the lake. To give a sense of greater space to the fairly small quarters, both the bedroom and the bathroom are carpeted in a continuous flow of blue wall-to-wall carpet that repeats the clear hue of the lake outside. All this painstaking attention to detail pays off in the obvious pleasure it gives to the guests who stay there. Within the high walls of this small round, private enclosure they find every possible comfort they could need plus a simplicity and peace as refreshing on a holiday as a dip in the lake outside.

A 4-by-4-foot shower lined with black marble, above, is set at one end of the storage wall dividing bathroom and bedroom. The curving wall of cast brick along opposite side of the bathroom, right, is filled in with a 16-foot walnut cabinet topped with a dressing table counter.

HOW TO CLEAN THE SQUARE

A foolproof means of attaining a life free of clutter

by Aubrey Menen

I once read in a scientific journal that two research workers had taken a day-old baby and hung it from a horizontal bar: that is, they had folded its fingers around the bar and waited to see what would happen. The baby hung on for an hour, dangling by its arms without any signs of discomfort or fatigue. The scientists, I gathered, thought that this proved something about evolution, since freshly born apes can do the same thing. The scientists, having unprized the baby from the bar, next put a small object in its fist. It held onto this for I do not remember how many hours. Again, the scientists thought this very anthropoid. Had I been present I could have put them right. Hanging onto things is not ape-like; it is human-like, and a most deplorable trait.

The baby in this experiment hung onto a bar. But I know an actor who hung onto his little toe. He was a handsome man, and very fond of everything to do with himself. Unfortunately, while playing the chief role in T. S. Eliot's "Murder in the Cathedral," he poisoned his foot on a shoe-nail. When he was told that all would be well if he had his little toe amputated, he fell into a nervous crisis. The ingenious surgeon, who knew a great deal about actors, promised him that after the operation he could have his little toe back, preserved in spirits in a glass jar. The crisis passed, the toe came off and my friend kept it on his dressing table, for years, and for all I know, still does.

Mr. Robert Harris (for that was the actor's name) often told the story of his toe, but he refused to be laughed at. He maintained that everybody disliked throwing personal things away—love letters, for example. It was just that he loved his little toe quite much, if not more, than any woman in his life, so he kept it. He insisted I must have the same weakness.

In fact, I had. In my early years of authorship, I used to write long and, I fancied, brilliant letters to my publisher. It was during what is known cynically among writers as the honeymoon period, when an author thinks his publisher is doing him a favor by printing his books and the publisher does all he can to keep up the illusion by paying the writer practically no money at all. My own publishers had just issued a fat volume of the letters that Thomas Wolfe had written to them. I imagined my own being preserved in their vaults in a fireproof box, to be opened when I died.

It happened that one of my letters came back to me. A kindly editor thought it was so good I might like to turn it into an essay. Stamped across the top of it in letters an inch high were the words KEEP ONE YEAR. I was hurt: I was insulted. I wrote an even more brilliant but bitter letter back. An embarrassed editor explained that the cost of storage in New York was rising steadily. I had not been to New York, I knew no Americans. For quite a while after that incident I envisaged them as ruthless Vandals, destroying the finer products of a civilization they did not understand in order to save a dollar. After that, I wrote fewer letters, and I kept copies.

I have just been reading them. The University of Boston, where space, presumably, is cheaper than in New York, wants to keep them and my other papers. But my publishers had been doing me a service. Most of the letters seem more trivial than Mr. Harris' little toe: I have been doing a lot of burning.

A lot, but not enough. While I am not a Conserver of the first water like Mr. Harris, I am not a dedicated Disposer. But I admire those who are. I admire, above all, Thomas De Quincey, not only because in the "Confessions of an English Opium-Eater" he wrote the finest essay in the English language, but also because of what he did with the other pieces he wrote. He was poor. He lived in one room, in lodging houses. Here, he would write, day in and day out, pausing, I imagine, only to eat some opium. He would cover sheet after sheet of the rather thick writing paper of the time, tying the result into bundles. The bundles he stored in various nooks and on the furniture. Soon all the nooks were used and all the furniture covered, even the bed. He would then with magnificent calm, leave the room, lock the door, and taking the key with him, disappear into another part of the city, never to return. He would also leave the rent unpaid, thus making sure that his enraged landlady would destroy his writings more certainly than flood, fire or tornado. Yet the few papers he saved, stuffing them into his greatcoat pocket as he left, have made him immortal. De Quincey, to me, is a great man of the spirit, as great as St. Francis of Assisi who insisted on giving away all his possessions before being received into a holy life, including, to his Bishop's embarrassment, the underdrawers he happened to be wearing at the time—another great Disposer, but just a thought too theatrical. I prefer De Quincey.

How much happier we should all be if we had a Quincean touch! We may not have essays to leave behind us, but we all have ideas. Take our notions of right and wrong. We learn these first at our mother's knee and in talks with our fathers. We learn to be faithful and true; we learn the virtues of the married state and the importance of raising a united family. We learn to be responsible with money and not to waste it in idle pleasures. Yet, how often it happens that when we come to man's estate we find that Pop has ruined himself with a floozie and Mom, in revenge, has had a lengthy affair with a stockbroker? I choose these feet of clay at random: There are innumerable others.

When this happens, do we rub our hands, square our shoulders, and say, "Plainly everything I learned from my parents as a child is claptrap. I must do some entirely fresh thinking myself." Not at all. We store up our tender memories in some mental attic. When our own children come to us for advice, we do not say "To begin with, my son, your grandmother was a trollop." Instead we resort to the attic, dust off some lumber, and hand it, meltingly, to our trusting offspring. Thus the miseries of the fathers are handed on to the third and fourth generation, all for want of a mental turnout and spring-clean.

But that cluttered attic is very dangerous. In middle age our skulls contract. The sutures close, irrevocably. Our brain-box cannot expand any more, and if it is already full of lumber, we shall have no more new ideas. That is why the old are so tedious. They do not want to be endlessly reminiscent. Poor souls, the trouble is that they literally cannot think of anything else to say.

Not all old people. There are some who have periodically turned out their minds and emptied them of the junk they have acquired over the years. They have made room in their brain-box. Bernard Shaw, a lifelong Disposer on a grand scale, lost his wife after a long marriage. When he was asked to comment on being a widower, he said blithely that it was remarkable how much a wife interfered with one's own way of life. When he thus spring-cleaned the deceased Mrs. Shaw, he was in his seventies. But he was an exceptional man, a born hater of lumber who had already remarked, many years before, that the trouble with the world was not that people did not think, but that their thinking was always twenty-five years behind the times.

How can it be otherwise? We cultivate nostalgia. We fill our houses with objects which are really nothing more nor less than Mr. Harris' little toe. We lecture the young on the shortcomings of modern youth with our back to photographs of our college class. Our wardrobes are stuffed with clothes we shall never wear again, our shelves with books we shall never read. Half the pictures on our walls we never look at, which is as well, since we bought them when we had everybody else's taste and none of our own. But all these things are there because they take us back. They are like the quarrels that spring up between husband and wife over things that happened twenty years ago. They are cozy. They make time stop and then go backwards. They help us feel we are keeping young.

But the truth is that they are as aging as worry. They are filling our minds, drowning out the new, as a garrulous old man drowns out the conversation of others at table with his stories. Nostalgia is a sampling of old age. These are the things, these are the incidents, these are the faces that will obsess us when we are gray, and when we are so respected that nobody will dare to tell us to shut up.

We can escape. I recently met a distinguished old woman from India whose daughters I knew and whose grandchildren I had seen. She invited me to lunch. We had not talked for fifteen years and I foresaw a gentle leafing through of times past, of family gossip, and stories of the children. I prepared a few reminiscences of my own life that I thought would interest her. I began to talk of her family. Her eyes glinted. Cutting me short, she informed me that she had just come from trying to persuade a Cardinal to approve of birth control. She then lectured me and the rest of the company for an hour, and if she had not shaken the Cardinal, she shook us. To hear a grandmother speak eloquently about the desirability of not having children was piquant. It was also splendid: She had triumphed over old age by a superb act of Disposal in which her husband, her daughters, her grandchildren and everything to do with any of them had gone into the trash can.

I am sure many will wish to follow her example. I shall now, therefore, describe a simple exercise. It can be performed by any householder, and although it is elementary, it will lead him or her on to higher things.

That inventive race, the Italians, has a custom. As midnight on New Year's Eve approaches, the streets clear. There is no traffic; there are no pedestrians; even the policemen take cover. Then, at the stroke of twelve, the windows of the houses fly open. To the sound of laughter, music and fireworks, each member of the family pitches out old crockery, detested ornaments, hated furniture and a whole catalogue of personal possessions which remind them of something in the past year they are determined to wipe out of their minds. The Italians call it making a piazza pulita of the house. This means a clean square and it is a most curious term for by the next morning the squares, the streets and the alleys are almost blocked with the debris. It is a very inspiriting sight for New Year's morning.

I propose we adopt this custom. The Italians have adopted the American Christmas. Let us return the compliment and observe their New Year rites. On December 31st each year let us sling every piece of nostalgic lumber out of our windows. Let us have a competition between neighbors as to who can throw out the most junk. And having cleared some space in our houses, we can, let us hope, go on to do the same service for our minds.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Believing half the battle for storage is knowing how to throw things away and remembering Aubrey Menen's reflections on the man with too many coat hangers (July, 1963, H&G), we asked the Irish-Indian novelist for his personal recommendations. In the years he has lived in an apartment overlooking a square on the edge of Old Rome's onetime ghetto, he has had abundant opportunity to observe the Roman technique for achieving a piazza pulita.

KITCHEN STORAGE:

Some like it hidden away

For the 50 per cent of our questionnaire families who want their utensils totally concealed: a closed door kitchen

The Richard Dents run a lively household with three school-age children and entertain a great deal, all of which makes stern demands on their kitchen. In their perfectionist's house in New Canaan, Conn., the blue-and-chestnut kitchen, which you can see in color on our cover, was designed with equipment for everything, and—when everything is in its place—a door to close on it. The 16-by-19-foot room is a serene combination of sparkling steel and pastel enamel with antique beams, wormy chestnut, and one wall of time-mellowed brick. Yet even going open-throttle, the kitchen maintains its serenity, outlawing clutter and confusion because all equipment and utensils, even when not visible, are kept at point of use.

In one corner of the center island, liquor and drink-mixing things are stored under a bar sink. On the other side of the island, under the electric cooktop, are cupboards for pots, pans and cooking bowls and next to them, two warming drawers, one to keep foods moist, one to keep them crisp.

Near one end of a long counter under the windows is a flower-arranging sink with cabinets adjoining for vases, shears, wires, frogs. At the other end of the counter is a built-in motor to operate six small appliances, all of which are stored immediately below. And across the room the cabinets above and below a long service counter adjoining the dining room door hold every kind of serving accessory. St. Charles cabinets; oven and cooktop by General Electric; Elkay sinks; KitchenAid dishwasher. The kitchen was designed by Bette Sanford Roby.

For the other half who want their equipment kept in plain sight, three kitchens that make a decorative point of wide-open storage

Storage in the open satisfies many needs. It rescues little utensils from deep drawers where they must live in a heap, scratching and denting each other. It places the most vital tools within the cook's split-second reach, saving many a sauce from curdling. And for the gourmet cook who takes delight in every step of food preparation —a carefully composed arrangement of well-used cooking and serving things is a constant joy.

Far from encouraging clutter, wall-hung and open-shelf storage can also be highly decorative. In Sylvie Hamilton Gallagher's brick-walled kitchen, opposite page, for instance, the orangey red of her French pots hanging on one wall set the room's whole color scheme. In a tiny apartment kitchen, right, that is too confined a space for a play of bright color, the gleam of copper and brass provides a pretty contrast to the warm tones and textures of wood.

The Robert Sheridans' old-fashioned kitchen in Ventura, Calif., is so broken up with windows that it would be difficult to install a full complement of wall cabinets without cutting off considerable light. So Mrs. Sheridan stores almost all her paraphernalia in a series of wall-hung or shelf compositions, left, each as carefully designed and meticulously balanced in form, color and texture as if it were a mural.

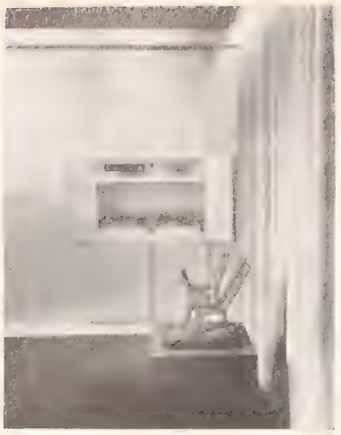
A COLLECTOR'S APARTMENT

offers imaginative answers to common needs

The storage problems of the apartment dweller differ from those of the gardening suburbanite mainly by the absence of impedimenta like lawn mowers, seeders and such. Common to both are the problems of clothes, bedding, china, luggage, et al., but often, in the city, there is less space to take care of them. And when the urbanite is a collector who can't stop collecting, the familiar problems are compounded by what to do about art for art's sake.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Small live in a good-sized apartment of seven rooms filled to the gunwales with enough paintings, sculpture, furniture and bibelots to stock a small museum. Yet the prevailing climate is one of ordered serenity quite free of the confusion so often found under a collector's roof. With imagination plus the thriftiest possible use of wall and closet space and the ingenuity of interior designers Paul Lester Wiener and Ala Damaz, the Smalls have linked the arts of storage and collecting in a thoroughly satisfying way. Refusing to live in a touch-me-not showcase, they savor their treasures in solid comfort with their feet immaculately up.

In the living room the Smalls enjoy a revolving collection of paintings ranging from Renoir to Picasso. They are hung on background panels of cork covered with gold-leaf paper that are immune to the ravages of nail holes—always the bane of a constantly re-hung picture wall. (For the Smalls' dormant-painting closet, see page 98.) A dropped ceiling forms a sheltering plaster canopy over the center of the room and its curled-down edges conceal the fixtures for a flood of perimeter light—all on dimmers—over the picture-laden walls.



Foyer closet serves guests, holds family coats, hats, tiny dressing table, a mirror and a stool.

Living room bar includes refrigerator, pull-out-tray cabinets, doors that slide into pockets.

Built into living room wall is a three-way cache for music system, glasses (above), spirits (below).

Waiting their turn, paintings on sabbatical rest in one of the study's three two-tiered closets.

NO SPACE IS WASTED

Master bedroom, above, is big, looks even bigger because of the minimum of furniture. But where concentration counts, it is exploited: Upper right, a trio of marble-topped chests (set well out from the wall to leave a path to bathroom, closets and dressing room) is a honeycomb of storage. Mrs. Small's dressing room, lower right, holds everything exclusively Hers plus a battery of medium-to-small paintings that delight her to the point of dawdling at her dressing table. Even these she changes. Only one stays put: a little jewel of a Joshua Reynolds.

The dining room, in some ways the Smalls' favorite, offers the double pleasure of hospitality and two fascinating walls of drawings and prints. When not in use, two extensions of the marble table stand in front of the windows, forming an extra server—perhaps the prettiest solution yet to the problem of where to put extra table leaves. At the other end of the room is the permanent sideboard, a long bank of built-in cabinets quite expansive enough to hold all the table gear the Smalls are ever tempted to own.

OTTO M.

Two quite different collections both accented by off-beat companions are displayed in a lighted niche in designer Carl Steele's dining room. On the upper shelf: a collection of clear hand-blown jars and vases sparked by a bright blue-and-red bottle; on the lower: a hoard of shells and corals massed in a giant clamshell and accompanied by totally dissimilar treasures—a Miró lithograph and two knife boxes. Five unmatched candlesticks are casually grouped on the table.

Where to put the THINGS YOU LOVE TO LOOK AT

Not all of us are purposeful collectors, but we all acquire. Even those who like to live in pared and Spartan rooms collect an astonishing array of things they love—family treasures and gifts not to be parted with; bibelots bought on travels; paintings, sculpture and objets d'art acquired for no other reason than the joy inspired by looking at or touching them. Where to put these treasures and how to arrange them is one problem better closets or more drawers cannot solve.

If you think you have too little space to do justice to the things you cherish, try walking through your rooms as if you were wearing a stranger's shoes. Where do your eyes light first as you open each door? Do you see a short stretch of wall you have previously passed by as being of minor significance? Are there a few square inches of unused and, for practical purposes, unusable space on a desk, a counter, a work table where you spend many hours? Placing the things you love where you can most easily see and enjoy them is often far more rewarding than showing them off in conventional places of honor.

Treasures are often enhanced, too, by the company they keep. Even determined collectors find it helps to take a fresh look now and then at their hoards—regrouping them, adding, culling, experimenting. Often the most carefully selected assemblage benefits by the inclusion of one or two mavericks—totally dissimilar objects that serve to accent the others. To create beguiling arrangements of random acquisitions on a desk or a table top can be a particular delight. If, for instance, your friends and kin are in the habit of remembering your favorite color when they present you with gifts, you may have enough bibelots in the same hue to make a marvelous splash. Or you can play with contrasts of color or shape or texture, or compose two-surface arrangements that combine objects on a table top with objects hung on a wall.

Familiar things in familiar places can go stale. Familiar things in new places and in new arrangements make something special happen—to the things, to the room and even to you. Without your knowing quite how it came about, you find in your possessions a new delight, a fondness that can become a passion.

A catholic variety of cherished possessions meticulously arranged on three surfaces greets designer Evelyn Jablow when she walks through her front door. On the wall: paintings arranged in an arresting interplay of color, punctuated by two tiny engravings. On a shelf: Portuguese apothecary jars with a sunburst pattern that has a subtle kinship to the blazing canvases. On a table where they can be readily seen and touched: a group of cool green opaline boxes and another of small Indian bronzes.

Found space– for your three-dimensional treasures

By studding a wall with small objects—in this case a collection of keys, left—artist Charles Rain has created for a studio bedroom a fascinating pattern in high relief. To space the keys evenly, he first measured nail positions for thirty of the larger keys (the most massive one once unlocked a door in twelfth-century Florence), then patterned smaller keys around them. Designer: Richard McKay of Jessup, Inc.

Found space– for paintings and sculpture

If you think you don't have wall space for one more picture, you might borrow an idea, upper left, conceived by artist Charles Rain. He blocked out two viewless windows and made room for nearly two dozen pictures by setting up five panels of wallboard covered with canvas and separately attached to five spring poles. The mixed flock of small pictures includes classic prints, intaglios, some of his own paintings.

A fabric-covered panel, upper right, set on poles a few inches away from a similarly covered dining room wall is gallery-owner Royal Mark's solution for the display and storage of large canvases. While the painting by Alfred Jensen is on view, another canvas awaits its turn behind the panel. On adjoining wall: a sculpture by Roger Bolomey.

Massed above a chest in a small hallway, lower left, in the apartment of designers Jaap and Jettie Penraat is an exuberant composition of fabric and needlework collages. The collages are Mrs. Penraat's work, the furniture of his design. Their Joseph's Coat of a carpet was made to complement the changing colors of a frequently changed display.

Three surfaces—wall, bench and floor, lower right—are used for a varied display of art in the living room of gallery-owner Samuel Kootz and his wife. African and contemporary sculptures are arranged on a bench low enough so they do not interfere with the two Picassos hung at eye level. But the bench is far enough from the wall so that its treasures, like the welded sculpture by Lassaw, can be viewed from all sides.

Fascinating arrangements on table tops

In creating imaginative arrangements of the things they love, three interior designers have thrown orthodox notions to the winds, and concentrated on stimulating contrasts of color and texture.

Inman Cook, for instance, mixes vermeil bamboo candlesticks, left, with eggs in and out of a gold basket and a Crown Derby dish, the design of which inspired the needlepoint pattern under the glass table top framed in brass.

Doris Dessauer's table-top composition, left, of little things wholly unrelated gains stature from the inclusion of a few larger objects equally unrelated: a box, a candlestick, a ceramic elephant. The table was stenciled in a Delft tile pattern to link it with the Delft, Meissen, Staffordshire and oriental porcelain displayed in the niche.

David Barrett spreads out his opulent collection of malachite, right, assembled over the years, on a luxuriously textured suede cloth. But he tempers the richness of the collection by offhand additions: cigarettes in a malachite dish, a photograph in a malachite frame, anemones plunged in Ming yellow and jade green vases. Illuminating the arrangement, a rock crystal lamp.

TRAY STORAGE

Ironically, it is often the things we use every day that are the most impractically stored. The wherewithal of one table setting, for instance, may be dispersed about kitchen and dining room, yet we head for what we need automatically, hardly conscious of what we are doing or how we are doing it because the procedure is such a familiar routine. Merely to assemble a tray for after-dinner coffee we may cross and recross the kitchen, opening three cabinets and one drawer, without giving a thought to the countless extra motions inefficient storage has forced upon us. H&G believes this mandatory meandering is due for reappraisal.

As every bride knows, the conventional, logical way of organizing storage is to keep like things together: china in one place, glass in another, silver in a third. But just as logical reasoning does not always lead to truth (remember the Sophists), logical storage does not always lead to efficiency, either in the use of your space or the use of your time and energy. H&G recommends a less categorical, more human-minded system. Instead of storing your table-setting components by type, keep together the things you will use together. Settle everything you need for setting the breakfast table in one place, the dishes and utensils you use for the children's lunches in another, family dinner table trappings in a third and all your party china, silver and glass somewhere else. Exactly how you allocate your storage would depend, of course, on your own patterns of daily meals and entertaining. The essential is to make the storage fit the pattern.

To see how our system would work, we designed and built a dining room storage wall, left. The crux of the design is a platoon of trays that slide in and out of compartments which organize the wall's contents into pattern-of-living categories. But the placement of the wall and its specifications are completely flexible. (Continued)

H&G's dining room storage wall divides table-setting components into three pattern-of-living groups: First compartment at left stores party place settings on individual trays (see close-up, above). The second stores trays arranged for special collations—one each for afternoon tea, cocktails, dessert, after-dinner coffee. In the third are trays set up for breakfast and children's lunches. Building materials include American Cyanamid's Acrylite plastic for doors and shelves; Advance Resin Products' copper veneer wallpaper; Alcoa's brushed-aluminum trim; Amtico vinyl flooring. For shopping information, see page 128.

TOM KEE

The family center is designed to save the countless footsteps squandered on setting the table for daily meals. Separate trays for breakfast (on four top shelves) and children's lunches (next two shelves) are completely set up so that all that has to be added is the food itself. Tray on bottom shelf co-ordinates salad condiments.

We placed our wall between dining area and kitchen, but in an older house a similar wall might replace a bank of old-fashioned cabinets, or a single compartment might be tucked into a tiny kitchen. Our wall measures 7½-feet long by 2-feet deep by 6-feet-8-inches tall (to the top of its doors) and opens on both sides. Thus, the storage trays can be loaded with clean china on the kitchen side and removed from the dining room side at mealtime.

We divided the interior space into three compartments for three specific purposes. The first is the party center: in which are stored a dozen lightweight trays of jewel-colored plastic, each arranged with a complete individual place setting for a buffet dinner party. This compartment is made to the exact width of the trays, which double as shelves, sliding in and out on wood guides. On the trays in the wider, center compartment are assembled everything needed for serving special courses or drinks. The top shelf holds a complete tea service; the second, all the china and teaspoons for after-dinner coffee; the third, dessert plates, spoons and forks and a cake stand; the fourth, a tray of bar essentials: ice bucket, glasses, water jug; the fifth, a large punch bowl. The last compartment is the family center in which are housed trays set up for breakfast for each member of the family, trays set up for children's lunches and a single tray that keeps together all the makings of salad dressing—everything from sugar to olive oil.

Two different kinds of doors close the three compartments—a paneled folding door across the first two and a single, swing-out door across the third. Thus, at party time, the family storage center can be kept closed and the first two compartments opened wide (the paneled door folds all the way back against the end of the storage wall) making a festive looking display.

The basic framework of the storage wall was built of plywood. For the finish materials we chose a variety of new building products that make the closet, open or closed, an attractive element of the room. The shelves in the family center and all the doors are made of a rippled acrylic plastic that comes in a range of soft smoky translucent colors. This material is very lightweight and easy to work with. The interior of the closet is lined with a new wallcovering made of a thin veneer of copper swirled with darks and lights and laminated to a paper backing. It also covers the corner walls of the dining area. The space remaining between the top of the closet and the ceiling we closed off with more of the rippled acrylic plastic, after installing fluorescent strips on the closet top to shine down through the shelves and enhance the rich colors of their contents. For the door trim, we chose a brushed-aluminum framing, repeating it in thin strips as an accent all around the baseboard and at the juncture of walls and ceiling. And to tie in with the main theme of [illegible] bronzy colors, we covered the floor of the dining area with 12-inch vinyl squares in a new honey hue veined with ripples of dark amber.

FOR FAMILY FUN

Movie screens and slide projectors turned up high on the list of items our reader-consultants had difficulty finding a place for. This is not surprising considering the spectacular possession explosion among facilities for home entertainment. Today the household inventory is likely to include TV, a full complement of stereo components plus an extensive library of records, a tape recorder plus a library of tapes, a movie projector plus screen plus films, a slide projector plus a growing hoard of color slides. Here are two solutions in which almost everything has been consolidated in one spot equally handy for family enjoyment and for entertaining guests.

WALL-TO-WALL MUSIC CENTER IN A COMPOSER'S LIVING ROOM

At one end of composer Harold Rome's living room is a storage wall that contains all the paraphernalia of the working musician as well as music facilities for entertaining guests. Using as a guideline a ceiling beam that projected 2 feet from the wall, the Romes had a series of walnut cabinets and drawers built from floor to ceiling. Some are deep files for music scores; some have shelves for manuscripts and reference books or compartments for records and tapes. Hi-fi components have their own niches, and at the end of the wall near Mr. Rome's piano, the tape recorder was built into a compartment with a drop-front shelf that serves as a work surface for recording sessions and for editing tapes. But since each element of the working paraphernalia can be closed off separately, there need be no trace of it when only the record player is in use for party entertainment. SERPENTINE ENTERTAINMENT CENTER IN A SPACE DIVIDER

The curving partition between the kitchen and the living-dining room of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Korshak's Chicago apartment does far more than divide space: it also houses a complete built-in entertainment center. It starts at one end (see plan, left) with a curved bar that includes cabinets for wine, liquor and glass storage and a serving counter with a pass-through to the kitchen. Next, in the elbow of the wall, is a home movie center: a separate storage cabinet with roomy shelves for a movie projector, cameras and stacks of film. Around the corner a piano stands in a niche of its own framed by shelves for piano scores and books on music. Beyond that are cabinets for hi-fi components, speakers and china. And from one of the lower cabinets the TV set swings out. All the equipment is easy to get at, but all can be shut out of sight behind the tambour or plastic paneled doors. THE CLUTTER-FREE GARAGE

THREE WAYS TO STORE LAWN MOWERS, BICYCLES, LADDERS, TRASH CANS, ET AL., WITHOUT ENCROACHING ON SPACE FOR CARS

Maintenance tools and outdoor equipment are the problem children that too often turn the garage into a booby trap and an eyesore, or else they are housed less conveniently and even more dangerously in the basement. Far more suitable storage for such things can be provided by compartments and enclosed areas at ground level with immediate access from house or garage. These can also serve as connecting units between the two buildings, putting to use space that might otherwise be wasted. So H&G has devised three plans that might be adapted in part or in whole to the house you live in now, or incorporated in the plan for a new house. One applies to a detached garage, one to a carport and one to a breezeway. These utility storage centers are the contemporary equivalents of the tool houses and garden sheds of other days, but the space they contain is organized into individual compartments for trash cans, paints, power tools, garden paraphernalia, velocipedes, sports equipment, etc. And the contemporary version affords an extra asset: sheltered passage between house and garage.

1 Closets and walkway linking detached garage to house

OUR FIRST SCHEME is adaptable to a garage detached from the house. A series of storage units that form a connecting L between the two open onto a covered walk or arcade leading from the kitchen door to the two-car garage. All doors match the adjoining walls so the over-all look hat of a high screening fence. In the compartment next to the garage there is room for velocipedes and scooters as well as bikes. Skis and golf bags could be stored there as well. Next is the garden storage house, 10 by 14 feet, where power equipment and garden furniture can be kept, leaving space to spare for a workshop counter at the back. Adjoinng the door to this storeroom is a door to the garden. In the arm of the . leading to the kitchen door are separate smaller compartments for paint supplies, hand tools and potting shelf, and trash bins—each 6 feet wide by 4 feet deep. A special advantage offered by this L-shaped storage-service area is that it allows for a 19-by-24-foot off-street parking area for guest cars.

2 Storage walls enclosing three sides of a carport

OUR SECOND SOLUTION would require an area of 43 by 29 feet—perhaps an open carport originally designed for three or four cars and sheltered by a roof but without enclosing walls. Around three sides of it we have designed a honeycomb of storage and service facilities. This plan not only demarcates car storage from miscellaneous storage, but provides compartments which are carefully sized and properly situated for specific types of outdoor equipment. Sliding doors open these compartments to a concrete walkway around the garage floor and raised a few inches above it, so that the curb acts as a car stop. The garden-tool and power-equipment closet opens to both the garage and garden, the terrace-furniture storage room to the garden, the bike stall to the drive. The mud room, a buffer area between garage and kitchen, includes children's lockers and faces a wash-up lavatory. A luggage room, a well lighted 10-foot-long workshop, cubicles for trash cans, paints, screens, ladders and rakes take care of a host of other requirements.

IN OUR THIRD PLAN the familiar breezeway becomes a storage center. This sensible feature of many Colonial-style houses, affording a sheltered passage between house and garage, was originally designed as a place to sit and catch the breeze. In this plan, its usefulness is amplified by storage compartments on each side. At the front, next to the garage, is a capacious 9-by-5-foot closet for all the winter equipment necessary to a country house. An inside door between closet and garage guarantees easy access even when snow blocks the breezeway door, and the garage is long enough (25 by 23 feet) so that cars will not stand in the way of the outgoing plow. Two compartments for garden gear—barbecue, furniture, power mower, tools—open to the breezeway. On the other side are cubicles for refuse cans and a package receiver where delivery boys can leave milk, groceries, clothes from the cleaner, etc. Both these cubicles have doors to the kitchen (lockable from inside) as well as to the breezeway. Adjoining is a children's lavatory.

Notes for the Hostess

BY DIANA BRYAN

Remember the favorite old "progressive dinner" party, where each course was served by a different hostess and the party progressed from one house to the next? Recently, a group of us were planning ways to raise funds for our local American Field Service Foreign Student Exchange when Susan Rogers came up with a fine idea—an international progressive dinner. It promised to be fun, and appropriate, too. Four of us volunteered and worked out the dinner this way:

The party began at our house, where, because of my Hellenic preferences, it was agreed I would serve a first course of Greek hors d'oeuvres (mezes). Our town's Greek grocery store provided good shopping: I bought elies laderis or Greek olives, and dolmadakia (yalanji) or stuffed vine leaves. And I found some canned tarama (cured carp roe) which I mixed with olive oil, lemon juice, onion and chopped parsley and served on toast. (Incidentally, I understand these or similar goodies can also be bought at gourmet shops or at Hammacher Schlemmer in New York.) Then I made a melitzanes salata dip: baked eggplant pulp, puréed and mixed with olive oil, lemon juice, salt, pepper and onion and chilled thoroughly.

Don brought out several bottles of ouzo, the Greek spirits, but we served regular drinks, too, for those who don't like the rather licorice taste of ouzo. We were lucky to be able to hire a fellow who could play the bouzoukee and sing Greek folk songs; otherwise we would have borrowed suitable records from the children's folk collection.

Then the party proceeded—by chartered bus, which considerably simplified parking—to the next Mediterranean port, the Rogers', for vitello al limone and fettucini. Susan had discovered a mandolin player with a fine tenor, who entertained us beautifully. The Greenwalds served Spanish flan at their house—spiced with flamenco music provided by their talented guitar-student son. We finished off with a flourish at the Stewarts', who offered several kinds of coffee: Turkish, Viennese and Irish, plus espresso, of course, and all three musicians came along to play for us some more. The evening was a splendid success—socially, gastronomically, and, happily for our Fund, financially.

Everything was coming up roses at Lee Shepard's last week. She gave a truly feminine ladies' luncheon in honor of her niece who is to be married, and the whole party was as pretty and pink as a blushing bride. The pink silk moire tablecloth set off green linen napkins tied around with pink velvet ribbons—each wearing a pink rosebud. The centerpiece was a green shallow basket overflowing with the most sentimental old-fashioned pink roses—climbers, moss and cabbage, mostly. But it was the Italian faïence that really carried the theme to a flourish: each plate was a giant pink cabbage rose wreathed with leaves, each cup a full-blown rose set on a saucer of leaves. Lee found this delightful stuff at Mayhew's in New York.

Speaking of garden flowers, I am now the owner of one of the best holders for short-stemmed blossoms ever invented—a flower brick. Mine is a hollow oblong of Delft faïence, pierced with rows of small holes all along the top and with an open square in the center. You can use it by itself as a vase, or set it in a shallow bowl. A Sleepy Hollow reproduction, the brick is just the thing for my button zinnias, verbenas, pansies and pinks in any and all combinations. I decided not to save it just for party centerpieces, but to keep it on the dining table all summer long filled with blooms for the family to enjoy.

If you think vodka is an adult drink, wait til you taste it with Sprite, the adult mixer.

Vodka comes of age when it gets mixed up with Sprite. Tingling! Exuberant! Naturally tart for adult tastes! Add a slice of lemon or lime. And a cherry. You've got yourself a Mad Russian. Keep adding fruit, and you've got a Petrograd Punch. Intriguing! From Russia, with love.

HOUSE & GARDEN'S

Outdoor Menu Cook Book

By Philip S. Brown

Cooking and eating outdoors have become as much a part of the American tradition as apple pie and the Fourth of July. Whenever and wherever the weather is propitious, the glow of the charcoal fire can be seen. For most of us, the great lure of alfresco meals is undoubtedly their informality and relaxed sense of leisurely well-being. Meals are generally kept simple, to spare the cook (male or female), but there are no set rules about it and you may, if you wish, dine as lavishly outdoors as you do indoors. However, to assure a minimum of chasing to and fro between house and garden, it is advisable to keep the menu uncomplicated and to have two fires going—one to cook the pièce de résistance, the other to keep the accompanying dishes warm until serving time.

Every outdoor chef has strong opinions on the subject of fire-making and barbecue equipment. My preference is for charcoal briquettes as fuel because, being all of a size, they burn evenly and emit a steady volume of heat. I also prefer an electric fire-starter, which is clean and easy to use, but it really doesn't matter how you get your fire going as long as you don't use a substance with an unpleasant or lingering odor. If it is necessary to add fuel during cooking, place the briquettes at the perimeter of the bed of coals and when they have ignited (a matter of very few minutes), rake them into the center. This keeps the flow of heat uninterrupted.

Try for a change of pace when you plan outdoor menus. An endless summer diet of steak, baked potatoes and corn can be a bore to both family and guests. Give an Italian supper by the pool and broil jumbo shrimp, scampi-style, or have a Saturday night dinner of tasty Mexican dishes, which lend themselves admirably to outdoor cooking and serving. Or if you do have steak, make it extra-special with a Béarnaise or Marchand de Vin Sauce. The recipes in the following menus make superb summer eating. In some cases I have suggested a wine to go with the food, but they are merely my preference—you may, of course, substitute the wine of your choice.

Fourth of July Party

TINY SAUSAGES ON STICKS* BOURBON
SPIT-ROASTED SALMON, EGG SAUCE*
ASH-ROASTED CORN* BUTTERED PEAS
BEER OR VIN ROSÉ
CUCUMBER SALAD* BREAD STICKS
STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE*

Salmon is about as traditional as anything for the Glorious Fourth, and corn, peas, hot dogs, Bourbon and strawberry shortcake are typically American. This collation is designed for the lull between the afternoon activities and the fireworks or bonfire display, when all hands need to sit down and rest for an hour or two. Serve Bourbon highballs, on the rocks, or in mint juleps, which take a little effort, but are delicious.

Tiny Sausages on Sticks

Buy small-size wieners at the delicatessen or Vienna sausages in cans. For 8 people, you will need at least 2 dozen sausages, and maybe half again as many. Impale each one lengthwise on a bamboo skewer and wrap it in baking powder biscuit dough or yeast roll dough, rolled very thin. Cook over a medium charcoal fire until the bread is done and golden brown and the sausage within is hot. Turn a couple of times during the cooking so that the bread will brown on all sides. Have mustard for those who want it.

Spit-Roasted Salmon, Egg Sauce

1 small whole salmon or large center cut, about 4–5 pounds, skin intact
Juice of 1 lemon
Salt, pepper
Butter
½ cup flour
1 cup consommé or fish stock
2 cups milk
1 cup light cream
Minced fresh dill (optional)
Hard-cooked eggs
Thin slices lemon
Parsley

Sprinkle the cavity of the salmon with the lemon juice, salt and pepper. Butter the skin liberally, then fold a piece of coarse-meshed chicken wire around the whole fish and secure it well, making a sort of basket. Spit the fish on the diagonal, and roast over a medium fire. Melt some butter and brush the salmon from time to time. When a meat thermometer inserted into the thickest part of the fish reads 160°, it will be done.

Meanwhile, prepare the egg sauce: Melt ½ cup butter, add the flour and cook a couple of minutes. Add the consommé, milk, cream and season with salt, pepper and minced fresh dill if you like. Cook until thick and smooth. Slice some hard-cooked eggs to garnish the platter, reserve the good slices and chop the ends along with 3 additional hard-cooked eggs. Add the chopped eggs to the sauce and stir.

Remove the spit and chicken wire from the salmon. If the skin is crispy (and it should be), leave it on and serve a little with each piece of salmon. Arrange your beautiful production on a platter, garnish with the lemon slices, parsley, and hard-cooked egg slices reserved from the sauce. Serve with the egg sauce. Serves 8.

Ash-Roasted Corn

Allow at least 2 ears per person, with a few extra for the gluttons. Pull back the husks and remove all the silk, then replace the husks and tie the ends together. Soak the ears in cold water for at least half an hour before roasting on the coals. Lay the wet ears directly on top of the fire. Turn the ears two or three times during the roasting. They will cook in 10–15 minutes. When done, remove husks (wear heavy gloves for this) and stack on a platter. Serve with plenty of butter.

Cucumber Salad

For 8 people, buy 4 long thin cucumbers, preferably not waxed. If they are waxed, peel them; if not, leave the skins on. In either case, slice them very thin and dress with ½ cup French dressing to which 2 tablespoons grated onion have been added. Serve in lettuce cups.

Strawberry Shortcake

3 pints strawberries
4 tablespoons sugar
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¾ teaspoon salt
1 egg (plus a little egg beaten with water)
Butter
⅓ (approximately) cup milk
½ pint heavy cream

Wash and hull the strawberries, reserve a dozen or so nice ones for the crown of the cake and slice the remaining strawberries. Sprinkle with 3 tablespoons sugar and keep in the refrigerator until time to put the shortcake together.

Make a biscuit dough with the flour, baking powder, the remaining 1 tablespoon sugar, salt, 1 egg, 5 tablespoons of butter and enough milk to make a soft dough. Divide it in half and pat one half into a 10″ cake pan—this will make a rather thin layer. Brush with 1 tablespoon melted butter, pat the other half of the dough on top, brush with a little egg beaten with water and bake in a 450° oven for about 10 minutes, or until brown. Turn out carefully, split on the division line and transfer the bottom half to a plate, using two spatulas and taking great care.

Spread the bottom layer with more butter, cover very generously with sliced sugared strawberries, put the top layer in place, add more sliced strawberries and put a wreath of large perfect berries around the top. The shortcake should be eaten hot, so work quickly. Serve with thick unwhipped cream (or whip it if you prefer, but it won't be as good).

Dinner for Wine Lovers

CHABLIS OYSTERS*
STEAK MARCHAND DE VIN*
HASHED BROWN POTATOES*
FINE RED BORDEAUX
ASPARAGUS VINAIGRETTE*
RIPE PEARS ASSORTED CHEESES
COFFEE NUTS MADEIRA

Select the wines and the guests carefully for this meal. The former should be the best your cellar affords; the latter, good friends who know and appreciate fine vintages. Nothing is more disheartening than to watch a glorious bottle being dispatched as though it were so much water by an unappreciative guest, while few things are more rewarding than the delighted approbation of your efforts by a true connoisseur.

The red wine should be a Château bottling of a good year. Any fine red Bordeaux will serve admirably—Pauillac, Pomerol, St. Estèphe, Médoc or St. Émilion. Serve it at room temperature (about 70° F.) and remove the cork at least an hour before serving. More of the red Bordeaux should accompany the fruit and cheese course. The Madeira, although it may seem unnecessary, makes a fine ending for a memorable meal. Again, it should be a fine one, and it's nice to have more than one to offer your guests—say a Sercial and a Bual or Malmsey, so that they may choose between dry and sweet.

Oysters

Allow 6 medium-sized or 4 large oysters for each person. Serve on the half shell on a bed of ice, or lay on the grill for 1–3 minutes until the oysters open their shells. Lemon is the ideal accompaniment for these, with perhaps a little salt. Don't mask their delicate flavor with catsup, horseradish or other overpowering condiments. Serve with Chablis kept well chilled in a bucket of ice.

Steak Marchand de Vin

6 green onions or shallots, chopped
Butter
¾ cup good red Bordeaux wine
1 cup Sauce Espagnole or
1 can (10¾-ounce) beef gravy
3-pound top sirloin or Prime Grade rump steak, 1½″–2″ thick
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Prepare the Sauce Marchand de Vin: Sauté the chopped onion in ¼ cup butter until wilted. Add the wine and cook until reduced to ⅓ cup. Add the Sauce Espagnole and heat.

Broil the steak as usual over a medium fire. (If you are lucky enough to have some dried grapevine trimmings, pile them on the coals and let them burn down before grilling; they add a marvelous flavor.) When cooked to perfection, remove the meat to a hot platter and top with a lump of butter. Add 2 tablespoons of butter and the lemon juice to the sauce, and serve with the steak. Serves 6.

Hashed Brown Potatoes

Allow one good-sized boiled or baked potato for each serving. (Some people prefer using cooked potatoes for making hashed brown potatoes, although raw ones are equally good.) Cut potatoes in small dice. Melt 2 tablespoons butter for each potato in a heavy skillet and add the diced potatoes, stirring until they are well coated with butter. Cook over a very low flame until a brown crust forms on the bottom. (Add more butter if necessary.) When beautifully browned, fold like an omelette and turn out on a hot platter.

Asparagus Vinaigrette

Allow ½ pound asparagus per person before cleaning and removing the tough ends. Place the asparagus in salted boiling water, bring the water back to a boil and boil until tender-crisp, about 8–12 minutes. Drain and heap on a platter. Combine 1 part vinegar, 3–4 parts olive oil, salt and pepper for a Vinaigrette Sauce and pour over the asparagus. Serve in the French manner, i.e., as a separate course; the assertive flavor of this dish is not particularly good with wine.

Dinner for Weekend Guests

COCKTAILS SALTED ALMONDS
TENDERLOIN STEAKS, BÉARNAISE SAUCE
NEW POTATOES WITH BUTTER AND CHOPPED CHIVES
GREEN BEANS WITH MUSHROOMS*
POMMARD OR PINOT NOIR
MELON WITH PORT WINE
COFFEE COGNAC

If this dinner is for a couple you wish to entertain in style, the table should be laid as though it were indoors. As the meal is quite substantial, no elaborate hors d'oeuvres are needed, but see that the salted nuts are of the very best quality.

Tenderloin Steaks, Béarnaise Sauce

1 tenderloin steaks, 1½″ thick
2 tablespoons tarragon vinegar
2 shallots, chopped
½ teaspoon minced tarragon
3 egg yolks
Cayenne, salt
¼ pound butter
Melted butter, olive oil or walnut oil

Have the steaks cut from the center cut of the tenderloin, at least 1½″ thick, well trimmed of all fat and muscle sheath, and either larded or wrapped in strips of bacon.

Prepare the Béarnaise Sauce: Heat the vinegar and cook the shallots until the vinegar is absorbed. Add the minced tarragon. Put the egg yolks, a dash of cayenne and a little salt in a heavy bowl and add the shallot mixture. Melt the butter in a small pan. Place the bowl with the egg yolks over hot water in the bottom of a double boiler and turn the heat low. Whip the egg mixture with a French whisk constantly and add the butter gradually. The sauce should thicken at once. Remove the pan from the heat and stir until thick and glossy. Keep over warm water until serving time. (If the sauce becomes too thick, beat in a little hot water to thin it.) Makes 1 cup.

When ready to cook the steaks, brush the cut surfaces with melted butter, olive oil or walnut oil and cook over a moderately hot fire 5–6 minutes a side for rare, up to 10–12 minutes for well done (which would be a shame). Before turning, brush uncooked side with more butter or oil. Serve with Béarnaise Sauce. Serves 4.

Green Beans with Mushrooms

1 pound green beans, cleaned
1 cup chicken stock or water
½ pound mushrooms, chopped
5–6 tablespoons butter

French-cut each bean into 4 lengthwise strips. Cook the beans in the chicken stock until they are tender-crisp. This shouldn't take over 10 minutes. Meanwhile, sauté the mushrooms in 4 tablespoons butter until wilted. Drain the cooked beans, mix with the mushrooms and add the remaining 1–2 tablespoons butter. Serves 4–6.

Southern-style Dinner

SHRIMP BISCUITS* SAZERACS*
GRILLED HAM STEAKS
HOMINY SPOON BREAD*
CHARCOAL-ROASTED ONIONS*
COLE SLAW*
VIN ROSÉ
BROILED PINEAPPLE SLICES*
COFFEE TAWNY PORT

This is really pseudo-Southern, but it's wonderfully good and satisfying, and no Southerner could possibly object to it. On a warm summer evening under a full moon, initiate the mood of the meal by serving Sazeracs, an old New Orleans specialty: Swirl a little Pernod in an Old-Fashioned glass—just enough to coat the glass—and shake out any excess. Add ice cubes and 2 or 3 dashes of Peychaud's bitters, then pour in 2 ounces of rye or bourbon. As you can plainly see, Sazeracs have a good deal of authority, so moderation is in order.

For coffee, have the high-roast Louisiana variety with chicory added. Serve a fine tawny port, and as the cigars are lighted you may well hear the Robert E. Lee steaming down the river.

Shrimp Biscuits

Prepare enough baking powder biscuit dough for an ordinary 12-biscuit recipe. Roll out the dough to ¼" thick and cut in 1"–1½" rounds. Bake until brown and pretty, then split and butter. Insert a whole tiny cooked shrimp or half of a larger one, along with a sliver of green onion. Makes 3–4 dozen, enough for 6–8 people.

Grilled Ham Steaks

Have the ham steaks cut at least 1" thick, preferably 1½" or 2". A 2" center-cut steak should serve 6; a 1½" one will do for 4. Try to get ham that is not precooked, as the flavor is much better. Slash the fat around the edge to prevent curling, brush with melted butter and grill over a rather slow fire for 30–60 minutes, depending upon thickness. Pass a good mustard for those who like it with ham.

Hominy Spoon Bread

This delicious and unusual pudding is a joy to behold and a greater joy to eat. Be sure to have butter on the table, for like all hot breads, this cries for it.

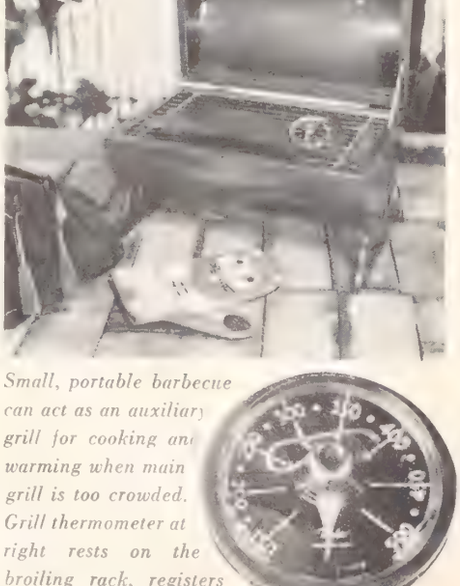
1½ cups hominy grits
3 cups boiling water
3 eggs, separated
¼ cup butter
1 cup milk
1½ teaspoons salt
3 tablespoons minced chives
3 tablespoons minced parsley
2 teaspoons minced fresh marjoram
Sesame seeds

Cook the grits in the boiling water for 4 minutes, stirring constantly, until thick and smooth. Beat the egg yolks well and add with the butter, milk and salt. Cook another 4 minutes, still stirring; take from the fire and stir in the minced herbs. Beat the egg whites until stiff but not dry and fold them into the mixture. Grease a casserole heavily with cold butter, pour in mixture and sprinkle lavishly with sesame seeds. Bake in a 375° oven for 45 minutes, or until set. Serves 6.

Charcoal-Roasted Onions

Even those who are lukewarm about onions will like them when they are charcoal-roasted. Allow 3 or 4 medium-sized white onions per person. Peel the onions and place each one, with a pat of butter and a sprinkling of salt, on a square of foil. Wrap, sealing well, and roast in the coals, burying them around the edge of the fire so that you won't impair the cooking heat, for about ½ hour or until fork-tender (test by jabbing the fork right through the foil). The onions will be moist, sweet and utterly delectable.

Cole Slaw



There are as many ways to make cole slaw as there are cooks who make it. Here's one:

1 small head cabbage, core removed
4–5 green onions, chopped with some green
2 stalks celery, chopped
½ green pepper, chopped
8–10 radishes, chopped
1 carrot, chopped
¼ cup (approximately) French dressing
¼ cup (approximately) mayonnaise

Slice the cabbage ¼" thick or less, then cut the slices crosswise in 3 or 4 places. Put in a bowl and add the onions, celery, green pepper, radishes and carrot. Dress with enough French dressing to coat each piece when thoroughly mixed. Cover and let stand for a couple of hours in the refrigerator. At serving time add the same amount of mayonnaise as French dressing, mix well and serve. (Amount of dressings depends upon the size of the cabbage.) Serves 6.

Broiled Pineapple Slices

Cut a ripe fresh pineapple lengthwise through leaves and skin into 6 or 8 wedges. Remove sections of core from the inner edges. Brush with melted butter and broil until hot and nicely browned. Serve as is (the skin will come away easily as the slices are eaten).

Small, portable barbecue can act as an auxiliary grill for cooking and warming when main grill is too crowded. Grill thermometer at right rests on the broiling rack, registers temperature at rack level.

Midsummer Brunch

FRENCH '75'S*
CHICKEN LIVERS AND BACON EN BROCHETTE*
LONDON BROIL*
MUSHROOMS IN FOIL*
ROAST POTATOES*
TOASTED BREAD*
PRESERVES
BREAKFAST CHEESE OR BRIE
COFFEE

A Sunday brunch is a nice informal way to entertain, and has the advantage of ending (usually, but not always) in the midafternoon, so that all hands can get to bed at a reasonable hour. Noon is a good hour for the guests to assemble for libations, with food served about 1 o'clock. When the meal is over, there will be a lazy hour or two for conversation, games or whatever.

A French '75 is one of the best midday drinks there is, and as with so many potables, there are literally dozens of recipes for it. This is an easy and excellent one: Put 3 or 4 ice cubes, the juice of ½ lemon, 2 ounces of gin and sugar to taste (some people prefer none) into a 12-ounce highball glass. Fill with iced champagne, stir lightly and serve, and watch that look of delighted well-being steal across your guests' faces.

Chicken Livers and Bacon en Brochette

For appetizers from the charcoal grill these are hard to beat. They may be prepared for cooking ahead of time and kept covered in the refrigerator. For each guest allow 3 chicken livers and 3 slices of bacon. Cut the livers in half and wrap each one in a half-slice of bacon, then string on thin bamboo skewers that have been well soaked in water. (Or use thin metal skewers or knitting needles; you will need gloves to handle the latter.) Broil over charcoal until the bacon is crisp—it won't take too long, about 5–8 minutes should do it—and let each guest eat the tidbits from his skewer. Some of the more fastidious guests who don't like eating with their fingers may prefer to use plates, so have them ready in case they are needed.

London Broil

Anyone who likes red meat can't help loving London broil, and as it's not good unless it's very rare, choose your guests carefully or have something else. London broil is simply beef flank steak, grilled to perfection. Unless it's very large, a flank steak will serve 3 comfortably, so provide 2 Prime Grade or Choice Grade steaks for 6 people. Have the butcher remove the thin membrane that covers this piece of meat, but don't have it scored or put through the "tenderizer." Have a good brisk fire ready, brush the steaks with olive oil or French dressing and cook for 3 minutes on a side, or a minute longer if you don't like really rare meat. (No longer, though, or it will be tough and stringy.) The steaks will contract and puff up during the cooking. Lay them on a carving board and, using a very sharp, thin-bladed knife, slice in long diagonal thin slices across the grain—the knife blade should be at an angle of 30° or less to the meat, and the slices should be at least 2½" in width. You will have lots of juice in the well of the carving board, so be sure to spoon some over each serving of the meat and roast potatoes that accompany it.

Collapsible "Safari" grill, which folds up, uses newspaper as fuel and has a long-handled grid, makes a light, compact cooker for picnics. Wicker caddy basket for toting food is a good companion.

Mushrooms in Foil

Mushrooms are always a good addition to a meat course, and when they are wrapped up before cooking, all the wonderful flavor stays with them.

1 pound fresh mushrooms
6 tablespoons butter
Salt, pepper

Clean the mushrooms by brushing lightly under cold running water, then trimming off the tough ends of the stems. If they are big ones, cut them in 2 or 4 pieces; if small, leave whole. Cut heavy-duty foil into 6 pieces, each measuring 6″ by 12″. Fold the foil rectangles in half, making 6″ squares. Divide the mushrooms among the squares, put 1 tablespoon of butter on each, sprinkle with salt and pepper and fold into neat packages, sealing the edges with a triple fold. Lay the packets around the edge of the coals for 10 minutes, then turn and cook another 10 minutes. Serve them in the foil, but have scissors handy for easy opening.

Roast Potatoes

Here's an easy way to roast potatoes—a trifle messier than roasting them in foil, perhaps, but they will be just about the best potatoes you ever tasted. Select nice big Idaho russets, 1 per person, and simply bury them in the ashes as is. Let them cook until tender to the fork, about 45–60 minutes. The skins will be black and charred, but the insides will be fluffy and white and altogether wonderful. Have plenty of butter and salt and pepper, or sour cream and chopped chives.

Toasted Bread

If you're a once-a-week baker, you'll have some marvelous homemade bread on hand. If not, buy the best loaf you can find. A good sour-dough or French bread is fine toasted over the coals. Whichever you use, slice it fairly thick and either lay it on the grill or impale it on a long fork and toast until nice and brown. Butter lavishly and serve with preserves—strawberry, raspberry, cherry or what have you. It's not only full of flavor, it's full of nostalgia as well.

If you can't get Breakfast Cheese, made by Rouge et Noir in Petaluma, California, a fine Brie is a good substitute here. And you'll need more of that toasted bread to accompany it.

Italian Supper

CAMPARI OR COCKTAILS
MELON WITH PROSCIUTTO*
SHRIMP, SCAMPI STYLE* FETTUCINE*
BROILED EGGPLANT SLICES* SOAVE
GARLIC OLIVES AND CHERRY TOMATOES*
ZABAGLIONE* ESPRESSO STREGA

This is an easy and informal meal, one that is apt to turn even the daintiest of eaters into a temporary glutton. Large paper napkins in profusion are indicated, as are hot towels for the final mop-up. Be sure to have plenty of everything, especially the shrimp, which have a magical way of disappearing. And chill one more bottle of Soave than you think you'll need—you'll need it! Campari, the Italian bitters, is an acquired taste, and many people do not care for it. If you do serve it, pour it over ice and add a twist of lemon. Or make a short highball with 2 parts Campari to 1 part club soda.

Melon with Prosciutto

Have the prosciutto (Italian ham) sliced paper-thin. If prosciutto isn't available in your neighborhood, you may use an old-fashioned ham or Virginia ham, but it must be cut very thin. (The average "tenderized" and "precooked" hams on the market today are too tender for this sort of slicing, as well as for wrapping around anything; the slices just fall apart.) A good dried beef is also an acceptable substitute. Peel and seed a cantaloupe or Persian melon and cut in rather thin lengthwise slices. Cut the slices in two. Wrap each piece of melon in a slice of prosciutto and fasten with a toothpick.

Shrimp, Scampi Style

True scampi exist only in the Mediterranean, so you will have to use jumbo shrimp or prawns as they are called in some parts of the country. They should be the really big fellows, which run about 10 to the pound.

4 pounds raw shrimp
8 cloves garlic, crushed in 2 tablespoons salt
2 cups olive oil
½ cup minced parsley
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Split the shrimp shells up the back with a sharp-pointed pair of scissors and rinse out the sand vein, but leave the shells on. Prepare a marinade by blending well the remaining ingredients and marinate the shrimp for 2–4 hours. Broil the shrimp over a medium fire for about 3 minutes on a side (turn with tongs) and serve at once. You will need a couple of bowls for the shells, and finger bowls are a good idea, as well as napkins and hot towels. Serves 8.

Fettucine

2 pounds narrow egg noodles
2 cloves garlic, crushed
2 tablespoons minced parsley
2 tablespoons minced basil
Grated Parmesan cheese
½ cup butter, melted
Salt to taste

Boil the noodles in salted water until just tender (al dente); drain and lift with a fork to let the steam escape. Add the garlic, parsley, basil, 1 cup or less Parmesan cheese and the butter. Add the salt, mix thoroughly and serve. Pass more cheese in a bowl. Serves 8.

Broiled Eggplant Slices

2 medium sized eggplants
2 cloves garlic
1 tablespoon salt
¼ teaspoon orégano
½ cup olive oil
1 tablespoon red wine vinegar

Slice each unpeeled eggplant in 8 slices. Grind the garlic with the salt, add the other ingredients and mix thoroughly. Paint the eggplant slices with the mixture and broil over a medium fire until brown on both sides and tender. This serves 8, allowing 2 slices per person, but you may need more.

Garlic Olives and Cherry Tomatoes

1 pint jar ripe olives
2 cloves garlic, crushed
Olive oil
1 basket cherry tomatoes, stems removed ½ cup chopped parsley

Drain the juice from the olive jar, add the garlic and fill the jar with olive oil. Cover and keep in the refrigerator for a day or a week. Put the cherry tomatoes in a bowl and add the garlic olives. Pour in a little of the garlic oil and lightly toss the tomatoes and olives so that all are coated. Add the chopped parsley, toss once more and serve instead of salad.

Zabaglione

For each person, allow 2 egg yolks, 2 teaspoons sugar and 4 tablespoons Marsala. Beat the yolks and sugar together until they are frothy and pale in color. Stir in the Marsala and put the whole mixture into the top of a double boiler over hot but not boiling water, or into a heavy pan over a very slow fire. Stir continuously, taking great care that the zabaglione does not curdle; it must not boil. As soon as it thickens, pour it into warmed glasses and serve immediately.

South-of-the-Border Dinner

MARGARITAS*
CARNITAS CON MANTEQUILLA DE POBRE*
CHULETAS CON SALSA FRIA*
FRIJOLES REFRITOS*
TORTILLAS
MEXICAN BEER
ENSALADA VERDE*
FLAN* COFFEE KAHLUA

This Mexican collation is as good for brunch as it is for dinner, and most of the preparation can be done well in advance. Somehow these dishes seem to taste better if served on Mexican pottery dishes. There's a very pleasant air of informality about this meal, so make the most of it. The carnitas and chuletas are both from Elena Zelayeta, San Francisco's famous Mexican cook and author, and are sheer perfection.

It's a nice idea to serve both corn and flour tortillas to suit all tastes. Heat the tortillas and wrap them in a cloth to keep warm. Serve the tortillas piping hot with butter.

For Margaritas have ready a saucer of salt. Rub the rims of cocktail glasses with a cut lime, then spin in the salt to frost. For each Margarita, pour 2 ounces of tequila and ½ ounce of Cointreau over ice in a bar glass; add the juice of half a lime and stir until well chilled. Strain into the prepared glass. If you like them a little sweeter, increase the proportion of Cointreau; if drier, cut it down some more.

Beer, preferably Mexican, is the only thing to drink with this meal.

Carnitas con Mantequilla de Pobre

Carnitas, which are extremely habit-forming, may be prepared a day or two ahead of the party if desired, but hide them well or you'll find that a good many of these crispy little nuggets have mysteriously vanished. Mantequilla de pobre is literally "poor man's butter" (three cheers for poverty!).

2 pounds lean pork such as boneless butt, cut into 1"–1½" cubes
Salt, pepper, monosodium glutamate
2 medium avocados, cut into tiny cubes
2 tomatoes, cut into tiny cubes
3 tablespoons red wine vinegar
1 tablespoon salad oil

Put the pork cubes in one layer in a shallow baking pan and sprinkle with salt, pepper and monosodium glutamate. Let stand for an hour or so, then bake in a 300° oven for about 1½ hours, stirring and draining off the fat a few times.

Meanwhile, prepare the mantequilla de pobre: Combine the avocados, tomatoes, vinegar, salad oil, salt and pepper to taste. Toss gently until well mixed and let stand at least ½ hour at room temperature before serving.

String the baked pork cubes on bamboo skewers, about 3–4 to a skewer, and cook them over charcoal until brown and crispy. Remove from the skewers, impale each on a toothpick and dip into the mantequilla de pobre. Serves 6–8.

Note: If desired, tostadas (crisp fried pieces of tortilla) may be used as scoops for the mantequilla and eaten along with the carnitas.

Chuletas con Salsa Fria

1 pound lean ground round steak
1 cup finely chopped parsley
1 cup finely chopped onion
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan
1 egg
¼ teaspoon monosodium glutamate
Salt, pepper
1½ cups fine dry bread crumbs

Mix all ingredients except the crumbs very well and shape the mixture into 12–16 balls. Now put the crumbs on a good-sized board, lay the balls on top and pat the balls into quite thin patties about 4" in diameter, turning so that they are well covered on each side. Chill well, then cook on a well-greased fine-meshed grill for not over 3 minutes on a side. Serve them with Salsa Fria. Serves 6–8.

Salsa Fria (Cold Sauce)

1-pound, 4-ounce (#2) can solid-pack tomatoes, chopped fine
1 cup chopped sweet onions
4-ounce can peeled green chiles, chopped
1 teaspoon chopped cilantro
1 teaspoon chopped orégano
2 tablespoons wine vinegar
2 tablespoons olive oil
Salt, pepper to taste

Combine all the ingredients, mix well and serve very cold. Cilantro, also known as Chinese parsley, is the green leaves of coriander. If unavailable, use some more orégano. This sauce is good on all sorts of meat and fish. Some aficionados like to add a can of chopped tomatillas, the tart little Mexican green tomatoes.

Frijoles Refritos

1 pound pinto beans, or Mexican red or pink beans
Salt to taste
Bacon fat or lard
Sour cream (optional)

Put the beans in warm water to cover and cook at a simmer until very tender, about 1½–2 hours. Add salt during the last half hour of cooking. Melt ½ cup of bacon fat or lard in an earthenware casserole or in a large heavy skillet. Mash a few beans in the fat, then add some of the cooking liquid and more beans, mashing them well, until all the beans are used and the liquid and lard absorbed. Now you have frijoles.

For "refried beans," melt ½ cup lard for each 3 cups of frijoles and add the beans, cooking and stirring until they are very hot and the lard is absorbed. You should have delicious little crispy bits around the edge. Serve them as is, or with a dollop of sour cream on top. Serves 6–8.

Ensalada Verde

Prepare like a mixed green salad, but add bits of chopped green or red pepper and some shredded Monterey Jack cheese. Add a couple of mashed cloves of garlic and a small hot red pepper to the French dressing and mix with the greens.

Flan

Flan came to Mexico with the Conquistadores, and is now firmly established as the most popular dessert there, as it is in Spain.

1⅓ cups sugar
3 egg whites
8 egg yolks
2 11½-ounce cans evaporated milk
2 tablespoons vanilla extract
1½ jiggers brandy or rum

Put 1 cup of the sugar into a deep 10" metal pan in which the custard will be baked and put over the fire, stirring constantly until the sugar melts and turns golden. Tip and turn the pan until the bottom and sides are completely coated with the caramel, then let cool while you make the custard.

Beat the egg whites and yolks together, then add the evaporated milk, the remaining ⅔ cup sugar and the vanilla, mixing very well. Pour into the prepared pan, cover and place pan in a larger pan containing hot water. Bake in a 350° oven for about 1 hour, or until a knife inserted in the center comes out clean. Allow to cool, but turn out on platter while still warm or you will leave the caramel in the pan. Chill. This may be made in the morning and kept in the refrigerator until serving time. When ready to serve, warm the brandy or rum, light it and pour it, flaming, over the flan. Serves 6–8.

Informal Dinner for Gastronomes

CHAMPAGNE VIRGINIA HAM*
VEAL KIDNEYS EN BROCHETTE, MUSHROOM SAUCE*
PURÉE OF SPINACH AND WATERCRESS*
NOODLES WITH POPPY SEEDS* ENDIVE SALAD*
RASPBERRIES WITH FRAMBOISE*
CAMEMBERT MARINÉE* COFFEE COGNAC

The true gastronome is one who enjoys perfection, be it simple or complex. He (or she) will be happier with a perfectly poached egg than with an elaborate and mediocre omelette, with a good honest loaf of homemade bread than with an indifferent brioche. This menu is designed with the epicure in mind, for it is simple food, but when prepared carefully, there are few things better. The champagne, of course, must be of impeccable origin, served very cold and kept that way in a bucket of ice.

Virginia Ham

Serve the Virginia ham whole, but have a few very thin slices of ham already carved and leave the slicing knife on the platter. Surround the ham with parsley, and garnish with a long spiral of orange peel. You need nothing with this, but if you feel that you must, have thin-sliced pumpernickel or tiny hot biscuits.

Veal Kidneys en Brochette, Mushroom Sauce

3 veal kidneys, with fat, about 1 pound each
Salt, pepper
1 clove garlic, chopped
3 shallots, chopped
¼ cup butter
½ pound mushrooms, cleaned and sliced
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
1 cup red wine
¾ cup Sauce Espagnole or brown gravy
Beurre manié (butter and flour mixture)
Parsley

Trim the fat off the veal kidneys with a sharp knife so that ¼" ½" is left as a covering. Sprinkle them well with salt and pepper, string on the spit whole, running the spit through them lengthwise, and fasten firmly with the holding forks so that the center ones won't spin on the spit. (If you have more than your spit will accommodate this way, spit them through the middle, then fasten the ends together with long skewers.) Roast over a medium fire until the fat has pretty well melted away, and what's left is brown and lovely. They should not be overcooked—about 30–45 minutes is right for average-sized veal kidneys.

Meanwhile prepare the mushroom sauce: Sauté the garlic and shallots in the butter until wilted and just beginning to color. Add the mushrooms, stirring until they begin to soften. Then add salt and pepper to taste, the mustard and red wine. Simmer, covered, for 20 minutes, stir in the Sauce Espagnole or gravy, cover and simmer for another 10–15 minutes. Thicken with beurre manié as needed. Should the sauce get too thick, add a little more red wine. Taste for seasoning.

Remove kidneys from spit onto a carving board and carve into ½" slices. Garnish with parsley and serve with mushroom sauce. Each of these veal kidneys will serve 2.

Purée of Spinach and Watercress

3 bunches spinach
2 bunches watercress
1 clove garlic
¼ pound butter
Salt, pepper to taste
Nutmeg
Thin slices lemon

Wash and pick over the greens carefully, keeping them separate. Cook them in two pots in the water which clings to the leaves. As they wilt, turn with tongs to get the top leaves to the bottom. When thoroughly wilted, tender and still bright green, drain thoroughly, and either chop together very fine or put through a food mill. Crush the garlic a little with the side of a knife, or make small cuts all over it with a sharp knife. Add the garlic to the hot greens and mix in the butter, salt, pepper and a grating or two of nutmeg. Remove the garlic and discard. Arrange in a serving dish and reheat in the oven if necessary. Garnish with slices of lemon. Serves 6.

Noodles with Poppy Seeds

It's a wonderful combination, the unctuous buttered noodles and the tiny nutty seeds.

½ pound narrow noodles
¼ cup butter
Salt, pepper
2 tablespoons poppy seeds

Cook the noodles in boiling salted water until just tender, but not mushy. Drain well, lifting with a fork to let the steam escape. Put into a heated serving dish, mix with the butter, salt, pepper and most of the poppy seeds. When well mixed and ready to serve, sprinkle the top with the remaining poppy seeds. Serves 6.

Endive Salad

The salad should be very plain and simple. For each 2 persons, separate 1 head of endive and arrange the leaves on individual plates. Dress with a simple French dressing, sprinkle with minced parsley and serve cold.

Raspberries with Framboise

Allow ½ basket for each guest. Wash the raspberries and heap them in your prettiest glass dishes. Pour a jigger of Framboise over the raspberries in each dish and set them before your delighted company.

Camembert Marinée

1 whole ripe Camembert cheese
Dry white wine (Chablis or Sauvignon Blanc)
¼ pound butter
Finely chopped toasted almonds

Soak the cheese in dry white wine to cover overnight. Next morning, drain and scrape off the discolored portion, but leave some of the crust. Now mix the cheese with the butter, working well until perfectly smooth. Chill for easier handling and form into the original shape of the cheese. Cover the cheese—top, bottom, and sides—with finely chopped toasted almonds and chill, but remove it from the refrigerator about half an hour before serving. Serve Camembert Marinée with hot toasted water biscuits.

Light Meal for a Hot Day

CALIFORNIA SUNSHINE
SALTED NUTS
JELLIED CONSOMMÉ WITH CAVIAR*
BROILED CHICKEN BREASTS SESAME* RICE
SAUTÉED GREEN BEANS*
WHITE WINE
BROILED PEACH HALVES AND TOASTED ANGEL FOOD*
COFFEE

Here is an elegant, light yet filling meal which is just the ticket for hot weather, with the ladies in their prettiest summer dresses and the gentlemen in linen suits. Of course, the cook will have to hover over the charcoal fire for a few minutes, but not long enough to really suffer, and the results will be well worth a little brow-wiping on his part.

For pre-prandial libation on this warm day, a California Sunshine would go well, a drink that is a joy to the eye as well as the palate: Into a large wineglass put 1 ice cube; half-fill with chilled fresh orange juice, then fill to the top with iced champagne. If everything is cold enough, you can skip the ice cube, although on a really hot day, it does maintain the chill until the drink is gone.

Have the white wine—a Pouilly Fuissé, Gewürztraminer, Riesling or Pouilly Blanc Fumé—well chilled, and chill the glasses, too. (Put them into the freezer for 15 minutes or so before using. They will frost prettily when you take them out and will help to keep the wine cold.) It's a good idea to have a bucket of ice and water in which to keep the wine between pourings.

With coffee, it would be a nice touch to serve a chilled light dessert wine—say a Moscato Amabile—or a fruit brandy such as Mirabelle or Framboise. Whether you do or don't, everyone will be happy and satisfied, but not too full of heavy food, and there will be convivial conversation for an hour or two before drowsiness begins to overtake the assembled company.

Insulated cart with compartments over crushed ice keeps salads crisp and food cold on hot days, protected by plastic dome. Dome and compartments are removable; tray fits on top for serving. Shopping information for pages 119-123, page 128.

Jellied Consommé with Caviar

2 12½ ounce cans jellied consommé, or 1½ pints homemade jellied consommé, chilled until very firm
1 ounce jar red caviar
½ cup sour cream
Chopped chives (optional)

As the weather is hot, you'll probably find it easier to buy canned consommé. In the bottom of each cup put a teaspoon of red caviar, spoon on about ½ cup of the jellied consommé and top with a good dollop (about a tablespoon) of sour cream. You can sprinkle the top with a few chopped chives as a pleasant color contrast, if you like. Serves 6.

Broiled Chicken Breasts Sesame

¼ cup butter, melted
¼ cup soy sauce
¼ cup dry white wine
1 teaspoon tarragon
1 teaspoon dry mustard
6 chicken breasts, boned
Sesame seeds

Mix together the butter, soy sauce, white wine, tarragon and mustard and marinate the chicken breasts in that for 2–3 hours. Broil over a medium charcoal fire for 4–5 minutes on each side, starting with the skin side up, and basting with the marinade two or three times. Remove from the fire, again brush with the marinade, then roll the breasts in sesame seeds until they are well coated. Return the coated chicken breasts to the fire for a minute or two to brown the seeds. Serve them with plain buttered rice. Serves 6.

Sautéed Green Beans

1½ pounds young green beans
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1 tablespoon chopped chives

Remove the stems and strings, if any, from the beans. If the beans are very young and small, leave them whole; if larger, cut into 3 or 4 pieces. Boil them in salted water until just barely tender, then drain well. This may be done well ahead of time. Just before serving, sauté the beans in the butter and olive oil to which the chopped herbs have been added. This will take only 4–5 minutes. Serves 6.

Broiled Peach Halves and Toasted Angel Food

Allow 1 canned cling peach half for each person (a #2 can contains 6 or 7 halves). Put them hollow side down on a fine-meshed grill over a medium fire and let them heat and brown a little. Turn, and in each hollow put about ½ teaspoon butter and a sprinkling of brown sugar. Cut inch-thick slices of angel food and toast them quickly over the charcoal—it will take only a minute or two on each side. Watch carefully so that the cake doesn't burn; it should just be a lovely golden brown. When the peaches are thoroughly warmed through and broiled to a pretty brown color on the bottom, serve them with the slices of toasted angel food.

JUNKYARD SCULPTURE—so Far Out it's actually In. Karl Mann, young artist and gallery owner, below, has turned his energies to scouring junkyards for rusted bicycle seats, twisted bed frame, even mashed soup cans if they are interesting—whatever used, weathered object appeals to his artist's eye. He then mounts his carefully selected objects on bases and sells them as pieces of sculpture. He does not consider these serious pieces of art, but rather "documents of our culture" or, as artist Marcel Duchamp in the Nineteen Twenties dubbed them, "found objects." The point of this school of art is to show the beauty of simple, everyday objects. Mr. Mann puts no price on the artifacts themselves, but does charge from $10 to $25 for the bases, which may be of wood, metal or stone. To attest to its authenticity, each piece bears a guarantee seal signed by the junk dealer where it was found. Karl Mann, 677 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y., 10022.

Quick Gourmet Recipe of the Month

Guava Shells with Cream Cheese

These are very easy, very good, and rather sweet —a good way to end an outdoor meal. The shells come in cans, available at fancy food markets, packed in heavy syrup.

2 10½-ounce cans guava shells
3-ounce package cream cheese
2 tablespoons light cream
Toasted slivered almonds

Allow 2 shells for each person (there are 7 or 8 in each tin). Drain them, saving the syrup, and arrange on dessert plates. Soften the cream cheese by mixing well with the cream and fill each guava shell with it. Sprinkle with toasted slivered almonds and drizzle some of the reserved syrup over and around them. Serve with plain rich crackers like butter thins.

Diane's version of this Iberian favorite is made with fresh oranges and lemons, and the light, pure touch of Pompeian, to blend all of the flavors into an exquisite new combination.

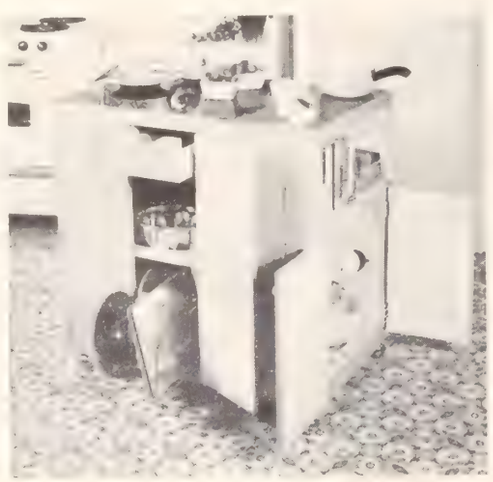
H&G's designs for storage

Four wonderful do-it-yourself stashaways that have made history



The proof of the pudding, as far as a storage idea is concerned, is practicality. What may seem an inspired notion today can turn, after a year or so in active service, into an utter dud. But hundreds of readers have assured us these four storage inventions by H&G are as good as the day they came off the drawing board. A linen closet, a family warehouse, a home file and a roaming storage cart, they solve four important dilemmas posed by where to put what. For you-do-it building and supplies information, write to H&G's Reader Service, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York, N. Y., 10017, stipulating the designs you would like.

The linen closet first appeared in March, 1959, H&G and again last September in our House of Color. The plan is applicable to any closet 3 feet wide, 2 feet deep and 8½ feet high. Or you can build it into a new house or use it as a free-standing unit in any likely spot you may have. With every cubic inch earning its keep, the closet will hold all the linen and bathroom supplies you need for two bedrooms (one double bed, two singles, two baths). Plans are available gratis.

The family warehouse has made two appearances in H&G—in January, 1961 and April, 1962. A composite of storage units fitted into a 12-by-14-foot room (a fairly average size), the warehouse is exactly that—a repository for everything from clothes to books, rugs to china. All units roll and (should you lack an extra room) the plan is quite adaptable to your attic or basement. Information is available, free, for ordering the units and fittings by mail.

The storage cart first tried its wheels in March, 1961. A versatile roaming workshop, the cart is 36 inches long, 24 inches wide and 36 inches high. Fitted with shelves and compartments, it makes a fine baking center. (The top flaps conceal a maple chopping board.) It can also wheel supplies to a barbecue or be a hobby center. Specifications and complete building instructions, 25 cents.

The home file which you saw in action in March, 1960, is a versatile, mobile cabinet tantamount to a home office. Two file drawers hold every imaginable document from deeds to canceled checks, and there is a pull-out shelf for a portable typewriter. In a painted finish, the file goes gaily to the kitchen. Laden with cook books and recipes, it augments the work surface. Without its wheels, mounted on a platform, it can make a slick sewing center. Instructions are free.

made our first discovery—Country Kitchen Antiques at 403 N. Temple Boulevard (this was not on the leaflet, but alerted by a roadside sign, we swung off 222 at Ciotti's Market). Old kitchen tools are the special stock-in-trade of Country Kitchen—they have a wonderful assortment of traditional tin cookie cutters ranging from such typical and endearing Pennsylvania Dutch designs as the heart and the tulip, the star and the angel to more prosaic rabbits, horses and gingerbread men and women—but there were also small pieces of furniture, agateware, china, glass, pewter and copper, all reasonably priced.

Back on 222 we found it was even possible to combine lunch and antiquing. At the Glockenspiel, a few miles farther along, we had an excellent meal, including a Pennsylvania Dutch specialty: rivel soup (this consists of corn and tiny rice-like pieces of dough, called rivels, simmered in stock), and then investigated the gift and antique shop behind the restaurant.

By late afternoon we had wound our way back to the Oley Valley area and Merritts Antiques, off route 662 a mile south of Yellow House, a two-story barn literally overflowing with American and imported bygones, from Art Nouveau tiles to Victorian basin-and-ewer sets and garden statuary (the excess is piled in the yard and sheds behind the barn). This is strictly a serve-yourself establishment for the dedicated rather than the desultory antiquer, where you can browse for hours through the dusty disorder, unearthing any trifle or treasure that takes your fancy, then taking it to the office to be purchased and wrapped.

A day in the open air had sharpened our appetites sufficiently to make an early dinner welcome, so we headed for Haag's Hotel at Shartlesville which specializes in the traditional Pennsylvania Dutch meal of simple, hearty, home-style food with seven sweets and seven sours. Twenty dishes were put on our table to accompany the choice of roast chicken alone; fried ham with chicken; or roast beef, ham and chicken. They included sweet potatoes, potato filling (a highly seasoned mashed potato mixture), dried fresh vegetables, pickles and preserves, pot pie (broad squares of noodle dough cooked in broth), pepper cabbage, a sweet-and-sour combination of shredded cabbage and green pepper with a vinegar and sugar dressing, and for some unfathomable reason, tapioca pudding and sugar cookies (our first surmise, that this was dessert, was wrong). Fine Lancaster milk, pie and coffee, and all you can eat, $3 a head.

Lancaster and the Plain People

Next morning we left Reading for Lancaster, choosing a route that would take us south on 122 and then west on 340 through the heart of the Amish country where the towns have euphonious names like Bird-in-Hand and cars share the road with buggies driven by ramrod-straight, poker-faced bearded farmers (a beard denotes a married man). As we had time to spare, we loitered, now and then abandoning the well-traveled highways, 340 and 30, for likely looking, unfrequented back roads where we could study the Amish farms at leisure. The change from a colorful to a neutral landscape was marked. In sharp contrast to the flaunting decorated barns of the Gay Dutch, the Amish barns and farm buildings are a sober, subdued gray or white, almost forbiddingly orderly, with a marked absence of wires from road to house. The Amish religion prohibits such worldly innovations or intrusions as electricity and telephones, radios and TV, cars, tractors and the making of graven images—i.e., photographs. (We noticed one barefoot girl in an ankle-length lavender dress, her hair drawn tightly back in a bun, using a power mower, and wondered if this was permitted.)

Rag rugs woven by Dan Boyer of Oley are typical of simple Pennsylvania Dutch crafts. Girl watching is dressed in the costume of the Gay Dutch.

In the short time we had spent in Pennsylvania Dutch country, we had acquired a taste for the local home-baked, home-smoked and home-grown foods, es-

H&G'S GARDENER'S M

1957 Convinced that all good gardens needed a centrall accessible structure for storing and servicing heavy tools, H&G designed and built The Total Tool Shed. Since then the building has been in constant use and has conclusively demonstrated its flexibility to meet continually changing and ever-expanding needs

After nearly a decade of year-round use, H&G's Total Tool Shed has demonstrated that adequate storage space of the right kind can be organized in an infinite variety of patterns that change from year to year, from season to season, even from day to day. It also proves that in storing tools and heavy equipment for seasonal use, over-organization and rigid insistence on orderliness are unnecessary.

Our tool shed stands at the hub of a rapidly spinning half-acre of intensively cultivated suburban garden and contains 8 feet by 12 feet of storage space plus a 4-by-8-foot lath-shaded plant porch. (While the shed itself has remained the same size, the young man working on the porch, above and opposite page, has not.) The floor of the shed is a concrete slab, part of which is slightly sloped beyond the doorsill to form the porch. A concrete ramp extends out from the porch in front of the double-hanged 4-foot door. The exterior walls are of half-inch marine grade plywood, 4 feet wide and 6 feet high, on ordinary 2-by-4 studs set 2 feet apart. The corner edges are trimmed with vertical half-inch quarter round. The inside walls are lined, above waist height, with two grades of perforated board: light for the back of the workbench and one side wall; heavy duty (with heavier fittings) for the two remaining sides. Translucent plastic panels above the walls on three sides accommodate themselves to the necessary slope of the asphalted roof and admit enough daylight to see by without requiring washing. The screened vents in the roof overhangs have fulfilled their planned purpose of preventing condensation when the shed is closed, and the slat porch has served admirably as a summer vacation spot and general rehabilitation center for potted and basket plants.

You can see with half an eye that there are a great many more tools in the 1965 inventory, opposite page, top, than there were in 1957, above, center and right. Yet there is no clutter in this shed, even though it is filled with equipment from floor to ceiling and a small gasoline tiller hangs from the rafters, opposite page, right. Every frequently used tool has a hook of its own—not necessarily the same hook from season to season, but one dictated by frequency of use. The heaviest digging tools hang on slanted racks, so one or another of the five spades, for example, may need to be shuffled a bit occasionally. Two power lawn mowers, two fertilizer spreaders and the big lawn vacuum are parked diagonally at one side of the floor when not in use. Two hand mowers hang against the walls.

The original open shelves are still more than adequate to hold the bottles and cans that should or need be kept from year to year. Insecticides and other poisons are stored on one small rack, touch-up paints and nontoxic preparations on another. The original plastic containers for fertilizing materials and the like have been augmented by other boxes and bags. But the heavy machinist's vise retains its place of honor in the middle of the built-in workbench.

MONTH THE TOTAL TOOL SHED REVISITED

A glance through the shed door in

reveals little change in the way space is used, but a big change in the amount of equipment stored

Today the tool shed accommodates, usefully and accessibly, five times as much equipment as it did when the construction was finished and the first tools moved in—proof that the principles on which the space was planned are as sound now as they were at the beginning. If you would like to build a similar shed, a limited number of the original blueprints are available for 25 cents (no stamps, please) from House & Garden, Dept. TS, P. O. Box 1910, Grand Central Station, New York, N. Y., 10017.

Notes for July Gardeners

The main stream of gardening slows this month and small eddies tend to form along the banks

First weekend

Flowers on the hoof. Among the eddies that form in the flower border this time of year are those of simple emptiness—places where a promising plant has conked out, where an earlier miscalculation has become evident or where a fresh spot of color would be welcome. It is, by now, too late to sow seeds of most substantial annuals and get any kind of performance from them before autumn. It is surely too late to get, or to plant, small biennial or perennial transplants for the current year. But in many regions, full-grown plants may be bought from nurseries and at garden centers—potted and ready for unchecked growth in your garden, or standing in growing fields awaiting only knowledgeable digging and resetting. Naturally the spring-flowering species are ruled out. No tall bearded iris, no delphiniums, no peonies, no foxgloves, no Canterbury bells will help you now. But you have plenty of day-lilies (all those hemerocallis varieties that normally bloom between the first of July and the middle of September), phlox (the tall garden varieties that will provide comparably tall accents to the day-lilies), asters (especially the more uniform garden hybrids), some of the aconites (monkshood) that normally bloom late this month, and of course—for later flowering—the windflowers (if you have any luck in obtaining them) and the dependable chrysanthemums. These last, so often thought of in masses by themselves, make surprisingly good fillers if you buy or develop adequate clumps or transplant several in relatively close proximity.

Your only real worry, once you locate the plants, is setting them in your garden without impeding or excessively slowing their growth. A hole dug the night before planting, then filled with water, makes a good beginning. Protection after planting with a burlap or polyethylene screen for a few days is all but essential (an inverted peach basket is excellent if unlovely). Staking is almost always required for plants more than a foot high.

Second weekend

Juniper jots. The common redcedar and its only slightly less commonplace juniper relatives are among the most useful of evergreen landscape plants. They have only two faults (although for junipers these seem to be no impediments): Their often handsome blue-gray berries are borne only on pistillate plants, and they are occasionally host to the cedar-apple rust that may also infect any members of the apple family planted nearby. (The rust can only with difficulty be controlled on the apple group, but spraying may break the alternate-host cycle on junipers if the problem arises. And once the one juniper is cleaned up, the apple will be safe.)

In any case, junipers are all but indispensable, requiring, as most of them do, only meager soil, with modest moisture and little pampering as to exposure or location. One juniper or another may be found growing freely in every continental state, and on all the seashores—few plants endure salt spray and wind-blown sand half as well. They are readily transplanted, although it is always best to buy nursery plants, especially if you wish exotic species or named forms and varieties. Most useful of all for small landscapes, perhaps, are the low-growing and prostrate forms, but some of the larger ones make fine specimens where they are given room and time enough. Here is a boiled-down list of too few favorites.

Juniperus chinensis pfitzeriana (Pfitzer juniper). Fountain form, to 8 feet tall and wide, with a flat top. Most used and abused of all.

J. c. sargentii (Sargent juniper). Almost a groundcover plant. Choice as to color, slightly less hardy than the tough Pfitzer.

J. conferta. A creeping seashore form, hardy enough north to New England by the sea, less hardy inland.

J. horizontalis. The commonest creeping juniper, with a number of forms and a greater number of names. Hardy almost to Hudson's Bay.

J. virginiana (Eastern redcedar). Very much like the redcedar of Northeastern pastures (J. communis), and similarly a native, but with greener foliage, better berries. Shapes vary from the broad squat to the tall slim and the patriarchal imposing.

J. scopulorum (Western redcedar). Not quite so hardy to winter temperatures, but more resistant to drought than the Eastern forms—and just as varied. May get to be a full-sized tree.

Third weekend

On the verge. In the spring the edging plants are never large enough to suit you. In July they are sprawling in open-faced green mats all over adjoining plants and edges of the grass, which they proceed to smother. They get in the way of the lawn mower and are generally too much of a muchness. The answer to this problem is threefold: First, be willing to sacrifice a little turf for the sake of a soft edge; second, shear back most of the sprawlers after flowering time; third, choose edging plants that remain relatively neat all season long. Alas, there are no completely satisfactory species that will behave on all counts as you would wish them to. And there are several edging or mat-forming plants without which a spring border would be unthinkable. Candytuft, of course, is one of the best. And so is alyssum (which unlike the first is not evergreen). The numerous frosty artemisias belong in the select group, as do many of the dianthus clan. All these may be sheared drastically from time to time. Among the neater ones, both more or less evergreen, consider germander (Teucrium chamaedrys) and coral bells (Heuchera sanguinea varieties). The former must have at least one shearing per year; or they may be trimmed like a small hedge. The coral bells need occasional renewal by having their rhizome-like crowns divided and reset when they push out of the ground. But they make a controlled mound of round green leaves all year and have the airiest of bell-bearing flower spikes in early summer.

Add to the good, but different, edging group some of the purple-leaved Begonia semperflorens varieties, bought as pot plants.

Fourth weekend

Geological trick. If you have a rock garden—and are lucky—your rocks are part of a natural outcrop, left very much in the same positions with relation to one another as the last ice age left them or what served the same purpose as an ice age in your neighborhood (see "Plant to Suit your Site," H&G, April, 1964). But if your case is typical, your rock garden was man-made—from the ground up. You may have done your work well, studied the natural rock formations in your region and simulated them in your garden. In the process, of course, you provided a good supply of the enriched earth veins and loam pockets and scree slopes and alpine moraines that were best suited to the plants you wished to grow. If any or all these happy conditions obtain, well and good. But if you were an impatient gardener, or if someone unskilled in the ways of rocks built your garden, it may be a contradiction in terms: in other words a jumble of stones interspersed with plants. Now is a good time to survey, simplify, renovate.

Sometimes attentive horticulture makes up for violations of geologic arrangement, but not often. Usually close attention to the nature of rocks and rock formations is vital. In every case where a rock planting is truly successful, the rocks themselves are either substantially where nature placed them or else where a cunning hand placed them to simulate nature.

This is not to suggest rebuilding a going garden, but rather the rearrangement of a few key stones to cajole the eye into finding a more natural effect. It is astonishing what a little realignment—and maybe the elimination of a few obtrusive clinkers—can do for the over-all picture, especially if the plants are good. Remembering that a rock garden is something like a picture puzzle that has been fitted together in three dimensions and then pried slightly apart, reach for your crowbar and fulcrum, spit on your hands and get busy.

pecially the hams and sausages at which Germans excel. So following directions given us by a friend, we turned off Route 30 at Hartman Bridge Road and stopped at Herr Bros., smokehouse where we had been told we could pick out and have shipped country hams and dried beef. The latter, sliced paper-thin, is a good substitute for prosciutto; in flavor it is very like the air-dried viande de Grisons of Switzerland. Cheerful Clarence Herr welcomed us, showed us around his farm and took us to the pungent loft where smoked hams and pieces of beef hung from the rafters, aging. While we were paying for our purchases, a spry old lady dressed in black drove up in an all-black automobile. She was, Mr. Herr told us, one of the Black Bumper Mennonites, who are allowed cars so long as every part, including the chrome, is painted black.

A little way from Mr. Herr's is the town of Strasburg and the Strasburg Railroad, the oldest short line railroad in America, on which you can make a four-and-a-half mile trip to Paradise and back in the gilded splendor of a chandelier-hung Victorian coach drawn by a shiny, puffing locomotive for the price of a dollar.

On our way from Strasburg to Lancaster we detoured to Rock Ford, a fairly recent restoration of the 160-year-old home of General Edward Hand, a Revolutionary War commander. A simple, spacious Georgian brick mansion with all of its original floors, cupboards, paneling and window glass miraculously intact, Rock Ford has been scrupulously furnished in keeping with the inventory of General Hand's estate. No curtains were listed for the main rooms, so the windows have been left bare. This, combined with the bold colors of the period used on the walls of the Blue and Orange Parlors, makes a fresh, uncluttered background against which the shapes and patina of the antique furniture stand out in a manner that seems very contemporary.

Lancaster has another historic house well worth visiting—Wheatland, the home of President James Buchanan, a gracefully proportioned nineteenth-century mansion that has been restored to its original state and furnished with many of Buchanan's possessions. Our period-costumed guide, handling her hooped skirt as deftly as if she had been born to it, pointed out some of the more human details of the house—the piano Buchanan gave to his niece and official First Lady, Harriet Lane; the huge wood-enclosed zinc tub in the bathroom; the portrait in Buchanan's bedroom of his young fiancée, Anne Coleman, whose tragic death caused Buchanan to forswear marriage and become the nation's only bachelor President.

Red-painted barn with hex signs is known as a "bank" barn because the entrance to the upper floor is built on level with higher land in back.

Lancaster is also famous for its Farmer's Market, which dates back to 1730 when several thousand feet of the city were set aside for this purpose. We stopped at one of the Saturday markets to pick up provisions for a picnic lunch and stayed longer than we had intended, entranced by the stalls of tiny vegetables, fresh herbs, flower bouquets, homemade preserves and pickles, bread and smoked meats, all exuding a freshness and flavor that is too seldom found in this age of overgrown, underripe, packaged and frozen produce. It was easy to understand why the favorite pastime of the Pennsylvania Dutch is eating—with such good provisions, why resist?

Leaving Lancaster next morning we drove north on 222 to the Pennsylvania Farm Museum of Landis Valley, one of the best and most naturally displayed assemblages of rural Americana we had ever seen. Old buildings, some authentic, some reproductions, are ranged in a sequence that takes you from a replica of an eighteenth-century tavern with a colonial kitchen, through barns and sheds filled with wagons, farm implements, firearms, craftsmen's tools, looms, decorative iron stove plates and household objects, to a nineteenth-century farmhouse. The farmhouse was built by the parents of George and Henry Landis, the bachelor brothers whose lifelong hobby of collecting anything and everything to do with life in rural Pennsylvania was the inspiration for the museum. In the farmhouse kitchen there are such typically Pennsylvania Dutch pieces as the dry sink and dough tray. Doors and chairs are decorated with nineteenth-century painted finishes—graining, in which a wire comb, feather or brush was drawn through fresh paint to simulate the grain of wood, and a mottled or marbleized effect produced by smoke from a burning candle.

The gallery of regional folk art on the second floor of the tavern is a vivid revelation of the Pennsylvania Dutch passion for color and for naive designs drawn from nature, both lavished on painted chairs and dower chests, tin coffeepots and wooden Lehnware eggcups. The same natural talent for decoration is seen in the flowers, scrolls and birds ornamenting plates of sgraffito and slipware (the first is a relatively simple technique in which earthenware is coated with a light-colored clay mixture, scratched with a sharp tool and then glazed; for the second, the clay mixture is trickled onto the surface with a quill or brushed on, in a design, before glazing). You also see it in the enchanting specimens of fraktur, that exuberant native extension of medieval illumination.

There could have been no greater contrast to the lively folk art of the Farm Museum than our next stop Ephrata Cloister, a cluster of wood and stone buildings with a medieval simplicity and other-worldly calm. This was the community founded by Conrad Beissel, a religious exile from the Rhenish Palatinate, for his little group of Seventh-Day Baptists. The architecture emphasizes the religious beliefs of the order: Doorways are low to emphasize humility, passages narrow to represent the path of virtues. Beds are bare planks, pillows wood blocks, all is ascetically, achingly plain. But the richness so rigorously eliminated from community life bursts forth in the illuminated manuscripts and music books executed by the brothers and sisters as a spiritual exercise. Masterpieces of artistic design, these are now treasured by collectors.

Our last memory of the Pennsylvania Dutch country was, appropriately, one of peace and plenty. We drove off Route 422 into the green, tree-shaded quiet of Conrad Weiser State Park for a picnic meal of sun-ripened tomatoes, cheese, dried beef and beer sausage and a loaf of fresh-baked Amish bread bought at a roadside stand. There could have been no better conclusion to our weekend.

INCORPORATING LIVING FOR YOUNG HOMEMAKERS

TOM LEONARD

On the cover: Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Virgil Sherrill's [illegible] pool [illegible] a brand new adjunct to their handsome graybeard of a summer house in Southampton, L.I. Soberly shingled on its exterior, the pavilion, inside, is summer's child: a circus-canopy ceiling of painted stripes is gaily buttonholed with a bouquet of white tôle lilies—a chandelier. Handy to the main-house kitchen and equipped with dressing rooms, baths, bar and serving pantry, the pool house is not only a good hopping-off point for swimmers (the pool, girdled with a grassy, crew-cut terrace, lies a few yards away), but a favored spot for [illegible] and cocktails. If it rains, a roll-down canvas awning is lowered (in winter, aluminum panels take its place) and wet bathing suits are sensibly countered with canvas on the sofa, a terrazzo floor and folding wicker chairs which, with the table, can be telescoped and stowed away in a corner closet. Mrs. Sherrill, an interior designer, planned the room herself. For more facets of Southampton's success with summer, see pages 100-115.

CASTLEFORD SUGAR BOWL

Some years ago an elderly cousin gave me this cream-colored sugar bowl of very fine earthenware and told me it had belonged to my great-grandmother. On one side it is decorated with the United States coat of arms, on the other with the head of Liberty. Can you tell its origin? There is no mark. A. B.—New London, Conn.

Your sugar bowl was made at the Castleford Pottery in Yorkshire, established about 1790 by David Dunderdale & Co., for the American trade. Originally part of a tea set, the sugar bowl dates between 1800 and 1810. I believe it is of museum quality.

BIRD-CAGE TILT-TOP

Could you tell the approximate age of my tilt-top table? It is mahogany and has a bird cage support under the top.

M. McD.—Levittown, N. Y.

Your American pedestal table with circular top of the Chippendale period was made about 1760–1775.

WORCESTER PARIAN FIGURE

I recently acquired this figure. Could you identify it from the picture and the sketch of the mark? N. L.—Kearny, N. J.

We do not know whom the figure represents, but the mark indicates it is Parian by Worcester Royal Porcelain, c. 1850–70.

ENGLISH TEAPOT

Can you identify my English teapot? It is marked HB in script letters in a rectangle.

K. P. S.—McClelland, Iowa

Yours is a solid silver teapot made by the well-known London silversmith Hester Bateman between 1785 and 1786.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

The rage for rhythm

by Faubion Bowers

"I have a reasonable good ear in music.
Let's have the tongs and the bones."
—A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM

If the cosmos was created by rhythm, and vibration holds it together, as Eastern mystics believe, the current resurgence of rhythm instruments, devices, drums and accompaniments reactivates this relationship with gusto, if not vengeance. Witness, for instance, the Ringo Starr-dom of the Beatles. He may be only a drummer boy, but he is very well the group's heartbeat and the audience's heart throb. Four years ago the New York Schools of Music had not a single student in percussion; today Arthur Cremin, director, reports that 300 boys and girls out of an enrollment of 2,000 are conscientiously pounding drums.

The drum—in all its formal manifestations of snare, kettle and timpani as well as more improvisationally in steel bands, bongos and tom-toms—has arrived. But drums are only one aspect of the excitement, only the beginning of a weird, wonderful and fanciful voyage of rhythm-making. The Ludwig Drum Company in Chicago, for instance, lists what it calls "total percussion," a panorama of some fifty-odd instruments that ranges from the concert grand marimbaphone, the size of a piano, to the tiny güiro, a hand-sized gourd notched and grooved to give a pleasing, scraping sound when "bowed" with a strip of bamboo. You have heard the güiro in Latin American bands. Or, you may recognize it in the original version of Stravinsky's "The Rite of Spring." Or you may have brought one back with you from a South American vacation, and placed it on a coffee table as a decorative objet d'art.

Instant instruments

Rhythm instruments require comparatively little study—one reason why they are so much in vogue. Even the drums yield quick results for a minimum of application. You don't need to learn notes. You can make a proper sound right away.

Percussion bands have become a fashion in grade schools, ostensibly to inculcate a sense of rhythm. Actually, they turn musical discipline into delight, not to mention supplying the children with psychological release. A teenage drummer, too, boiling over with inner rage, can rid himself of his frustration fast. "Think of the drumsticks as blackjacks . . . and the drumskin as the face of some guy you don't like . . ." are the instructions one drum teacher always gives his beginning pupils.

The dozens and dozens of other rhythm instruments are even easier to play. Claves, for instance, are nothing but two resonant sticks of wood, lightly held and hit against each other. The maracas are seed-filled gourds varnished for brilliancy of sound and shaken in the hands—the identifying sound and pulse of the rhumba. Slapsticks are V-shaped, and when snapped together, sound like the crack of a whip. Temple drums from Japan and China, carved to look like a fish and slotted for pitch and timbre, sound like popping champagne corks (they are used for that in radio sound effects). Even a dustbin lid makes music nowadays. You can strike it with your fingers or sticks according to your ability and inherent sense of rhythm. For once in this complicated world, instinct is more important than intellect.

The impulse to beat on something, to make oneself heard loud and strong, is as old as man. In Paleolithic times, it is now known, men stamped or stomped on the so-called stamped pit—a hole dug in the ground and covered with bark—and they could be heard for quite a distance. Another primeval instinct that seems to be eternally in every man is to soothe himself with noise under the control of his command. The rattle, for instance. Near the stamped pits of Neolithic times we find gourds filled with stones, seeds or teeth. For millenniums these musical instruments have rattled with good effect in cribs, in ceremonies, in dance bands, even symphony orchestras.

Historically, drums were associated with war. (We nod in that direction with our drum majors and military bands.) At one time camels with kettledrums tied to their sides were raced on desert sands and into the fracas with tribal enemies. In China, warriors were preceded by drum-beating madmen chained to oxcarts—suicide squads, so to speak. Sometimes, the army that was most deafening won the battle without an arrow flying.

Civilized use of the drums in music, however, was slow to develop. Bach, for example, thought of them only for the outbursts of

Can woman live by detergents alone?

No. Absolutely no. Absolutely, positively, unequivocally no. No, no, never. What would be the point of ruffled nighties if she could? Or candlelight with leftovers? Or Yardley soap?

Probably you already know the clean-cut joy of bathing with Yardley. How it soothes and scents without depriving your skin of its precious natural oils

But do you know you can put Yardley to all kinds of other simple disarming uses—long before it goes near the water? Well, you can. Why don't you just put up your feet and let us tell you all about them.

1. Tuck a cake of Yardley soap among your linens and lingerie. A fresh nightie scented with Yardley is an even better reason for climbing into bed than "Casablanca" on the late show.

2. You carry handkerchiefs? Good for you! Put a cake of Yardley in among them, too.

3. Put Yardley in among your little girl's rompers. (A girl can never start too soon with that sort of thing.)

4. Company's coming? Put a cake in the bathroom where it can't be missed. Yardley doesn't cost much; it just looks like it does. Everybody will think you married well.

5. You've finally unwrapped your Yardley? Don't overlook the wrapper. Tuck a little piece of it into your shoe. Put another piece into the pocket of a coat. Make everything smell nice.

6. You can't stand not using your Yardley soap? Then goodness, climb into a nice hot tub before you take cold. And take your Yardley with you.

7. Loll.

8. Wiggle your toes.

9. Grin.

10. Submerge.

11. Wash behind your ears.

12. Hum.

13. Suds all over with those incredibly rich fragrant suds. Yardley will last and last because it's "English-milled" (that means the air's all squeezed out). And the fragrance will last, too, all day, because Yardley puts pure flower oils into its soap.

14. When your soap finally gets too skinny to get a good grip on it, go out to the store for more Yardley, and think of this on the way: I can buy Yardley dusting powder, I can buy Yardley bath oil, I can buy Yardley perfume, cologne, after-bath lotion, talcum, bath salts, and bubble bath. Scented with April Violets, Red Roses, Crushed Carnation, English Lavender and lots of other marvelous things. Three cakes to the box, from $1.25. Gosh, it's nice to be a girl!

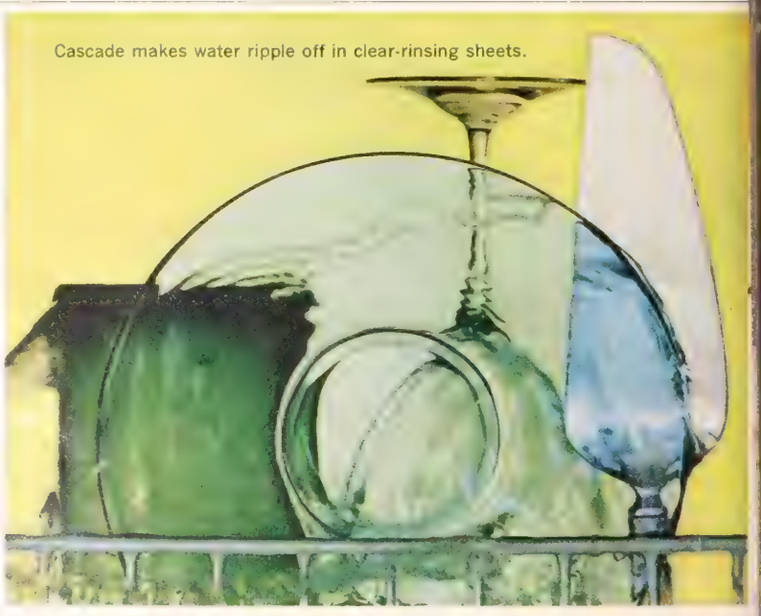
rejoicing in his cantatas. Beethoven was the first to include a drum played softly in a range of notes in key with the rest of the composition. Witness his violin concerto which could be a symphony for drums. Berlioz, in the mid-nineteenth century, apotheosized drums. In his "Requiem," he used sixteen huge kettledrums and, reversing Bach, made them a symbol of grief intoning sorrow's dirge. Liszt was chided for using in his grand "Concerto in E Flat Major" that outrageous toy, the triangle. Its insistent tinkling in the scherzo finale upset the hearers of his day—"The Triangle Concerto," they scoffed.

New sound of music

Thanks in large extent to percussion and its proliferation, music has been redefined. Once we thought of it as "harmonious sound." Today it is sound-noise. Any sound can be music, if a composer makes it so. And noise, as it exists in life, can live in the art of music as well. What about that cannon firing in the middle of Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture"? Or the clock in Haydn's "Clock Symphony"? If you doubt the meaning and beauty of noise in music, listen to any Afro-Cuban or Latin American band, to Bossa Nova or, for that matter, to Doris Day's record of "Latin for Lovers."

Now, the whole family of percussion has been released not only in jazz, but in concert, and particularly in the wild and woolly realm of the avant-garde. Karlheinz Stockhausen, today's bad boy of "new" music and arbiter of advanced experimentalists all over the world, composed "Zyklus" (Cycle) for one lone percussionist. The score calls for the performer's table to be set with high hat (a real one, to be used as a sound instrument), güiro, two wood drums, African tree drums, suspended Indian bells, side drum, four tom-toms, tam-tam, two cymbals, two triangles, four cowbells, gong and vibraphone, and soft and hard sticks of different materials —leather, felt, cloth, wood. The only omission is that historic concussion stick—the human tibia. The performer does not "play" this music (?), he realizes it, in the same way that "happenings" are realized rather than acted. (Incidentally, the composition may be realized either forwards or backwards.) If you want a shock of astonishment, you can hear it on a record—Time 58001 Series 2000.

In another direction, Columbia Records recently distinguished itself in its masterworks series with a "Percussion Spectacular" (ML5847—Stereo MS6447). This brilliant recording contains a "Cantata" for fifty-three percussion instruments by the Argentine composer Alberto Ginastera who is very much à la mode today. His composition would make Bach faint. Here the drums, helped by a solo dramatic soprano, express agony, dawn, love, night music and prophecy, all based on ancient pre-Columbian Aztec, Mayan and Inca texts. The more instantly appealing side of the record renders a "Toccata for Percussion Instruments" by Carlos Chávez, doyen of Mexican composers. This is a piece of sound-music even the children can enjoy, perhaps at a different level from adults, but with equal pleasure. The "Toccata" contrasts drums or "membrane" sounds, as they are technically differentiated, with the metallic clinks and clangs called the "idiophones." One breath of release from this tension comes with the glockenspiel. It tinkles out a fragment of a melody over the seething pulsation below and around it.



Waving percussion

Reflecting the rage for sound over music, popular jazz is forever seeking new rhythmic devices. One of the most successful in recent years was Rolf Harris' in "Tie Me Kangaroo Down." Its identifying beat came from a square sheet of thin metal waved and shaken in the air (a smaller version of the instrument that makes thunder in the opera). In Rolf Harris' hands, it sounds like lapping water or, if you prefer, a series of syncopated hiccups. Its rhythmic precision is pleasant, amusing and rousing.

The variety of rhythm instruments in use today is stupendous. Max Neuhaus, America's leading percussionist, tours with 1,100 pounds of cymbals, drums, bells, mallet instruments and wooden instruments of various kinds, and leaves about that amount at home. Among his most extraordinary instruments are a small sleigh bell ½ inch in diameter and a Swiss cowbell 18 inches square.

You can buy rhythm instruments in music stores all over the country or by mail. Some stores also lend these exotica at moderate fees for either professional or private use. The largest, Carroll Musical Instrument Service Corporation at 209 West 48th Street in New York City, has an incredible collection of more than 4,000 items, including all forms of domestic and foreign rhythm, noise- and music-makers. They doubtless have also those Shakespearean tongs and bones whose clanging and rattling accompanied lutes and minstrels in homemade music 400 years ago.

Does your home have any of these six common heating and cooling problems?

Castle Neuschwanstein, Original Owner-Manager: King Ludwig II of Bavaria
Architect-Engineers: Hofbaudirektor von Riedl, Hoftheatermaler Jank

1 In any split level, warm air tends to rise, leaving cooler air in lower rooms.

2 Separate living and sleeping areas obviously require different temperatures . . . warm in the living areas, cooler for sleeping.

3 Large glass areas cause inside temperatures to vary with outside weather changes . . . even with double-paned windows.

4 With a spread-out floor plan, sun, shade and wind in different areas cause widely differing heating and cooling needs.

5 Rooms over unheated areas such as garages or dungeons often have cold floors and walls.

6 A finished basement, because it is below ground level, places unusual demands on heating and cooling systems.

No matter how modern your castle is, chances are it has one or more of these same problems. In fact, it surely does if it was built with a medieval heating and cooling system that counts on just one thermostat to control comfort everywhere.

The solution is zone control . . . dividing your home into two or more areas, with a Honeywell thermostat in each. Just select the best temperature for each zone, and the separate thermostats will control your heating or heating-cooling system to give you all the comfort you paid for. The cost of zoning a home depends on how many zones you need. But in most cases...it's just pennies a day.

Your heating and cooling contractor can tell you all about the comfort, convenience and low cost of zoning. Talk to him before you buy or remodel. And right now, be sure to send the coupon for free literature on zoning more comfort into your home.

How to make 12 perfect Daiquiris in 30 seconds flat with dry, light Puerto Rican rum

(Now America's second most popular cocktail is a cinch to make by the pitcherful)

DAIQUIRIS make a great party drink. For two reasons. They're delightfully light and dry. And you can make them by the pitcherful in seconds.

All you need: a frozen fresh Daiquiri Mix and dry, light Puerto Rican rum.

Why Puerto Rican rum? "Because a perfect Daiquiri must be dry," say the experts, "and Puerto Rican rums are distilled at high proof for extra dryness. It's the law."

Why Daiquiri Mix? Saves you the bother of squeezing limes. And its pure tropical lime juice gives you true Daiquiri flavor.

Next time you entertain, serve Daiquiris, and have time to enjoy your own party.

30-second recipe for 12 perfect Daiquiris: fill pitcher ¾ full with ice cubes. Add one can of Daiquiri Mix, one can of water, two cans of white Puerto Rican rum. Stir and serve.

The Daiquiri is just one way to enjoy dry, light Puerto Rican rum. Try it on-the-rocks. Or try it with tonic.

Notes for August Gardeners

First weekend

Basket problems. The difficulty with hanging baskets outdoors is less a matter of making them correctly than of keeping them from getting blown, washed or torn apart. Wind, of course, is one of the worst enemies of the hanging basket, since it is constantly sucking moisture out of the root earth through the sheet-moss lining as it goes by. Wind is as much of a threat to a heavy-flowered plant as to a delicate one such as tuberous begonia or fuchsia. And don't overlook the fact that the basket can create its own wind, so to speak, or at least augment considerably the effect of an existing breeze simply by swinging back and forth in it.

When a basket is hung from the limb of a big tree (one of the most effective supports for such a plant), you may need a supplementary chain to bring the plant down to the desired level, and it is this lengthened "pendulum" that causes the trouble. Even if little actual swinging is caused, there may be a continual twisting, day and night. You can do little about this, of course, once your esthetic requirements have been met, except to watch the moisture with great care, and to use as durable plants as you can.

Squirrels are horses of another color. One inquisitive squirrel, leaping from tree trunk, branch or porch rafter, can make a shambles of a hanging basket in minutes. Not much you can do about him either, but try to scare him away.

To avoid normal washing of the earth when baskets are being watered (or rained on), the best device is a doubled-over rim of sheet moss or sphagnum held in place by the soil itself. This is also likely to remain neater longer than unprotected earth. A further help, although a general nuisance, is to use a stepladder tall enough to let you see into the basket as you apply water. Blindly watering overhead may not only wash the basket soil, but drench you with muddy water. While simply arching a stream from a hose into a basket will be fatal (placer mining), occasional syringing of the outside of the moss will help greatly to reduce evaporation.

Boxwoods. Few plants have been so drenched in moonlight and mimosa as the boxwoods of our tidewater East, notwithstanding the fact that on a midsummer's day boxwood has an aroma all its own. One of America's most storied and romantic evergreens, boxwood is paradoxically not even American. The boxwoods of our Eastern seaboard (and they are relatively unimportant elsewhere) belong to either one of two species. Buxus sempervirens, the common boxwood, is native to Europe, North Africa, and parts of Asia and its varieties are probably the most "American" of the lot. B. microphylla is an Asian species, mostly Japanese, and is both less traditionally revered and considerably hardier to cold weather.

Of both buxus species there are several distinct and distinguished variants. Probably the best of the edging types is the very compact, slow-growing B. sempervirens suffruticosa. It can be kept for years to a height and width of a few inches. Perhaps the most resistant to cold weather is what is known as Korean boxwood and may, in fact, be a form of B. microphylla koreana (or it may not: what expert do you like?). It seldom grows taller than 18 inches, but may waffle out to 4 feet or more (its sole serious fault is that it opens out supinely in heavy rain). A sister variety was originated at the Kingsville Nursery in Maryland and is known as B. microphylla compacta. And compact it certainly is.

Most of the legendary eighteenth-century boxwoods of the great tidal river country are forms, variants (varieties is too precise a word) of common boxwood. They may be cultivated in sizes and styles ranging from small hedges and parterre edges to rather imposing small trees as many as 20 feet or more high. The leaves will vary in length from a half-inch to 1½ inches. All the boxwoods are, of course, evergreen. All should be hardy, near sea level, in all the Atlantic states from Cape Cod, Mass., southward. All, but especially the sempervirens varieties, may suffer some disfigurement in late winter from sun and windburn, in midsummer from the tunneling in the leaves of box-leaf lowing bugle's horn. Ajuga, n ungraceful name at best, is the atronymic of the familiar bugle r bugleweed, which are also unraceful—or at least inappropriate—names. But the species the ames represent are among the ost hardy, durable, tolerant and ttractive groundcovers available gardeners. Ajuga reptans is the ost familiar species. Its leaves re thumb-length, oval, roughly idged and deep shiny green. In arly May, brave blue flower pikes rise from 6 to 8 inches, each loret on the tapering column carcely exceeding a quarter-inch n diameter. The rest of the season he plant spends its amazing energies making runners, most of which root freely.

The genus has no evergreen species, but the leaves come early and stay late. Never more than an inch or two high, [illegible] flowers, a single plant can cover almost a square foot in a single year, becoming a dense mat in two or three years. Any single crown or rooted runner may be dug up with anything from a finger up to a trowel, poked into a ready hole and will never know it has been moved. Ajugas—all of them—will thrive in quite heavy overhead shade, although they set most flowers in the dappled sunlight of early spring. They will grow in any kind of soil, endure any amount of winter cold, suffer a bog-like environment or very dry conditions. The only thing they will not endure without damage is foot traffic. Ideal between stepping stones, the leaves tend to scuff away if actually trod on.

There are at least two or three species having the same general appearance and function as A. reptans, but different characteristics. And all three tend to show similar variations of leaf color, from green or bronze to purple or variegated (there is one variegated form that combines green, purple, creamy white and almost pink leaves). A. genevensis has toothed, slightly longer leaves (to 3 inches or so) and taller flower spikes (to 14 inches or more in good soil). A. pyramidalis has smooth-edged shiny leaves. The last two species are not nearly so [illegible] do not spread as rapidly nor by routine runners as A. reptans [illegible]. But the dense mats they form may be chopped up like hamburger patties and will form new mats in a trice.

One easy but pleasant way of using ajuga along a shady path is to mix at random all the varieties you can lay your hands on (roadside stands sell berry-basket lumps in spring). The creeping ones will fill the gaps rapidly, and the others will make pleasant oases that enlarge each year.

Fourth weekend

The case against rain. Some of our nicest plants hate moisture in the summertime. Fundamentally, this goes for many of our winter-hardy spring-flowering bulbs. And they all (those that thrive in dry soil) relish full sun and high heat. Since these plants have no means of moving from wet soil to dry or from a shady spot to a sunny one, they have a tendency to die and disappear without a trace in a situation unsuited to their needs. The kind of hybrid tulips gardeners grow generally make some accommodation to garden conditions, suffering the final indignity only if the climate extremes are too great. But of the species that are native to regions having severe winters with long, hot dry summers are most of the tulips from which all our garden hybrids have been derived.

Many of the miniature narcissi (H&G, September, 1964) thrive where summer suns are strong, temperatures are high, rainfall is low—even though the mountains of Spain and Portugal, where many narcissi are found, is a long way from arid Asia Minor, home of the tulips. A majority of the other "lesser" bulbs also are improved by a long summer's curing, including almost all the mountain species from the countries surrounding the Mediterranean.

To achieve this happy state of dry heat in the temperate and eastern areas of this country is manifestly impossible under normal garden circumstances. But if you will take the trouble to grow some of these lovely species in pots the year-round, you can keep them beneath ordinary old-fashioned storm sash supported on simple wooden trestles. Leave the sides open, keep the sash in place, and your pots will summer nicely. Then, of course, when you wish to apply water, the source is as near as your hose.

Jordan's
GENUINE VIRGINIA SLAB-BACON

LIKE VINTAGE WINE . . . AGING MAKES THE DIFFERENCE

You couldn't find a more delicious bacon anywhere—it just isn't available in most stores and markets. The real secret is in the 300 year old traditional method of preparation. This fabulous bacon is taken from only the finest prime porkers, then dry-cured in salt and sugar. After aging, we smoke it over mellow hickory fires. This and more makes Jordan's the freshest, tastiest, most flavorsome bacon you've ever eaten. You receive it, rind off, neatly packaged in cloth, and you'll find it stays fresher longer than pre-sliced bacon. Another advantage, slice it to a thickness suiting your taste. I guarantee you'll like it best, or I'll refund your money. Try it, at only $5.95 per slab (4 to 5 lb. av.). Post-pd. You'll want to order more.

GUARANTEES CUSTOM-FITTING CLOTHES . . . OR NO COST!

A Newly Patented Single Form That Adjusts Quickly and Easily to Regular Sizes and Many Figure Variations from 8 to 20 Inclusive (Special Model for Sizes 20½-50). New . . . Easy-to-Use . . . Low Cost!

So Easy To Use Even a Beginner Can Sew Custom-Fitting Clothes Quickly and Easily. Distinguished Italian-American Designer Creates Brand New PERFECT FIT ADJUST-O-MATIC Dress Form. So Strong It Won't Crack, Chip or Break -- Stores Away Easily!

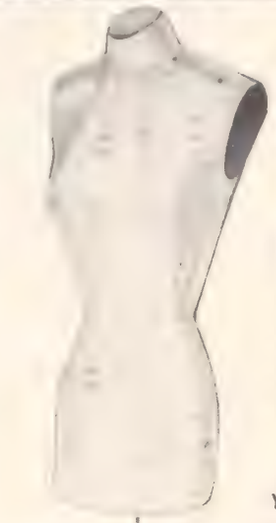
None of that dreaded home-made look. Why pay $30 or more for a dress form? You'll create professional styles and precision fit with the aid of ADJUST-O-MATIC for a fraction of the cost – Even if you never made clothes before.

If you are one of the many women who "struggle along" on guesswork without a dress form—if you've hesitated to invest in a dress form that is useless once you gain or lose weight—if you feel that an adjustable form has too many complications and not enough accuracy – if you've never sewed your own clothes before—here's exciting news for you!

Distinguished Designer Develops Most Flexible Dress Form Ever

After years of painstaking research, Luigi Cella, Distinguished Italian-American designer for 35 years, has finally developed PRECISION FIT ADJUST-O-MATIC, the one dress form so handy and simple to use . . . so easy to assemble with the clear step-by-step instructions included . . . so flexible and adaptable that you can virtually reconstruct your own figure and that of other women in your family. The Magic Secret, found only in ADJUST-O-MATIC, is a unique precision-accurate method of "dialing" your dimensions. You gently apply pressure with your fingers until your printed number shows through the magic windows in every measurement area – and ADJUST-O-MATIC virtually reconstructs your figure.

Takes The Guesswork Out of Sewing



With your ADJUST-O-MATIC dress form you see in advance just how attractive and becoming your dress, skirt, coat, or blouse will look. Now you can fit, pin, hem, baste, alter perfectly the very first time.

The simplicity of doing all this is almost unbelievable. ADJUST-O-MATIC adjusts quickly and easily to regular sizes and many figure variations from 8 to 20 (special model for sizes 20½-50). You can make literally dozens of different combinations . . . compensate for slight body defects . . . then readjust to a completely different size and shape for other women in your family.

Now whether you make your clothes or buy them, you can be fashionable, stylish, comfortable and custom-fitted at all times. Notes for the Hostess

BY DIANA BRYAN

The glorious state of our garden this month inspired me to have a buffet supper not on the terrace, but right on the lawn among the flower beds. In the spring, Don had put up a beautifully proportioned pergola at the back of the garden, and I decided that was the perfect spot for the long buffet table. First I decked the pergola with green branches which I wove in and out across the lath top and secured to the uprights with a stapling gun. We hung candle lanterns from the crosspieces at varying heights. On the table itself, I laid a simple cloth and bouquets of zinnias.

I decided on a French theme for the supper because I especially wanted to use my new plates that remind me of some marvelous restaurants Don and I have dined in when driving through France. The plates, which I found at Bergdorf

Goodman, are white matte-finish faïence, each bearing a black silhouette of the sign of a great inn: "Au Grand Frederic," "Les 3 Canards," "Le Coq en Pot," and so on.

For serving dishes, I used my classic French burnt-orange enameled ironware. A narrow rectangular dish held a terrine of ham, a shallow oval one, Brandade de Morue, that delicious concoction of salt cod with garlic, oil and cream, garnished with pitted ripe olives. I set out a chicory and mushroom salad and, of course baskets of hard French rolls. Guests ate at card tables set up around the lawn, each with its own bottle of table wine next to the hurricane candle in the center. For dessert, a macédoine of fruit flambé was rolled around on a teacart.

Summer being the time for cold soup, my friend Julie Axelrod keeps the basis for same in good supply in her freezer all season long. This is nothing more than canned cream of potato soup—but what interesting varieties she concocts with it. Sometimes, after defrosting, she blends it with a lot of parsley; sometimes she adds saffron and then garnishes with caviar. Or she may whirr it up in the blender with fresh cooked peas and watercress (small batches at a time). Best of all, she says, is to spice the potato soup with curry powder and serve it with thin slices of avocado.

This is the time of the year when we all seem to be in the grocery trucking business. Everyone is carting food to the boat or off on a picnic, or up to the mountains for the weekend. Don, with his high efficiency rating, has solved a lot of my own transportation problems. He suggested that I carry as much food as possible in semiprepared form in quart Mason jars, and put the jars, when filled, right back into the corrugated carton in which they came. So, into one jar goes a dozen eggs removed from their shells (handy to have for scrambled eggs and no worry about breakage en route). I fill another jar with diced tomatoes and a third with chopped cucumbers, lightly marinated. Into a fourth goes shrimp salad made with the tiniest variety. Another jar holds melon balls and the last, my favorite salad dressing.

Then we put the carton in our Styrofoam ice chest, which keeps everything at the right temperature during the trip, and we are all set to serve a salad lunch to our weekend guests or drop-in neighbors as soon as we arrive. In addition, I bring meat and fowl sandwiches, previously frozen. They thaw out while we are on our way, and by the time we are ready for lunch, they are succulently moist and just right for eating.

How can you tell which is

THE FRONT OF THE HOUSE?

Whole dictionaries have been written to define the myriad words that describe the myriad parts of a house. But one word that never, up to recently, needed definition was "front." The front of the house was the part that faced the street. No argument. All houses looked toward the street, and walking by, you could study their faces as you might study portraits in a gallery. (Some of the "front" doors might have been at the side, but that rarely bothered anyone.) Then came the automobile and the glass wall, prompting architects to swivel the house about and scrambling our clear unequivocal definition. If you walk down a street built up in the past decade, all you are likely to see of any house is a yawning garage plus a few kitchen windows perhaps, or merely a blank wall. Is that the front of the house? (Sticklers for literalness insist it is.)

Walk up to the main entrance, the door that greets visitors. You may find it inside a walled courtyard. Or you may find it at the end of a long covered walk that takes you past two-thirds of the house itself. Tall, handsome and welcoming the door may be, yet the wall it pierces may seem more like the end, the side, or even the inside of the house than the front. (Yet some insist the main door is always the "front" door, and by extension, the front of the house.)

Walk inside, assuming you have been invited, and into the living room. By this time you are doubtless as far away from the street as you can get. Look out the window and you will be looking at the finest view the house affords. Walk through the window (it is almost certain to be a sliding glass door), turn around and you will at last discover what appears to be the face of the house, the aspect that reveals its character. But this is not the front, say purists; this is the back.

Which is the front of the house?

Perhaps we no longer need a definition. Perhaps the house front has become as obsolete as the porte-cochere (an American misnomer to begin with), since it is the inside of the house, the private side, that counts. If you have a theory of your own, H&G will be eager to hear it. You might test it out on the house you will find on pages 82-95 of this issue.

How to make your kitchen a personal joy

Walk into anyone's kitchen today and you can sense immediately what kind of person lives there—whimsical or austere, elegant or mercurial, self-confident and imaginative or timidly in awe of conventions. Living rooms have always tended to reveal their creators, but kitchens are fairly new at this giveaway game. But since so many of the more irksome kitchen chores have been done away with, cooking has become a form of adventurous personal expression. Anyone who slaves over the pastry board or the stove today does it from choice and for fun. As a natural sequel, the kitchen itself has become more fun. And since it is the stage for a private personal activity (guests may be admitted, but their pleasure in this room is secondary), its character is more personal than that of a living room or dining room, its function, to afford a purely personal joy. Filled with materials, with ideas, with exotic flavor that its chatelaine has garnered in happy wanderings about the globe, the room gives you an incisive picture of her individual taste.

Today you can put in your kitchen, almost literally, anything you like. Such limitations as kitchen curtains, kitchen chairs and kitchen tables are obsolete. With an exhaust fan to keep them unsullied by grease and grime, any colors, fabrics, wallpapers that strike your fancy have as much right in the kitchen as in any other room. You can exercise your personal inventiveness by using familiar materials—tin, steel, wood, bricks—in new ways. Useful objects can be cast in decorative roles: bunched or hung or shelved in delightful compositions. Pretty hooks and fixtures are at hand to supplant the utilitarian cup hook, the banal ceiling light. And anything you love merely to look at—a painting, a beautiful bowl, an antique—can be given a place in the kitchen where you can enjoy it while you work. On the next eleven pages are five kitchens that reveal their owners' very different personalities, followed by a potpourri of ideas that can give any kitchen a personal stamp.

French toile and trompe-l'oeil for a gourmet cook

Whimsical, feminine and practical, Mrs. Augustine Healy's toile-lined kitchen, opposite page, is a faithful reflection of its owner, a woman with a gift and devotion for the household arts, who is, in addition, a successful businesswoman. For it was Harriet Healy who started Au Bon Gout, the shop in Palm Beach, Fla., that specializes in gourmet foods and decorative accessories, and where she still gives cooking lessons. And the minute you walk into her kitchen you know she loves France, its food, its decorative style.

The Healys have two kitchens in their Palm Beach house, one of them a large and businesslike room where cooks help out for big parties. The second kitchen is Mrs. Healy's private domain. Here she turns out perfect little luncheons and suppers, and serves them to a few guests either in the kitchen itself or on the patio outside.

With its pretty fabric, antique furniture and sliding glass doors, the room seems more like a breakfast room than a kitchen. The French toile covers the upper part of three walls and lines an alcove next to a tile-framed white brick fireplace opposite the terrace doors (see page 70). The fourth wall is paneled with white-painted boards. But the pattern motifs pervade the whole room since they have been copied on the cabinet doors, and their blue and white echoes again and again in small accessories.

At the left of the range, opposite page, is a cabinet and shelf complex that illustrates Mrs. Healy's twin skills of practicality and whimsey: The cabinet doors have painted trompe-l'oeil curtains; tools hang prettily or stand in jugs and jars, always ready for her fast hand; a rolling work table, its top half wood, half marble, is stored under the counter, dressed in a skirt of toile.

On the other side of the range, below left, is the sink, equipped with a disposal unit. In an ingenious space-stretching maneuver, Mrs. Healy had a cutting board made to fit neatly over the sink basin. Spices and staples are stored over the sink in clear plastic bins, and the cook-book rack, when folded back, makes a cover for them.

The fireplace at the end of the room is inactive now, but lends spiritual warmth and makes a happy place for plants. To the left of the fireplace in the toile-lined alcove is an old French desk, above left, where Mrs. Healy, who also writes cook books, keeps her cuisinary records. The doorway on the other side of the fireplace leads to the pantry containing the refrigerator, freezer, another sink and a dishwasher. Here, too, herbs from the garden are heaped in baskets to dry.

All over the kitchen are small touches that give the room its very personal character: the antique butter molds that serve as pulls for all the doors and drawers, the French Ferris-wheel wire egg basket that usually stands on the table (see preceding page), the table mats, opposite page—trompe-l'oeil fruit plates painted on scrubbable canvas, an old craft Mrs. Healy revived when she was running Au Bon Gout.

the soft shimmer of embossed tin for a Mexicophile

One look at Mrs. John W. Murphey's Tucson, Ariz., kitchen and you don't need to be told she is an aficionado of the Mexican colonial style. Hers is by no means a traditional Mexican kitchen, but it shimmers with a familiar Mexican decorative material—embossed tin—put to highly inventive use. (To antique collectors, the tin-faced cabinets may recall the Early American pie safes.) With the tin, the Murpheys' architect, Juan Wörner-Baz, combined ornate Mexican floor tiles that established the color scheme for the whole room. The floor of white, pink, yellow and brown has the richness of a lovely rug and gives substance to the bright lights of the tin, the stainless steel doors of major appliances, the white walls and woodwork, the pale pink marbleized laminate countertops and the treasures from the Murpheys' silver collection that are displayed in several places about the room.

Yet for all its resplendence, this is a serious working kitchen, designed to accommodate more than one cook, and generously endowed with equipment, storage space and working surface, together with an easy traffic pattern. The big central work island, above right, contributes enormously to the kitchen's workability with its drawers and shelves on both sides, its elevated spice and staple shelves (the spices themselves echo some of the rich earth colors of the tile floor) and outlets for appliances at both ends. Along the wall under the window there are long stretches of counter space on both sides of the double sink and dishwasher. Around the corner to the right is a six-burner cooking top and pair of ovens, and at the opposite end of the room, right, an alcove with table and banquette for seated work. Against the wall facing the sink stands a double-door refrigerator-freezer, opposite page, and along a passage to its left, a long row of storage closets.

A kitchen with so much pattern and gleam on every side scarcely needs decorative accent, yet Mrs. Murphey does not hide all [illegible] possessions behind closed doors. The collection of tea canisters above the spice shelf, the silver display in the alcove, the dishes arrayed [illegible] shelves all make the difference between [illegible] decorative tour de force and a warm, [illegible] room.

dark wood and patterned tiles for an antique collector

Mrs. Ralph E. Mullin has a deep feeling for the antique and for the sunny countries washed by the Mediterranean—and the kitchen in her house in Tucson, Ariz., shows it. Typically Mediterranean is the stark contrast between the white plaster walls and ceiling and the dark beams, furniture and cabinets. Typical, too, is the softening of that contrast with small-patterned dark and light tiles. The stainless steel of the sinks and appliances also helps to blend the dark and light, since its reflective surface plays back the room's colors instead of imposing an unequivocal color of its own.

When the Mullins' kitchen—formerly a tandem kitchen and butler's pantry—was remodeled by architect David Mackie, the allocation of space was reversed: The erstwhile butler's pantry was turned into a compact working kitchen, its former sense of confinement banished by the removal of the wall between the two rooms. And the big square kitchen was converted into a generous breakfast room. The wall was replaced by a peninsula cabinet, above left, which has a triple function as a space divider, a working surface for the new kitchen and a serving counter for the breakfast area. The drawers are lesigned for silver and table linens; the cupboards for dishes.

n the alcove at the inner end of the working area, a refrigerator-freezer itted like a glove. Double ovens and a cooking top were installed in he adjacent wall, above, and next to the cooking top, a wooden butcher lock counter insert for cutting and chopping. A new sink and a dishwasher eplaced the old butler's sink under the window in the outside wall, and n the breakfast area a double sink, useful for flower-arranging nd drink-fixing, replaced the former kitchen sink.

Many of the old cabinets were salvaged and, along with new ones, finished vith molding and dark stain to match the antique oak table and chairs
Mrs. Mullin wanted to use in the breakfast area. For overhead lighting, vrought-iron chandeliers were chosen to carry out the room's provincial spirit.
And Mrs. Mullin added a few of her cherished antiques—a set of ighteenth-century Basque wrought-iron marriage-feast implements mounted over he peninsula counter, two medallions of seventeenth-century Spanish stained glass that hang in the windows, an old English tavern stool, old copper and brass.

Stainless steel and pert whimsies for a designer-cook

Probably the most challenging kind of kitchen to make personal and inviting is the old-fashioned high-ceilinged tile-walled type that looks as if it belonged in a hospital or an orphanage. Designer Evelyn Jablow was faced with such a kitchen in her own city apartment, but she banished the institutional look entirely by a variety of imaginative means. One of them, surprisingly enough, was the introduction of another hard, smooth material: stainless steel. She designed tambour doors of stainless steel for her new sink cabinets, above, repeated the fluted motif in a stove hood of stainless steel, opposite page, framed the electrical box with a fluted stainless steel door, hung spice shelves of the same material below it and replaced the glass in some of her cabinet doors with brushed stainless steel to conceal the interiors. She also mounted a stainless steel work shelf under the window near the stove and designed a rolling work table with a drop-leaf butcher block top on a stainless steel frame.

This cool combination of white tile and silvery metal is pleasantly warmed by other materials and colors—ceiling and cabinets painted a pale sand, curtains of natural Belgian linen and, opposite the sink, the polished black of the stove, a restaurant model which is the only large dark mass in the room. Over the sink, Mrs. Jablow added the mellowness of old wood in a cabinet made with the doors from an old French cupboard. A drawer that once belonged to the same piece she incorporated in the stainless steel counter under the window.

A generous display of Mrs. Jablow's favorite finds in various parts of the world gives character to the largest expanse of tile wall (nail hooks were inserted with the help of a small jeweler's drill). The pot garden near the party sink in the pantry ell, above, and the numerous playful touches such as the milking stool and trompe-l'oeil chair all say: Someone lives here.

dramatic brick arches, Guatemalan inspired, for a busy young mother

Architecture may not seem vital to the success of a kitchen, yet it is architectural design that gives an unmistakably personal stamp to the kitchen architect P. M. Bolton designed for his family in Houston, Tex. Two great arches of brick, inspired by the arcaded buildings of Guatemala, give the efficient room the romantic air of places far away in space and time. Contrasting with the curves of the arches, the carefully scaled and detailed cabinets add a handsome linear pattern. And the effectiveness of the whole design is emphasized by the colors: pure hot yellow on the cabinets and vinyl floor; white on the ceiling, counters and cylindrical lights; champagne tones in the bricks; brown stain on the wooden shutters; the silvery gleam of stainless steel on the appliances.

At the same time, the kitchen is essentially simple and eminently practical. The Boltons describe it as having a doughnut plan with the hole reserved for the cook. (She can work undisturbed by through traffic.) Actually the doughnut is rectangular and has one opening at the end of the peninsula counter, opposite page. On the longest wall, under the shuttered window, above left, are the sink and the dishwasher and, next to them, the refrigerator-freezer, below left. In the adjacent wall are double ovens and at the opposite end of the room, the cooking top. On all sides there is abundant storage.

Across from the arched window, a second arch spans the peninsula counter that forms a work surface on the kitchen side, and, on the outside, a counter where the three Bolton children have their breakfasts. Standing in "the doughnut's hole," you can look across the breakfast area and through glass doors into a glass-roofed patio where a series of four more arches form a delightful perspective. This satisfying blend of romantic design with no-nonsense plan was conceived primarily for the benefit of one or two persons preparing family meals. But the Boltons have put their kitchen to the test of preparing an eighty-guest dinner, and it passed with high marks.

make a kitchen fun to work in

Any kitchen can become a personal joy if its indispensable efficiency is countered by things you love to look at—paintings or antiques, handsome bowls and jars, whimsical sketches, decorative arrangements of utensils or even food. Here is a sheaf of ideas you can adapt to your personal style—plus some helpful devices you can buy ready-made.

An old-fashioned accordion-fold hat rack would make a decorative perch for small utensils. Old racks are not very hard to find in antique shops, and now reproductions are also available.

Whimsical sketches and favorite recipes, left, are painted in muted colors on the standard cabinets in the Conrad Kahns' Beverly Hills, Calif., kitchen. Interior designers: Hunter & White Oversize metal hooks and a wooden rack hold a pretty array of containers—bowls, baskets and trays—in the Robert Sheridans' Ventura, Calif., kitchen.

Refrigerator-freezer, adorning a kitchen's dining corner with its lacquer-like jade finish and oriental hardware, looks at first glance like fine furniture. One of an outstanding variety of special-order designs by Kelvinator.

Tempting water colors of vegetables and other foods, framed to match the bamboo-lattice ceiling paper, brighten a small kitchen. Interior designer: Jack Steinberg; paintings by Renée.

Black iron skillets in a carefully composed arrangement embellish a wall in the Stephen Levys' King's Point, N. Y., kitchen. Onion and pepper strings are made of raffia. Designer: Lloyd Bell.

Bottles with ground glass stoppers, that once held cologne, have been relabeled for oil and vinegars in cooking authority James Beard's kitchen. In the huge bottle, leftover wine turns to vinegar.

A cork bulletin board might serve as the pre-framed canvas for a constantly changing composition of memos, recipes, snapshots, postcards. This one comes with a convenient little shelf.

A half-round wrought-iron rack, copied from the traditional French butcher's rack, makes a bright display of small saucepans against a wood wall.

Primitive family portraits benignly watch over a high shelf of preserves along one wall of a French kitchen.

Good-looking hooks such as the heavy metal meat hooks, left, might inspire a whole composition. They would be especially good for foods that should hang in open: cheese, onions, herbs.

A French marmite, left, holds a mixed bouquet of wooden spoons, paddles and wire whisks in James Beard's kitchen. Pewter mug is reserved for pastry brushes. Wine bottles and pots add to the Dutch still-life effect.

Filing boxes for recipes, left, may be bought decorated, or you can transform pedestrian office boxes yourself with paint, paper, shellac, fabric, découpage.

Still-used cookware ranging from Tuscan clay to Chinese copper, right, turns a tier of shelves into a miniature museum. Quarter-round shelves at left bridge the gap between cabinet and wall.

SURPRISES

Some houses reveal themselves in full measure at first glance. Other houses are more reticent. Withholding from immediate gaze the myriad pleasures they have to offer, they afford the added pleasure of delighted discovery. A cheerful example is this built-for-sale house in [illegible] Massachusetts' Cape Cod. The almost windowless stretch of rugged redwood [illegible] as you approach from the road gives no clue whatsoever to the enchanting [illegible] the heart of the house: a sheltered patio bursting with flowers and shrubs and sparkling with the glint of water in a small pool. But this is only the beginning of numerous unexpected [illegible] large and small, that you come across as you walk through the rooms. (Continued)

Built on the brow of a small hill, our house of surprises hugs its site, surrounded by pine trees that carpet the ground with their slithery needles. Beyond the house, the land tilts away gently across a golf course toward sand dunes and the distant sea. But the architect, Robert Woods Kennedy, boldly bypassed the long view, turning the house inward toward the courtyard, its private world. This kind of orientation is familiar enough in warm climates, where the self-contained, removed-from-the-world atmosphere of a central patio helps to compensate for the blistering heat beyond the house walls. But to find the idea transposed to a year-round house in variable New England comes as a decided and welcome surprise.

With the close co-operation of the land developer, Emil Hanslin, H&G has furnished and decorated the house for a hypothetical family—a couple with a son and a daughter both of college age. Our aim was to make the rooms as amiable in winter when the courtyard is an enchanting snow-dusted view in miniature as in summer when it becomes an extra room.

The house itself consists of two long rectangular sections at opposite ends of the courtyard (see plan, opposite page) which are linked by covered arcades that complete the enclosure. Gas heating units mounted under the roofs of the arcades ensure warm crossings in winter. For a family with nearly grown children, this two-part plan offers an agreeable flexibility. Each of the two generations can enjoy complete independence in its own section of the house and the whole family can share the central courtyard and the main living areas in the larger of the two sections.

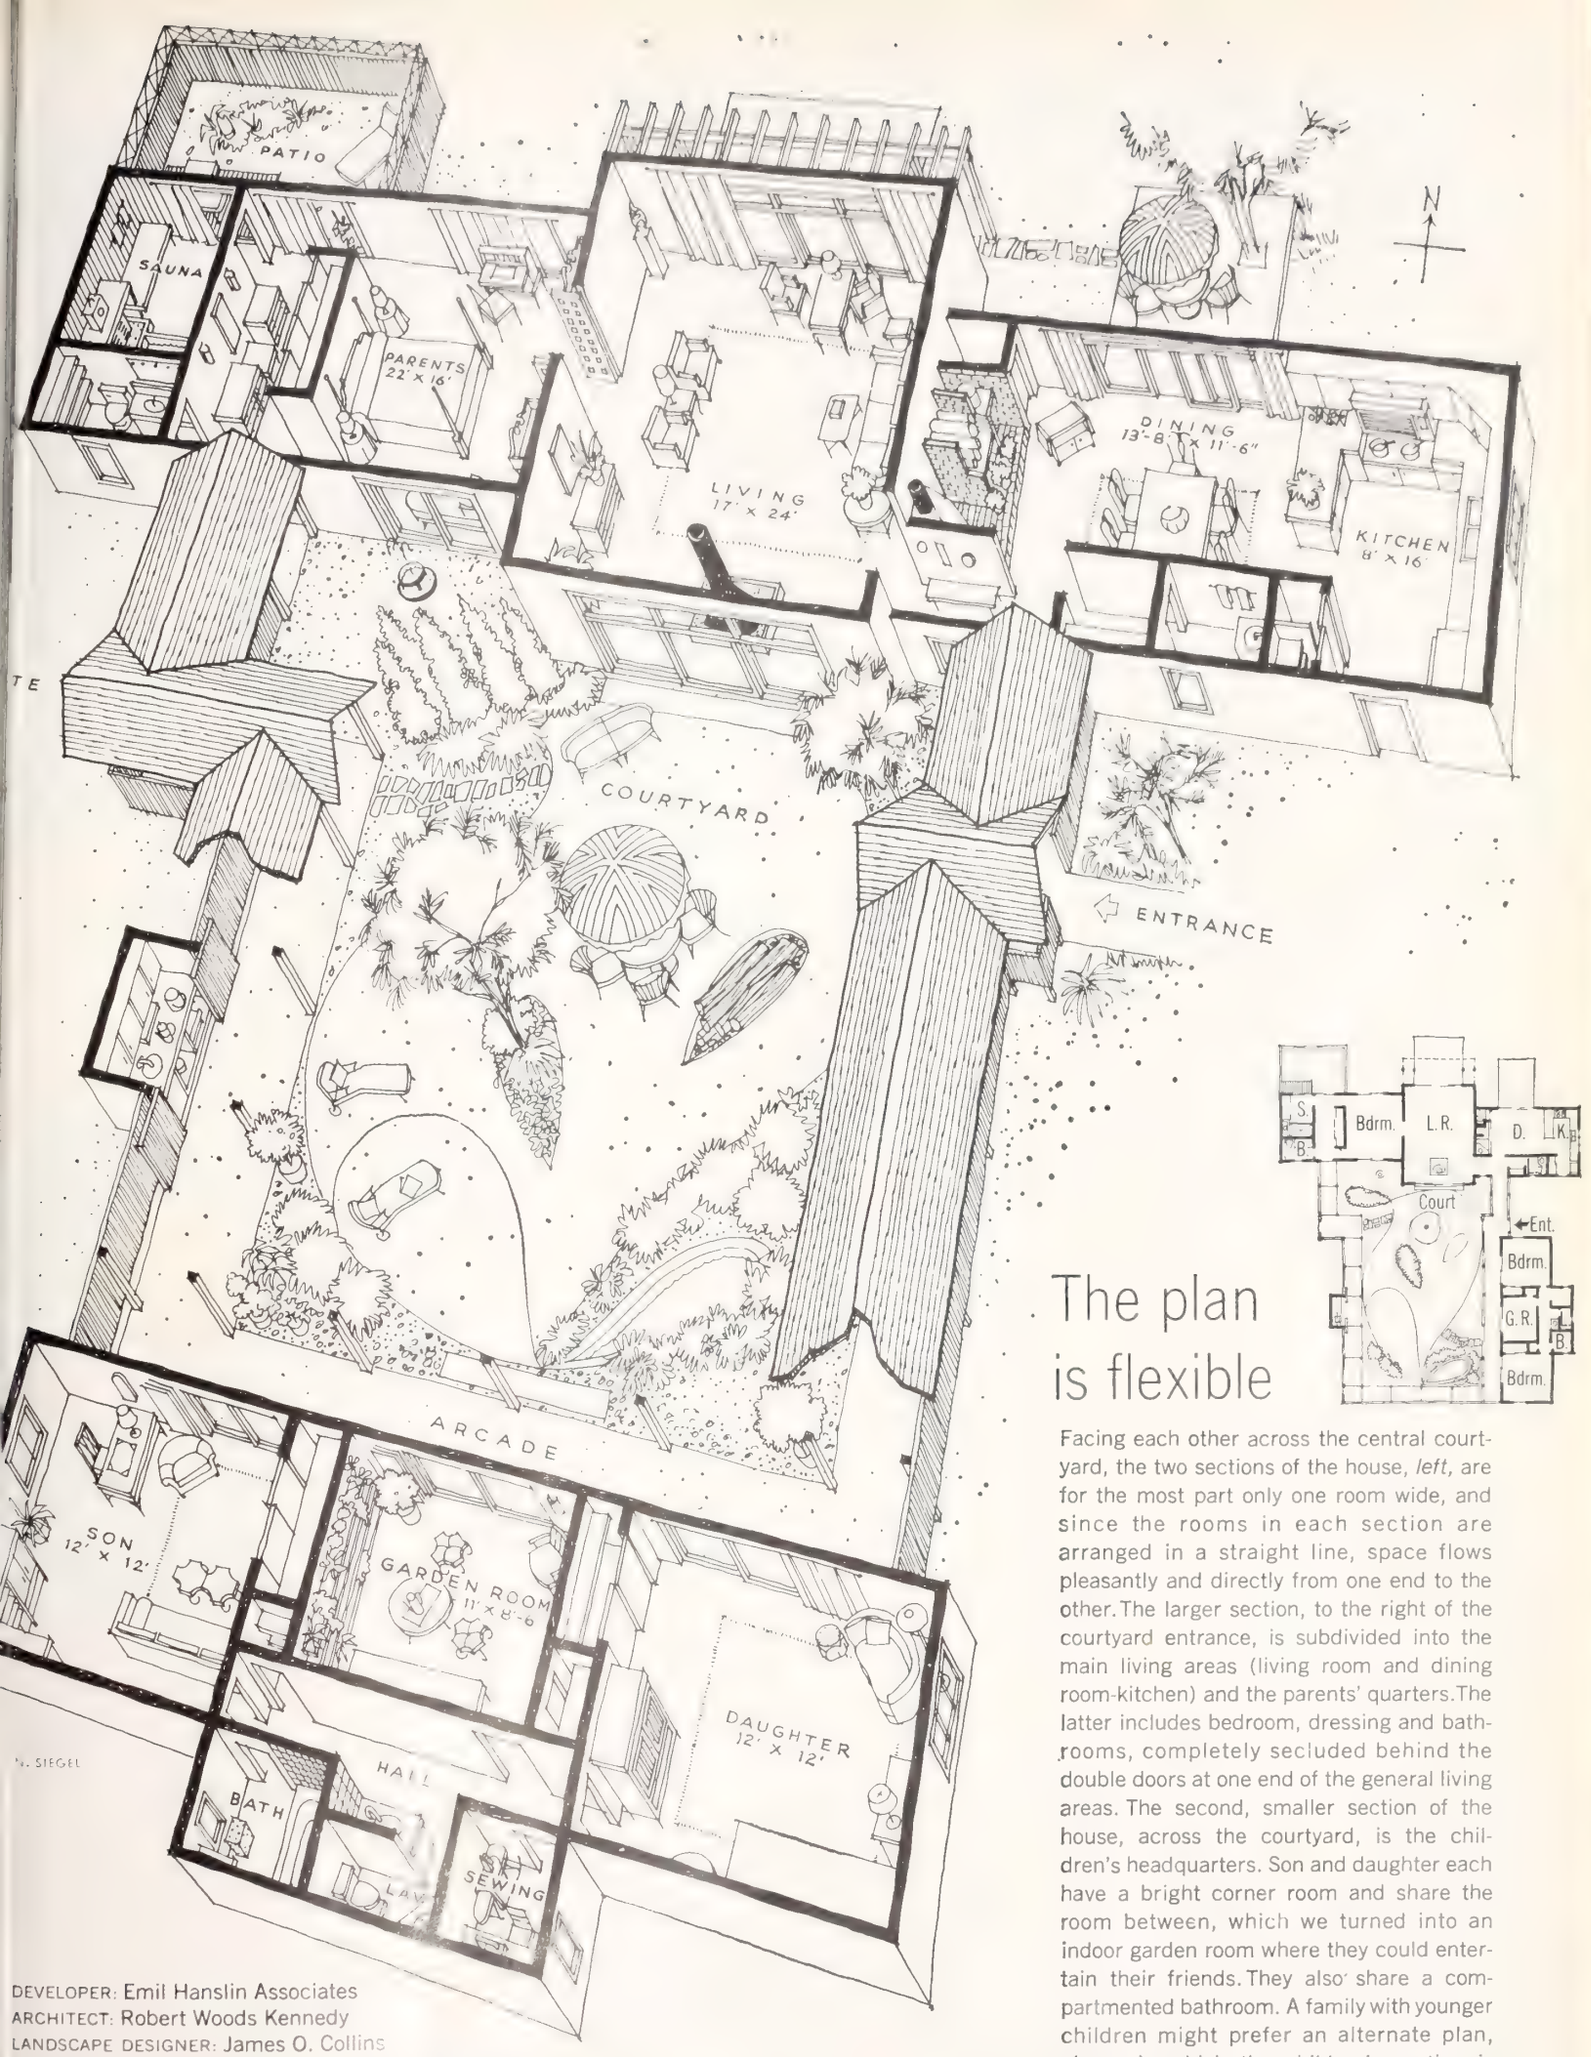
By room count and measurement, the house is not large. Yet as you move through it your impression is one of inviting spaciousness. Nearly every main room has an expanse of floor-to-ceiling glass that frames a wide view of the garden courtyard and several of the rooms also open to small terraces beyond the outer perimeter of the house. These outdoor extensions give the interiors a pleasing, constantly varied charm. The inner courtyard, particularly, is like a miniature stage where the changing seasons and changing light, condensed to small scale, affect the mood of the rooms indoors providing periodic refreshment for the eye.

The design of the courtyard itself is a delightfully free combination of paved and planted space. Within the straight-lined perimeter, there is a free-form area paved with concrete and studded here and there with teardrop shapes: a dance floor of polished concrete, an ornamental pool and a fire pit to use for barbecuing or for taking the edge off the air in the evening or on a chilly day in spring or autumn.

Because the house reminded us a bit of a Mediterranean villa, we adopted for the interiors certain facets of the Mediterranean style: spanking white walls; furnishings in clear anemone colors; crisp fabrics—starchy ginghams, chintzes. We also made frequent use of two Mediterranean motifs, tiles and rattan—both the actual materials and their patterns on wallpapers and fabrics. But we tempered these summery combinations with a good complement of cold-weather comforts: thick rugs; deep, comfortable armchairs; opaque curtains to screen the expanses of glass on gray, blustery days. And throughout the house we augmented the built-in surprises with others—newly developed finishing materials, inventive conveniences, unexpected details. They are revealed room by room on the ten pages to follow, or you can discover them at first hand when you are in the neighborhood of Cape Cod. The house will be open to visitors this fall and throughout the summer of 1966.

Individual terraces—one for open-air dining outside the dining room, another for lounging outside the living room—create delightful, easily accessible outdoor rooms that generously extend the house in summer.

SURPRISES



1 Multipaneled front door of the house itself has a finely detailed custom-made look, yet is a newly available stock door. Heavy iron chains hung at corners of the roof gutters recall an old Japanese custom of using chains instead of downspouts to channel rain in a slender stream.

2 A small but complete outdoor kitchen for alfresco entertaining is tucked under one of the covered arcades in the courtyard. Equipment includes a sink, outlets for portable cooking appliances, cabinets for storing plates, cups, glasses, trays and shelves for sun-bathing towels. Sliding barn doors entirely conceal the kitchen when it is not in use.

3 A powerful gas-driven heater installed under roof overhang of the living room terrace makes it possible to sit outdoors in the early spring or late autumn.

The plan is flexible

Facing each other across the central courtyard, the two sections of the house, left, are for the most part only one room wide, and since the rooms in each section are arranged in a straight line, space flows pleasantly and directly from one end to the other. The larger section, to the right of the courtyard entrance, is subdivided into the main living areas (living room and dining room-kitchen) and the parents' quarters. The latter includes bedroom, dressing and bathrooms, completely secluded behind the double doors at one end of the general living areas. The second, smaller section of the house, across the courtyard, is the children's headquarters. Son and daughter each have a bright corner room and share the room between, which we turned into an indoor garden room where they could entertain their friends. They also share a compartmented bathroom. A family with younger children might prefer an alternate plan, above, in which the children's section is placed at right angles to the parents' section so there is less distance between them. In this case the arcade is enclosed with glass.

A redwood ceiling, a walnut-stained floor and a strong color combination—blue, red, white—gives the living room (see shaded section of plan, above) a bright look as welcoming as the fire in the freestanding fireplace, opposite page. Composing our scheme in unconventional manner, we covered broad areas with different patterns related mainly by the fact that they share the same basic colors. On the oversize sofa went the simplest—a flower-splashed cotton—to keep the sofa's large scale from dominating the room. The lined overcurtains at one end of the room, right, are made of a cotton print in a pattern similar to that on the sofa, but accented by scarlet-breasted parrots. The window at the opposite end is curtained in a different fabric—a dusky blue semi-sheer that even when drawn allows some light to penetrate from the courtyard. The vitality of the blues is increased by potent accents of red: wool upholstery on the armchairs, lacquered lamp bases, a leather sofa pillow, the tray-top of the coffee table. And the rug was specially designed by H&G to incorporate the whole tricolor combination. (You can make it yourself from a kit—see page 134.) The New England kitchen doubles for dining by the fire

Totally different in spirit from the living room is the dining room-kitchen (shaded section of plan, above) where mellow bricks, wood and copper suggest the genial atmosphere of an old farmhouse kitchen. Yet there is nothing rustic about the operation of the working area: with a full complement of gas equipment and generous storage, it is designed not only to encourage efficiency, but to present an impeccable appearance when meals are in progress in the dining area. A peninsula cabinet, above right, that doubles as a serving counter, forms a dividing line between the cooking and dining areas without interrupting the flow of space or actually blocking the view. But the kitchen cabinets surfaced with walnut-grained plastic laminate, the copper-banded counters of white plastic laminate and the zingy red refrigerator are always pretty to look at from the dining table. We furnished the dining area, opposite page, which consumes over half the room, as if it were a separate dining room totally removed from the cooking center. To supply one big splash of color we covered the dining table with a floor-length cover of red felt banded with black (there are kick pleats at each place backed by a white felt lining). Designed to be left on the table between meals, the felt might be partly covered upon occasion with place mats or a small cloth. The seats of the tall-backed dining chairs are topped with loose cushions covered with perky black and white cotton checks—the checks repeated in bigger scale in the red and white rug, the black and white repeated in [illegible] striped cotton curtains. On a bench by the wall, we piled an armful of cushions covered with palio flags from Siena, and above it, right, hung a trio of vegetable portraits painted on old barn siding. All the kitchen appliances by RCA Whirlpool. Kitchen floor tile by Kentile.

The parents' quarters offer unexpected comforts

The plan of the parents' bedroom (see shaded section of plan, above) helps considerably to achieve a restful, uncluttered arrangement. Instead of placing closets across one end of the room, the architect used them as an island divider to separate the sleeping area from the dressing area. The back of the closets, on the bedroom side, opposite page, top, provides a broad window-free backdrop for the bed, and the wall opposite the closets on the dressing room side is left clear for chests of drawers, opposite page, bottom center. Thus the other furniture in the sleeping area can be limited to a few important pieces with a living room look. For extra storage, we stationed a pair of armoires, opposite page, bottom left, on each side of the double doors leading to the living room.

The color scheme for this room we borrowed from the traditional blue, white and yellow of Spanish tiles, choosing a tile-like motif in blue and white for the walls and curtains and saving the yellow for one big concentrated splash —the carpet—and a few bold accents. In the parents' bathroom, opposite page, bottom right, all three colors are combined in the Spanish-tile-patterned wallpaper and emphasized by stacks of towels in each color arranged on the open shelves that span one end of the room.

1 The sumptuous looking wall hanging behind the bed is not a heavy Spanish coverlet, as you might perhaps suppose, but a cotton fabric woven in a very similar pattern (the same fabric makes the bedspread). Visually the wall panel takes the place of a canopy which would have obscured the interesting shape of the peaked ceiling.
2 Even when the bedspread is turned down, sheets and blankets in a bouquet of blues blend with the room's palette.
3 Sliding glass doors on one side of room lead to a small fountained garden that extends from one corner of the big inner courtyard (see plan, above left), but is screened from it by planting.
4 Sliding doors of clothes closet in island divider are plastic laminate, each in a different color taken from the bedroom palette.
5 Dado hand-stenciled on white walls is repeated exactly on white linen overcurtains so that the tile-like pattern runs continuously around three sides of the room.
6 A redwood-paneled sauna, complete with a sunken tub, a separate shower, built-in redwood benches and all the necessary equipment, adjoins the parents' bathroom.
7 Sauna faucets, specially designed of wood, are used instead of standard metal fittings which would become too hot to touch.

In the son's room, a copper-striped wall

Since the son in our hypothetical family is away at college much of the time, we decided to furnish his room (shaded corner of plan, above) as a sitting room which he could use for entertaining his friends during vacations, but easily convert into a bedroom. For sleeping we chose a daybed with a frame across the back to support the cushions that turn it into a comfortable sofa. Since it did not have to be backed up to the wall, there was plenty of space for a corner storage arrangement, right—a combination of open shelves for books with closed cabinets for shirts, sweaters, et al., that eliminate the need of a chest of drawers. For reading and studying the young man has a generous table desk and a roomy armchair, opposite page, which we covered with fake fur in the same masculine tones as the sturdy, tweedy fabric that covers the sofa. To give the room liveliness we added bursts of bright yellow —at windows, in the lacquer finish of the desk, in one sofa pillow.

The greeny beige vinyl tiles that cover the floor of this room are combined with white tiles to make a checkerboard pattern in the hallway leading to the daughter's room. The floors of the tub compartment of the bathroom, above, have the same checkerboard pattern, but in a smaller scale produced by cutting the 9-inch tiles into quarters. On the wall next to the tub, lightweight bamboo shelves hold bath towels, some checkerboard, some plain.

For the daughter, a flowery room plus a sewing center

The colors of greenery and sunlight were brought indoors to give the daughter's room (shaded corner of plan, above) a springtime look the year-round. We chose one patterned fabric, used it three different ways—in flat panels, to make sliding screens like those in the son's room for the glass doors, left; laminated, to make roller shades for the windows, above left; quilted, to make a coverlet for the green-lacquered rattan bed. Then we added splashes of sunshine: a yellow rug for the white vinyl tile floor, a yellow loveseat for a corner where it would step up the natural sunlight that streams through the windows.

Adjoining this room is a walk-in closet which we converted into a sewing room, far left, where our young lady could enjoy her favorite hobby. We painted the walls yellow, hinged a folding ironing board to one of them, and built a roomy desk that can be used either for the sewing machine or for study.

The garden room

Located between the two bedrooms, the garden room, opposite page, is in essence a patio transplanted indoors for year-round enjoyment. With its floor of ceramic tiles laid in stripes and its other water-resistant surfaces, it can be washed down, if need be, from ceiling to floor—a decided asset in a room where potted plants are likely to scatter earth or dead leaves. The walls are covered with vinyl-coated wallcovering in a see-through lattice pattern that helps to make the room seem larger, and the same material, handled like upholstery fabric, covers the chaise longue. For seating around the wrought-iron table, we chose vinyl-cushioned ottomans with wrought-iron bases—all as indifferent to water as a duck's back. Tile from World-Wide Marble Importers Ltd.

NATURE thought

A famous English gardene

Two thousand years ago—so the legend runs—an unknown workman in Corinth set down his lunch basket on a building site, walked away, and promptly forgot where he had put it. He was not greatly perturbed, however, because it was an old basket, with a hole in the bottom. Through this hole, as the days went by, a little acanthus plant struggled up towards the sunlight, and forced its way through the lid, being obliged to bend back its leaves in the process.

Enter Callimachus, one of the most eminent architects in the whole of Greece. Walking over the building site, a few weeks afterwards, he chanced upon the basket, and was impressed by the curious beauty of the leaves, exquisitely molded by nature and made even more elegant by accident. There and then he made a sketch of the leaves, simplifying them into a formal design, but retaining the essential rhythm of their structure. Later, when he took himself to Corinth, it was this design which blossomed on the capitals that crowned the columns of the temple he was building.

And it has gone on blossoming ever since, under the name of the Corinthian column, in temples and theatres and churches, in stately homes and athletic arenas and across the façades of giant houses of commerce.

That is just one example of the manner in which flowers and leaves have found their way into the pages of history, delicately dictating our concepts of design, breathing their fragrant influence through every branch of the decorative arts. One might indeed say that whenever a decorative motif has been invented, and has established itself in any part of the world, nature thought of it first.

Consider England and the work of the Adam Brothers. Of all the decorative masters of the eighteenth century—the architects, the cabinetmakers, the sculptors and plasterers—the Adam Brothers are, perhaps, supreme. The stately homes of England are an eternal memorial to their inventive genius, and tens of thousands of American visitors have gazed in delight at their ceilings (to which Angelica Kauffman often contributed her delicate plaques), wandered up their airy staircases, studied the intricate molding of their mantelpieces. I wonder how many of those visitors have been aware that the direct inspiration for some of the most beautiful of all the Adam designs was the Garrya elliptica, the winter-flowering quinine bush that in February is hung with those long golden tassels of such exceptional grace? In the swags and festoons of the Adam décor those tassels constantly appear and reappear, and needless to say, they are still being copied. You might even find them on a modern television set.

Consider, again, France and the lily or—if you will allow me a moment's pedantry—France and the iris, for the fleur-de-lis has no more connection with the family of the lily than with the family of the hollyhock. When you buy a length of silk patterned with that charming design of fleur-de-lis that was finally standardized in the Napoleonic era, you are not looking at a lily, you are looking at an iris. You are also looking at a great deal of history. The story goes that at the beginning of the sixth century the army of Clovis I, King of the Franks, was trapped at a bend in the Rhine by a vastly superior force of Goths. And it was the wild yellow iris that saved the day. Clovis caught a glimpse of those yellow petals growing far out into the river. They told him that at this point the water was shallow enough to be used as a ford, and he succeeded in withdrawing his army to safety. No wonder that he adopted the flower as his emblem. And no wonder that in years to come, when the French were facing some of the darkest storms of their history, it was the iris they chose as a symbol of deliverance. It glittered in gold on the shields of Louis VII during the crusades of the twelfth century and it was then, presumably, that the nominal confusion began, for he called it Fleur de Louis. After him it became fleur-de-luce and finally fleur-de-lis.

But of all the flowers that have woven themselves into the tapestry of history, and by doing so have enriched the background of our daily lives, none has been more rewarding than the rose. It is more than possible that the cup from which you drank your morning coffee had a motif of roses, and that when you walked into the dining room to get it, you walked on roses. Unless you live surrounded by reproduction Picassos and unless you think that the ultimate in decoration is a rubber plant, you will find, if you look around you, that it is "roses, roses, all the way."

The reasons why the British annexed the rose as their national flower are somewhat obscure. (When you come to think of it, the reasons why the British annexed quite a number of things are equally obscure.) The Greeks might have claimed it. After all, if Venus had not run to the rescue of Adonis, and if she had not been caught in that thicket of white roses, so that her blood sprinkled them and mystically entered into the petals, we should never have had any red roses at all. The Persians might equally have claimed them. The rose is an essential element in the earliest Persian tiles, and that lovely seventeenth-century design "The Rose and the Nightingale" has been the inspiration of a thousand chintzes and wallpapers. The British, however, decided as early as the thirteenth century that the rose had British blood in its veins, and they would be more than faintly pained if you were to suggest that others had an equal right. And maybe their claim is as good as most. For the heraldic association of the rose with English royalty began in the thirteenth century, with Edward I, whose golden rose, in the pleasant parlance of heraldry, was "stalked proper." The rose of Henry IV was red, and that of Edward IV white, en soleil. But the most famous of all was "the Tudor rose," which you will find as a decorative convention in churches, ancient and modern, all over the world (and not only in churches, but in such secular establishments as cocktail bars). It doesn't look so very much like a rose nowadays, after all the mutations of the centuries, but that was how it began, with the inner row of petals white, the outer red, symbolizing the fusion of the Houses of York and Lancaster.

As an Englishman, I should be the last to quarrel with our claim to the rose, if only because of Shakespeare, who invested their petals with the magic of his poetry. Do you remember his musk rose which "over-canopied" the bank of wild thyme? And his damask . . . "their sweet commixture shown"? And throughout the whole range of the historical plays, few scenes have more power and tension than the dialogue between Plantagenet and Somerset that preludes the War of Roses.

Plantagenet: Now, Somerset, where is your argument?
Somerset: Here, in my scabbard; meditating that Shall dye your white rose in a bloody red.
Plantagenet: Meantime, your cheeks do counterfeit our roses;
For pale they look with fear . . .

So please, if only for Shakespeare's sake, let the British keep their roses!

One does not often associate flowers and shrubs with comedy, particularly in a decorative association (although I must confess that whenever I look into the face of a snapdragon, with its cheeky grin, I can't help wondering what it is laughing at). But there is one extraordinary building in England which I can never visit without a smile. This is the flamboyant, outrageous and altogether enchanting Pavilion at Brighton, which was the crowning folly of the Prince Regent in the early nineteenth century. (One has often wished that modern royalty would be foolish in the same tradition, instead of spending so much money on all those horses.) If you wander into the Pavilion kitchens, which are as vast as a setting for the "Rheingold," you will immediately be struck by the rococo beauty of the pillars, which are fashioned in the shape of gigantic palm trees. And thereby hangs a tale.

One summer day the Prince Regent, in one of his more benign and democratic moods, decided to visit the kitchens, where, as always, the fires were blazing, the spits were turning . . . and the scullions were sweating. No sooner had he crossed the threshold than he was overcome by heat and by pity. "This" he proclaimed to his entourage of mistresses "is really insupportable. None of my subjects should be obliged to work in such conditions. SOMETHING must be DONE." But it was before the days of air conditioning; extra windows would have been very expensive. And the royal purse was empty.

The prince had a brilliant idea. "Heat," so he observed to the aforesaid mistresses when they had retreated to the comparative freshness of the outdoors, "is largely a matter of the imagination." (Or words to that effect.) "If these poor scullions could only be made to imagine that they ought to be hot, that it was natural for them to be hot, all would be well. So what do we do? We create the illusion of a jungle. And we summon that brilliant architect Mr. Nash from London—he can take a special coach—and he will design for us the most exquisite pillars shaped like palm trees. The leaves must, of course, be thickly encrusted in gold leaf. And whenever the scullions look up to the ceiling, they will feel that they are in a jungle and that it is only right and proper for them to sweat. If they do not have these sentiments, they simply do not deserve to be scullions at all."

I have seen these same palm trees, in various decorative derivations, in places as far apart as the Prater in Vienna and an entertainment booth in Atlantic City. I suppose that there is something to be said for democracy; there must be, or so many obviously well-intentioned persons would not support it as a form of government. But I am quite convinced, when it is a question of decorative arts, that the world would present a far more pleasing appearance if it were exclusively controlled by a small collection of charming, spendthrift, esthetically ruthless autocrats such as the Prince Regent. For those palm trees really are very pretty indeed.

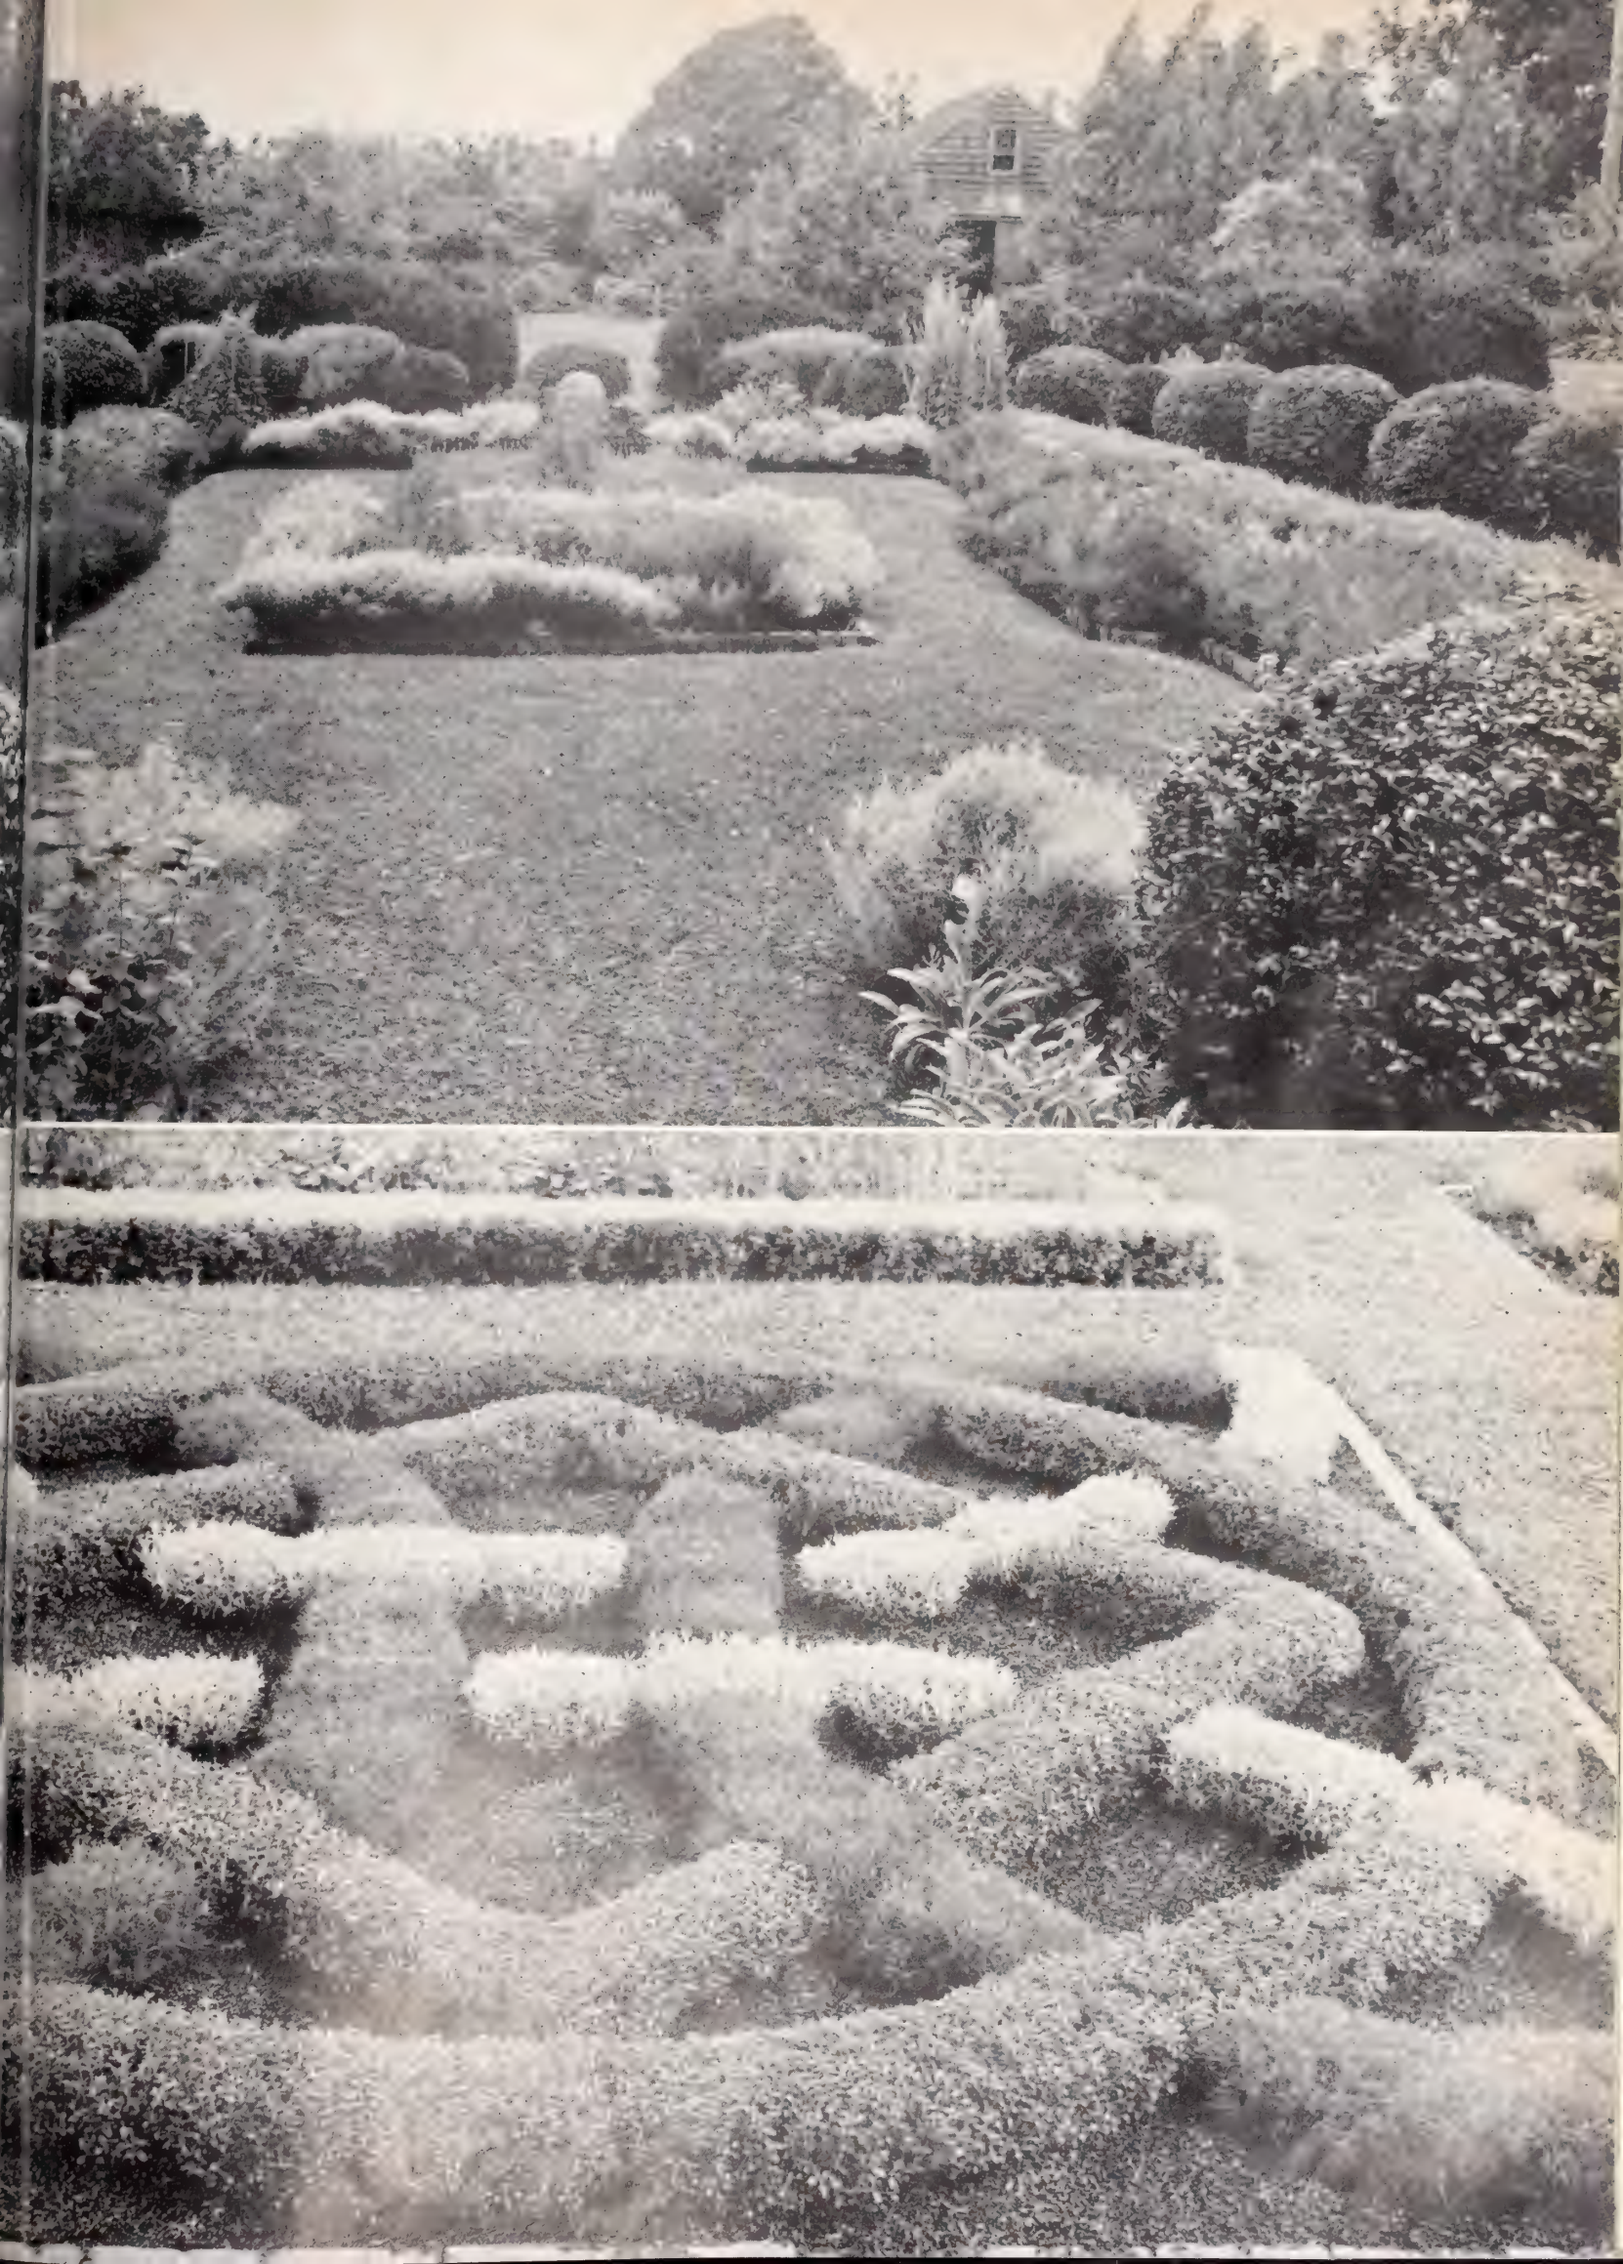
If only all history were written in flowers and petals, how very much pleasanter it would be! And if only our modern painters and designers could return to the original sources of all decoration, the blossom and the branch, how very much more beautiful would be the background of our lives.

BEVERLY NICHOLS is the author of numerous books that blend earthy advice (he urges gardening without gloves), diverting anecdotes and such admonitions as, "Listening to flowers is one of the most important of all the gardener's duties." His latest volume, "Garden Open Today" is in part a biography of the less-than-one-acre garden surrounding his rambling 1800 cottage in Surrey.

HERBS

the sweet-scented ingredients of enchanting gardens

When you first think of an herb garden, you are most likely to think of plants in their simplest terms—leafy, sun-seeking, sweet-scented. Their charm seems less dependent on the color of their flowers than the textures and shadings of their foliage. A thousand years ago, of course, an herb garden was an apothecary's shop. Not now. Yet the remembered virtues of the plants still lend special magic to a fine garden of herbs, even if no ache is relieved nor any soup pot enriched by their contributions. Under the hand of a sympathetic and observant gardener, herbs come into their own, proving adequate to the demands of almost any planting design, however intricate or simple. The key to a good arrangement lies in the interplay of leaf forms and plant masses, in the variations on the basic foliage greens (from the deepest bronze to shimmering silver) and in the matchless fragrances that a summer day brings out. It is a far cry from the opulence of the seashore borders, right, to the Euclidian severity of the knot garden, below right. But several of the same plants are important to both. They serve different purposes and are grown differently: artful naturalness in the one case becomes artfulness in the other.



Classic garden design in monochrome

The adaptability of the familiar herbs to a variety of planting patterns is matched by no ordinary list of flowers. In the seventeenth-century garden of the Halsey Homestead at Southampton, N. Y., above right, the design elements are the same as they might be for any hardy borders of comparable scale. Yet the effectiveness of the planting—to the eye, at least—depends on a single color, green. Bold green, modest green, dark green, light green, big waves of green and the smallest of green ripples. It is a rich palette with which to paint a pretty summertime picture. The species themselves are those you might have found in the cloisters of a medieval monastery and might also find today in the collection of any practiced herb fancier. They range from the amiable lamb's-ears at the right of the garden's entrance to the drifted sages, artemisias, lavenders in the farther beds. Edgings include thymes and sweet woodruff and santolinas. In all, more than twenty-five species are represented, and in this instance the mainstays are true perennials, some achieving the solid status almost of shrubs. While the Homestead itself was restored by the Colonial Society of the town, plantings are the province of the Southampton Garden Club, whose members maintain them with both dedication and virtuosity.

Knot garden where geometry is king

All is pattern and artifice in classic English knot gardens. In an Illinois version, right, over-all symmetry is modified by the over-and-under intricacies of the "strings" in the knot. Obviously flawless grooming is essential, and with such grooming a considerable variety of normally rather wayward herbs may acquire a starchy precision. Among the best of them, and the deepest green, germander takes close shearing well, as do santolina and artemisia at the lighter end of the spectrum. The pebbles help to set off the actual knot—keeping it both tidy and well tied.

SUMMER LIVING IN SOUTHAMPTON

where the spirit is traditional, the manner, sparkling and varied

Over the past two centuries, we have developed in this country a distinctive variety of summer community with a delightful pattern of living as unique as it is appealing. To Newport, Seal Harbor, Watch Hill and numerous other balmy spots from Maine to California, the same families, residents for decades, come back year after year to savor each other's company in a style that is changeless yet ever-changing, buoyant yet relaxed. One of the most engaging of these summer havens is the onetime Long Island whaling village of Southampton. Most Southamptonites—although not all—are New Yorkers, and see almost as much of one another during the winter months as during the hot ones. But in summer, their bloom is brighter, and since from June to October they are happily captive in a dune-capped cul-de-sac, their community feeling is intense and exceptional. In a town as tightly knit (if more dynastically) as Grover's Corners, dowagers hobnob with young marrieds, splendid old gaffers play golf with youngsters, and the interim set—long since post-debutante, post-stag line, but still enormously gay—plays with everyone. They all enjoy one another and go to great pains to prove it by entertaining constantly—occasionally with considerable formality in flower-decked canvas pavilions pitched on the lawn, more often at the drop of a hat on verandas, terraces or smiling pool houses like the one on our cover.

In leafy lanes that once wound around the first settlers' "dugout" houses (actually roofed-over cellars) the present generation dwells well above ground in an astonishing variety of homes. Some live in rambling old shingled "cottages" (shingles are seaside Long Island's coat of mail) made more rambling still by additions which, although contemporary, never smack of newness. Others summer on stilts in sleek new beach houses, and others—if they are remodelers—in anything from a made-over carriage house to a converted windmill.

In Southampton, the senses are constantly titillated by the salty tang of the air, the almost quivering blueness and greenness of sky and foliage, the lake-borne flotilla of swans, the echoing smack, whang and clack of the golf course, the tennis courts, the croquet fields. For this is an athletic community—and a lively one. From one end of town to the other, the ambiance is one of gaiety—a brilliant whoosh that sweeps past the Historical Museum with its relics of days when the Shinnecock Indians taught settlers how to harpoon the whales so nobly aspout in the nearby Atlantic; through Job's Lane with its glittering boutiques; on to the Meadow Club where tennis is played on turf or The Bathing Corporation (like their grandparents, Southamptonites don't swim, they bathe); then up one lane or another to a house where tea may be passed by a footman or to one where guests may feel quite free to grill their own hamburgers. (Continued)

Luncheon in Southampton is a pretty rite, and, in fair weather, alfresco. A table circling a tree, opposite page, is Mr. and Mrs. William K. Laughlin's favorite spot in which to regale guests with a cold bird, a colder bottle and a view of the rose garden—an enchanting acre guarded by topiary swans and foxes clipped from privet. Before lunch, the guests may have bicycled to services at the Church in the Dunes, 1; wheeling down Main Street past the planters of white petunias, 2, it wears like boutonnieres; past the Halsey Homestead, 3, oldest house in New York State; past the Emperors' Sculpture Garden, 4, an allée of noble Romans outside the Parrish Museum. Later in the day, aficionados, 5, gather for a whack at the town's favorite and most cutthroat game—croquet. All week long (but never on Sundays), Caldwell Alexander's shop in Job's Lane, 6, offers everything from giant paper flowers to Meissen cats.

Southampton loves to entertain

Sometimes parties are as intimate as a luncheon for four

Mrs. Harold Johnson sets the scene in a flower-laden bay added to one end of her dining room to give more light, more elbowroom for the plants she loves. The black slate floor makes good greenhouse sense; flowers and view make the bay also a heaven-sent spot for breakfast. Interior by McMillen

Dances are preceded by candlelit dinner parties

Instead of a traditional dining room, Mrs. William Green has a glass-walled, brick-paved, chintz-hung garden room big enough for two tables—one oblong, one round, six-seaters each. Tonight, someone is giving a dance, and Mrs. Green is giving a dinner. Guests will have sherry or something livelier on a porch around the corner, then sit down to the panoply of service plates and finger bowls—a formal dinner in an informal room, and, by contrast, fun.

Southampton party fare runs a comprehensive gamut that never excludes the hot dog, but keeps the freezer full of pheasants. A sudden rage for swimming pools (the beach is chilly at night) has engendered a fancy for poolside barbecuing. If you have a pool house, you picnic in it. If you have a garden, you seat your guests at umbrella-shaded tables and give them lobster salad. Bridge luncheons may also be seated and stately, with as many as twenty ladies bid. Dining takes place anywhere—on porches, in garden rooms or dining rooms, their seating capacity stepped up with extra tables.

Mrs. Charles P. Lineaweaver hangs her garage with an arras of striped French ticking overprinted with roses, rolls out a green canvas rug and peppers the walls with pictures. There her guests have cocktails, then go into the house for the lure of the evening—pheasant hash.

Mrs. T. Markoe Robertson fills her house with red and white carnations, her porch with balloons, and invites guests to dance to the jive of a jukebox (rented). Famous for her children's parties, she always offers a surprise package by way of a clown or a magician or ponies to ride. She loves fancy dress routs, but gives them only when she thinks of a theme provocative enough to get her guests into something more imaginative than a sailor suit.

A popular party formula is the "pro-long-gay"—a bit of punning from the French to label a (presumably) 6:00 to 9:00 party that begins at 7:00 (golfers arrive at 8:00) and lasts until midnight. Guests span the fifty years between 20 and 70, and there is always music (usually a trio) and a buffet supper. Food polished off, the younger set goes off to a discothèque, and their aunts and uncles very sensibly make for home. The eight big weekends between the Fourth of July and Labor Day are the ones that count. Then, any hostess lucky enough to have cornered a Saturday night gives a dance if her house is big enough. If it isn't, she hires a tent (or reserves one of the clubs or the Shinnecock Inn) and gives a dance there, having taken care to engage one of two favorite orchestras the winter before. (One band is supposedly booked for the next twenty years.) If she has a debutante daughter, as many as 600 people will be invited to a "smash"—an all-night, cork-popping ball as beautiful to look at as chintz-hung tents and mountains of greenery can make it. Not that such evenings are sacred to debutantes. Mrs. William K. Laughlin recently had a tent pitched over her famous rose garden and let her guests sup amid the intoxicating fragrance of Crimson Glories and Neige Parfums. No one has beat that yet.

On gala nights, a formal setting and a frolicsome spirit

When the Robert McGowans give a pre-dance dinner, they turn their pretty dining room into a little café—elegant, [illegible] sizable enough to offer thirty-odd guests unjostled comfort. Auxiliary tables (each [illegible] six) and folding chairs painted turquoise blue are brought out of hiding and set up in each corner. The big table seats ten—more if it must—and like the Delft and Lowestoft [illegible] the walls, all trappings [illegible] the Creil butter plates are [illegible] Blue or another—plus white.

Sunday evenings, families dine alone

Faced with the long drive back to New York, Southamptonites who work in the city are apt to entertain no one on Sunday nights but themselves and a house guest or two. The Hugh Virgil Sherrills are such a pair, often sit down to such simple fare as spaghetti and salad. But Mrs. Sherrill believes in feeding the inner man, too, and few hostesses set a prettier table. Fond of blue and white, she uses brightly checked mats and napkins, pansies clustered in white doves around an old glass epergne, funny little blue-and-white hens for salt shakers, and—for a soft shift in color as well as a potable—individual decanters of wine at each plate. Interior design by McMillen, Inc.

Southampton remodels: three adventurous examples

A private theatre into a house

Lovingly, Southamptonites are apt to speak of their town as having no architecture, an epithet undeserved by Mrs. Archibald Brown's house, left, perhaps because it was once a private theatre approached, then and now, through a forecourt guarded by carved falcons. Remodeled by the late Mr. Brown (who designed the original theatre), the auditorium is now a splendid living-dining room, above, 40-feet square with a 20-foot ceiling. In what could seem almost awesome space, Mrs. Brown, using her skill as a professional interior designer, has arranged her furniture to create a charming sense of intimacy. All pictures are hung below eye level, and she has permitted herself only one bravura gesture—a Raoul Dufy tapestry that adorns one wall, opposite page, like a great banner. Understandably, she can say of the room, "I am never lonely here."

SCHNA

Carriage house into beach house

In more leisurely days, Southampton went calling in gigs and phaetons kept (with Dobbin) in carriage houses built that inventive souls today find them wonderfully amenable to remodeling. Mr. and Mrs. Sander Simon's "Barn Yesterday" top, was redesigned by architect George Militizer. Half old, half new, the dual-level living room, above, is partly beamed and bisected by a row of supporting posts. Dark slate paves the entire area to make the two halves an entity. The same black-and-white damask sparkles in each section and sand gray barn siding lines the entire perimeter. Since the windows are working doors to terraces, they and their transoms are screened with louvers to control privacy, sunlight, air. Interior design: Janet Martin Langerman; Koral Bros., contractors.

A windmill into a manoir

From one end of the Hamptons to the other, the skyline is periodically broken by the perky silhouettes of windmills, one or two still grinding grain, some (pretty relics) just sitting, and others, like Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Nadal's, left, augmented and lived in. Octagonal, the Nadals' old curio . . oved an interesting shape for a downstairs study and, above it, the master bedroom. Then a new ve- . nda was wrapped around the mill like a village-square bandstand. The rest of the house consists of wo added wings, one of them, above, the living room. In glossy contrast to the sleepy rusticity of the ex- terior, the room is extremely urbane with quite a lot of French furniture and a dashing black-and-white fl . . Symmetrically, there are two of everything—sofas, tables, chairs and garden-framing windows.

Some houses are quiet, others—lively

On an L-shaped porch, a cucumber-cool card room

Designed for relaxation broken only by the excitement of five aces, Mrs. William Greve's card room was once an old side porch—screened, shingled and sedate. This regime came to an end in an inspired outburst of refurbishing. Walls were plastered, a new floor laid, a glass wall of sliding doors installed. Dressed in white and soft new greens, the room now billets the card table at one end, a conversation group at the other—an overflow from the corner for the living room next door. Interior designer: McMillen, Inc.

Glass-walled beach house: brave as a ship

Colorful and cock-a-hoop amid Southampton's shingled stateliness, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Addison's dune house is as contemporary as modern design can make it. On the upper floor (the four children's bedrooms, playroom, second kitchen lie at foot of staircase) is a living-dining-cooking room paneled in cypress, floored in oak—the two cool, glimmering woods spiced by the sizzle of brilliant color in the fabrics on the chairs and dining banquette. Interior design: John Rieck of Valerian Rybar.

The out-of-doors—a mural hard to beat—is as much a part of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd W. Jefferson Jr.'s living room as the peaked and raftered ceiling. The sweeping glass wall makes the landscape of garden, terrace and lake almost a room next door.

Designed in the Southampton dowager tradition, a somberly paneled living room became a debutante when it was treated to an ocean of white paint and vivid linen. The quaint bays make balcony seats for the garden-stage outside. Interior by Pierre Scapula.

Each house has a different motif: heirlooms or closeness to nature, relaxation or practicality

Once a nondescript little porch, now a grass-girdled beauty, Mrs. Harry Payne Bingham's garden room is a winning argument for the coolness, charm and elegance of a room decorated entirely in blue and white. Interior design by McMillen, Inc.

Two wonderful beds, old testers that had belonged to the Robert McGowans' respective families, are so sentimentally cherished that a new wing was added especially for them. Unidentical but harmonious, they are the oldest twins in town.

Family heirlooms in Mr. and Mrs. William K. Laughlin's entrance hall say "come in" in the earliest American way. Old porcelain, old portraits and two salt-of-the-earth chairs spell the welcome. Interior design: Mimi Rand of Jessup, Inc.

Its color scheme inspired by a heavenly old Persian rug, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Johnson's library has persimmon woodwork (one of the rug's reds, stepped up) and a chintz chosen for its almost identical palette. Interior design by McMillen, Inc.

But they are all akin in spirit and in the way they capture and hold the lighthearted essence of summer

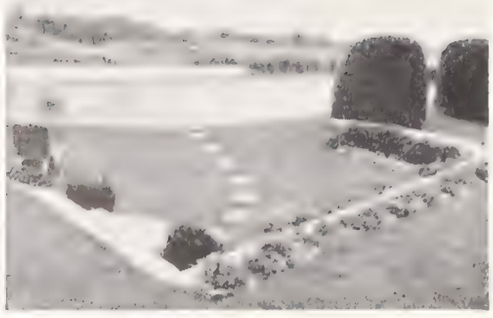
The central pavilion of a tripartite house, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel W. Lufkin's dining-kitchen is new, slick, sturdy as nails —and fun. Glass fiber curtains laugh at sun and salt air. Architect: E. C. Collins III; contractor, M. Clarke Smith.



Poster-vivid, Ambassador and Mrs. Angier Biddle Duke's little sittin room manages to be cozy, crisp and comfortable—all at one time. Although designed for relaxation, the room could never harbor torpor: The color scheme nips ennui in the bud.

Southampton loves its gardens

A swimming pool by the sea may seem like abundance in the midst of plenty, yet it is typical of the Southampton scene. Mrs. Paul Abbott's pool lies between her garden and the dunes.

Gardeners' pleasures are by no means limited to grand effects or to horticultural exercises. A counterclockwise helix of English ivy is but one of the decorative and cheerful conceits that make the William Greens' brick-paved veranda eminently livable.

Privet, right,—the topiarist's delight in this moist sea-buffered climate—flanks gateway to Mr. and Mrs. William K. Laughlin's garden.

The monumental glory of the Laughlin garden, below, is brought into sharp focus by an asymmetrical corridor of clipped privet. At the base of the graceful shaft, memorializing beauty, are a few crowns of hosta; half-hidden, a solitary fern.

Some people clothe trellises with vines, some make vine trellises. The Greens, just with ivy, do both.

The sometimes fine, often playful art of potted topiary acquires a grace and mobility that the Laughlins make an entertaining point of.

The true gardener's hand and eye are revealed in Mrs. Abbott's flower borders, right. The windproof hedge sets the height of the plants, but knowing skill arranges the flowers like a summer necklace.

OPPOSITE PAGE:

The sign and seal of Southampton's summers are the flowers that brighten its airy rooms and hospitable terraces. Amid garlands of rose bushes in Mrs. William Greve's garden, a broad pavement of simple brick spread out at turf level is accented with huge hand-turned pots of French hydrangeas and less explosive but equally colorful pots of pelargoniums.

All right—how quiet is "quiet"? It's a hard question to answer. Let's just say that when you turn on an all-new Frigidaire Custom Imperial Dishmobile, you know it's on . . . but it doesn't 'take over". So we say it's "quiet". Now, noise has always been a problem with dishwashers and you may be wondering how Frigidaire engineers licked it. Glad you asked. Part of the story is insulation where it counts. Part is the mounting of the water pump. And part is the fact that we've been able to do away with the noisy drain valve. Are we telling you more than you can remember? GOLDEN 50 ANNIVERSARY

The light, summery wines of Alsace

by Hugh Johnson

If it weren't for Germany, France could claim to have a full hand of all the best table wines in the world. For great as the white wines of Burgundy are, great as the white wines of the Loire are becoming, there is one style of wine at which France plays second fiddle to Germany. It is the delicate, grapy, subtle type of white wine from vineyards under a northern sun. The wines of Alsace are France's answer to Germany on this score.

France's northernmost vineyards are those of Champagne. They produce wine which, although different in character, is of the same family as Burgundy. The same grapes are grown on similar soft-contoured hills. The wine has plenty of alcohol and body; age improves it; it is dry, full of flavor, modestly scented. Compare it with German wine: They are worlds apart. The German is sweet-and-sour, a nosegay, a long, light, thirst-quenching drink. Even the sweetest and richest of German wines keep a refreshing balance of acidity. German wine smells sweet, like flowers; French has the rich sappiness of something good happening in the kitchen.

Like most of the greatest of Germany's vineyards, the vineyards of Alsace lie on the slopes of the Rhine valley and their wines are in the German style, with French character and flair. All are white and all are dry, yet within those limitations a wide variety of flavors makes one or another of them suitable for drinking on most occasions. They range from the sort of wine you like to take down to the beach and cool at the water's edge—a light open-air drink—to a graver matter for sipping and discussing with friends. Above all they are the wines of summer. There is no better drink in the middle or at the end of a hot day.

Alsace is an electrifyingly pretty country despite a history of wars, treaties and more wars. Before the last World War, which left two-thirds of its villages in ruins, it must have been even prettier. Narrow lanes wind among the green vine-stakes, hop-pole tall, to farms with an almost unreal, Disney air. There is a stage-set perfection in Colmar, the great wine market town, and Riquewihr, the most perfect survival of a wine village. Cobbles, courtyards, flowers, fountains are everywhere.

The recent history of the country, which is what concerns a wine lover, has been the change back, in practice as well as spirit (for the French spirit in Alsace never flagged), to being French. The Franco-Prussian war of 1870 left Alsace a French province in German hands. It had no German inclinations; it was booty of war. Germany provided a market for the bulk of its everyday wine, in German called konsumwein and in French vin de consommation, which in a country as ideally suited for wine-growing as Alsace is all too easy to make. Inferior strains of vine, notable for nothing but a vast profusion of grapes year after year, could profitably be grown. No encouragement came from the Germans, who had no wish for a rival to their own great vineyards of the Rhine and Moselle and no intention to improve quality by care and the planting of noble strains.

In 1919, when France reclaimed her own amid great rejoicing, the situation changed. The market lay to the west instead of the east. France was, and is, awash with ordinary, anonymous, undistinguished and very cheap wine. The Midi produces it by the tanker-truck load. Alsace could not compete in a market where her products were no better, less known and slightly more expensive than the popular brands. She had to resort to quality as her way out of a commercial crisis.

The first step to be taken was the replacing of the old coarse, heavy-bearing vines with superior strains. The greater care that was needed in the vineyards, combined with immensely reduced harvests, made it a difficult business requiring faith and the leadership of the established wine merchants.

The noble vines planted in place of the old varieties were the Riesling, the Traminer, the Muscat, the Pinot and the Sylvaner. Of these, the Riesling is the acknowledged king. All Germany's greatest wines, without exception, are Rieslings. It is not a prolific vine and it needs nursing at times, but it can take winters with months of frost, it ripens slowly and steadily into the mellow days of autumn and the fruit that it yields has a delicacy with which nothing can compare.

How will vodka coexist with the fresh, tart taste of Sprite® Exuberantly!

Try a Mad Russian. The alive, yet subtle taste of Sprite gets vodka doing things you never knew it would do. Sprite is tart. Naturally tart for adult tastes. Add a slice of lemon or lime. And a cherry. (Red, of course.) Will the Mad Russian become the People's Drink? Definitely da!

Iced Food Cook Book

By June Platt

Although cooking connotes the use of heat, there are certain culinary processes that are wholly or partially dependent on its antithesis—cold. Without the aid of refrigeration and ice, many of the world's most delectable dishes would turn out dismal flops. The frosty breath of the refrigerator is essential for the light perfection of puff paste and chicken Kiev, both of which must be well chilled to prevent the butter inside from breaking through. Ice is the agent that sets aspics and mousses and gives the necessary crispness to those wafer-thin slices of potato that, when immersed in hot fat, become the magic mouthfuls known as pommes soufflées. Heavy cream whips faster and stays fluffier if beaten in a bowl over a second bowl of ice, and the delicate mixture of ingredients for quenelles, the feather-light savory dumplings, needs a frosty jacket of ice in order to attain the correct consistency. Ice speeds up or simplifies many normally time-consuming cooking processes. It takes infinite patience to skim the liquid fat from hot stock, but after a short sojourn in the refrigerator, it can be removed in a solid sheet. If ice cubes are substituted for part of the water in a fruit gelatin dessert or crushed ice is blended into the mixture for a mousse, the setting time is that much shorter. There is even a no-cooking method of making jams and jellies, using pectin, in which the fruit and sugar are frozen together.

In summer, the cool sparkle of ice makes a meal infinitely more inviting and also helps to hold foods at the perfect serving temperature. Beds of crushed ice keep seafood and salads fresh, raw vegetables crisp, butter curls unmelted and soups refreshingly cold (or try the Spanish trick of putting a cube of ice directly in a bowl of gazpacho as a great antidote to the blazing heat of an August noon). One of the most tempting of summer lunches is a meal built around a cold soup and a cold fruit or sherbet dessert, with a light, hot entrée such as sautéed filets of sole or a cheese soufflé.

Crushing ice, once a laborious process of putting cubes in a heavy canvas bag and beating them to smithereens with a mallet, has been short-cut by modern electric ice crushers or crushing attachments for electric blenders, which do the job in seconds. Even the ice itself can now be frozen in all kinds of svelte forms from tiny half-inch dice to balls, slivers and sticks, to fit the container it will grace. (If you want to strengthen, rather than weaken, the flavor of iced beverages, you can freeze clear coffee, tea or fruit juices into shapes and use these, instead of ice cubes, as the cooling touch.)

Soups

Cold Beet Soup

1-pound can small beets
1 quart or more fresh buttermilk, chilled ice cold
¾ teaspoon dill salt or to taste
1 tablespoon finely cut fresh dill

Place the beets, a few at a time, with their juice in the electric blender and blend to a smooth liquid. Stir in the chilled buttermilk. Season with dill salt. Mix well and chill thoroughly. To serve, pour into well-chilled cups and garnish with the finely cut fresh dill. Serves 6–8.

Cold Cucumber and Buttermilk Soup

2 small tender cucumbers, peeled and finely diced
16 ice cubes
⅔ cup seedless raisins
1 quart fresh buttermilk
Dill salt, coarsely ground pepper to taste

Place the cucumbers in a bowl, cover with the ice cubes and allow to soak for about 2 hours. Meanwhile wash the raisins and cut [illegible] with scissors. Chill 6 soup cups in the refrigerator until ready to assemble and serve. Drain the cucumbers thoroughly. Add the raisins and buttermilk. Season with dill salt and coarsely ground pepper. Serve [illegible]. Serves 6.

Potage Batwinia

6 ounces (about 1½ cups) stemmed, thoroughly washed spinach
6 ounces (about 1½ cups) stemmed, thoroughly washed sorrel leaves
2 tablespoons butter
1 small tender cucumber, peeled and finely diced
1 small white onion or 1 large shallot, finely chopped
2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh tarragon leaves
Ice cubes
1 cup dry white wine, chilled
Salt to taste (about ¾ teaspoon)
½ teaspoon dill salt
1½ teaspoons sugar

Combine the spinach, sorrel leaves and butter in a covered pan and cook slowly over low heat for about 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Cool. Place the cucumber, onion and tarragon in three separate containers and add 1 ice cube to each of the containers. Cover the containers tightly with plastic wrap and refrigerate them until ready to use.

Place the cooled greens in the electric blender and blend to a purée, or rub them through a fine sieve with a wooden spoon. Add the white wine and 1 cup cold water and stir well. Season with salt, the dill salt and sugar. Chill until ready to serve. Then add the prepared chilled cucumber, onion and tarragon with the melted ice from the containers. Crush the remaining 4 ice cubes, add to the soup and stir well. Serve at once in well-chilled bouillon cups. Serves 6–8.

Cold Shrimp Soup with Dill

1 pound small shrimp, cooked, shelled, cleaned and cut fine
1 large, tender young cucumber, peeled and diced
1 cup peeled, seeded and diced ripe tomatoes
1 quart fresh buttermilk
Salt, pepper to taste
Dash Tabasco
2 tablespoons finely cut fresh dill

Mix together the shrimp, cucumber, tomatoes, buttermilk and seasonings, cover and chill overnight. To serve, pour into well-chilled cups and garnish with the finely cut fresh dill. Serves 6–8.

Iced Curry Soup

3 tablespoons butter
½ tablespoon flour
1 tablespoon curry powder
6 cups hot clear chicken broth
3 egg yolks
1½ cups light cream
½ teaspoon powdered ginger
1 tablespoon chopped parsley

Melt the butter in the top part of a double boiler over low heat. Stir in the flour and curry powder. Add the hot broth gradually, bring to a simmer and cook 10 minutes. Beat together the egg yolks and cream and gradually stir into the hot broth. Place over boiling water and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened, about 2 minutes. Remove from heat, add the ginger and stir well. Cool and refrigerate for several hours. Serve in chilled bouillon cups, garnished with parsley. Serves 6-8.

Orange Soup

3 cups strained fresh orange juice
(about 9 oranges)
6 tablespoons sugar
1½ tablespoons arrowroot moistened with 3 tablespoons cold water
3 tablespoons or more Curaçao liqueur
3 ice cubes, crushed
6 orange sections cut from 1 large navel orange

Heat orange juice to boiling point. Add sugar and moistened arrowroot. Stir for a moment over low heat until thickened. Remove from heat, cool and add the Curaçao. Refrigerate until ready to serve. Place the crushed ice in 6 chilled bouillon cups and fill with the cold soup. Garnish the cold soup with the orange sections and serve at once. Serves 6.

Seafood

Lobster Mayonnaise comme à Paris

3 cups mayonnaise
1 cup very finely chopped watercress
1 tablespoon chopped fresh tarragon
3–4 pounds cold boiled lobster, shelled and cut in uniform pieces
6 tomatoes, peeled, quartered and chilled

Pack a glass bowl in another bowl of crushed ice. Combine 2 cups of the mayonnaise with the watercress and tarragon and arrange in the glass bowl. Reserve about 1 pound of the most perfect lobster pieces and arrange the remaining 2–3 pounds lobster over the mayonnaise. Cover with the remaining 1 cup mayonnaise and then the reserved lobster. Garnish with the tomatoes. Serve with French or Italian bread and a very well-chilled white wine. Serves 6–8.

Cold Boiled Codfish with Cold Saffron Sauce

2 white onions, sliced
2 carrots
Several sprigs parsley
1½ cups dry white wine
½ teaspoon thyme
1 bay leaf
¼ teaspoon peppercorns
4 teaspoons salt
4-pound slice fresh codfish
6 large ripe tomatoes
2 leeks
2 medium-size onions, finely chopped
6 tablespoons olive oil
1 [illegible] garlic, crushed
1 [illegible]
1 teaspoon powdered saffron
2 lemons
1 tablespoon chopped pa[illegible]

Prepare a court bouillon by combining the white onion, carrots, parsley sprigs, 4 cups of the wine, 4 cups water, thyme, bay leaf, peppercorns and 1 teaspoon of the salt in an enamel fish boiler and boiling about 30 minutes. Wash the fish in cold water, wrap in cheesecloth and place in the hot court bouillon. Cook gently for about 10 minutes. Cool in the liquid. Discard cheesecloth, remove skin and all the bones, keeping the fish in as large pieces as possible. Arrange fish on a platter and cool. Wrap platter in wax paper and refrigerate until ready [illegible]

To make saffron sauce, dip the tomatoes in boiling water and then remove the skins. Cut the tomatoes in half crosswise and remove the seeds. Place in a wooden bowl and chop fine. Remove green part from leeks, split white part in half lengthwise and wash carefully. Chop finely. Cook the chopped onions and leeks in the olive oil until they just begin to brown, stirring with a wooden spoon. Add the garlic and the chopped tomatoes. Cook 2 minutes, then add the remaining ½ cup white wine and ½ cup water. Season to taste with about 3 teaspoons salt, or less if you prefer, the coarsely ground pepper and saffron. Simmer 10–15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove the sauce from the heat and allow to cool before placing in the refrigerator to chill thoroughly.

When ready to serve, pour the cold saffron sauce over the fish and garnish with the lemon and parsley. Serve with crisp French bread, whipped butter and a good dry well-chilled white wine. Serves 6–8.

Poisson à la Mexicaine

1 fine striped bass, about 7–8 pounds when cleaned
2 lemons
½ cup olive oil
8 large ripe tomatoes, sliced
3 yellow onions, finely sliced
4 large green peppers
6 4½-ounce can pitted ripe olives, drained
3 bay leaves, crushed fine
2 teaspoons thyme
2 teaspoons paprika
¼ teaspoon cayenne
½ teaspoon coarsely ground black pepper
2 teaspoons salt
1 small bunch parsley
6 ounce can tomato paste

Have the fish cleaned and head removed at the fish store; keep the head but have the eyes removed. Wash the fish carefully in cold water, then rub the inside with 1 cut lemon. Rub the bottom of a shallow baking pan 15″ by 9″ by 3½″, preferably enamel-lined, with some olive oil and place the fish and the head in the pan. Trickle ⅓ cup olive oil over the fish. Cover the fish with the sliced tomatoes, then add the onion. Split 3 of the green peppers in half, remove the seeds, wash and slice finely. Place on top of the onion. Add the olives and sprinkle with the bay leaves, thyme, paprika, cayenne, pepper and salt. Tuck the parsley into one corner of the pan.

Bake in a preheated 425° oven for 1 hour, basting occasionally with the juice from the fish. Remove from the oven, carefully lift fish with two spatulas onto a fish platter and gently pull off the skin. Turn over and remove skin from other side. Now carefully lift the flesh off, exposing the backbone; pull this away. Also pull out all the bones you can find, then replace the flesh you took off and reshape the fish as neatly as possible on its platter. Drain any juice there may be on the platter and add it to the vegetables left in the baking dish with the skin and bones. Add the tomato paste. Fill the tomato paste can with water, stir to dissolve any remaining paste, and add this to the vegetables with 1 more can water. Place the pan over low heat and simmer gently for 1 hour or a little longer, stirring occasionally to prevent the mixture from sticking.

When the fish has cooled, wipe the edges of the platter carefully and cover platter with wax paper to prevent the fish from drying out. Chill fish in refrigerator.

To make the sauce remove and reserve all the olives. Remove the large fish bone and head and strain the vegetables through a large sieve placed over a large pan, pressing with a wooden spoon or potato masher to extract all the juice and pulp possible. Cool and chill this sauce in the refrigerator, watching it carefully. When sauce is about to jell, skim off fat. Spoon sauce over the fish and refrigerate until the jelly has set. Cut the remaining pepper into thin rings and the remaining lemon into quarters. Use green pepper rings, quartered lemon and the olives to garnish fish. Serve with a crisp green salad with a tart French dressing. Hot buttered French bread is good with this, and a good, not too dry, well-chilled white wine. Serves 6–8.

Shellfish in Aspic with Watercress Sauce

This pretty, cool summer dish is a variation of one of my favorite recipes from "The June Platt Cook Book," published by Alfred A. Knopf.

1 pound fish bones and trimmings
1 tablespoons butter
1 small onion, chopped fine
Bouquet of parsley, bay leaf, ½ teaspoon thyme
5 peppercorns
2 cups white wine
Salt, freshly ground pepper to taste
½ pound raw white fish, finely chopped
1 leek, white part only
1 egg shell, crushed
1 egg white, slightly beaten
1½ tablespoons unflavored gelatin
1½ dozen shrimp, boiled, deveined and shelled
½ pound cooked crab meat, well picked over
1 pound boiled lobster meat, cut into bite-size pieces
2 bunches watercress
Juice of 1 lemon
1 tablespoon tarragon vinegar
8 tablespoons olive oil

To prepare the fish aspic, sauté the bones and trimmings in the butter for a minute or two, add the onion, bouquet and 4 peppercorns and cook gently 8 minutes longer. Add 2 cups water and 1½ cups of the white wine and salt to taste. Simmer, skimming carefully, for ½ hour, then strain through a fine sieve. Add the white fish to the fish broth. Split the leek lengthwise, wash carefully and cut crosswise. Add to the broth. Add the crushed egg shell and the slightly beaten egg white. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly, and simmer 20 minutes. Strain through a fine sieve lined with a clean wet cloth. Dissolve the gelatin in the remaining ½ cup wine and stir into the broth. There should be 2½ cups of the mixture. Cool and refrigerate until the aspic is about to set.

Melt a small amount of this aspic slightly and pour into a 6-cup fish mold. Tip the mold around to coat it evenly with the aspic and refrigerate until set. When set, place 1 large peppercorn in the eye of the "fish" and secure with ½ teaspoon aspic. Split the shrimp lengthwise with a silver knife and place in the bottom of the mold to imitate the scales of the fish. Then dribble a little more of the aspic over the shrimp and chill until set. Pack the mold with the crab meat and lobster meat. Melt the remaining aspic slightly and gradually spoon it into the mold. Refrigerate until firm.

Just before serving, prepare the watercress sauce. Wash and remove the big stems from the watercress. Shake dry and chop fine. Add to the lemon juice, vinegar and olive oil. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

Run a knife around the edge of the fish mold and turn mold upside down on a chilled fish platter. Place towel wrung out in hot water on top of the mold for a few seconds and remove mold. Serve immediately accompanied by a bowl of the watercress sauce. Serves 6.

Quick Tuna Fish Mousse

2 tender cucumbers, peeled
Crushed ice
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
¼ cup bottled clam juice
Juice of ½ lemon
½ teaspoon dill salt
7-ounce can water-packed white tuna, well drained and flaked
½ cup light cream
1 tablespoon or more finely cut fresh dill
½ cup sour cream with chopped dill, salt and pepper to taste (optional)

Pack the cucumbers in crushed ice. Soak the gelatin in the clam juice in the top part of a small double boiler. Place over boiling water until clear and dissolved. Cool slightly, add the lemon juice and dill salt and place in the electric blender. Cover the blender and run for 40 seconds, add the tuna fish and continue blending. If necessary, turn off blender, and pull mixture from sides of container to center with a rubber scraper. Remove the cover and gradually add the light cream, followed by ½ cup crushed ice. When the ice has melted completely and the mixture is smooth, pour immediately into four ½-cup fish molds, rinsed in cold water. Refrigerate until set, or for about 20 minutes.

In the meantime, score the cucumbers lengthwise with the prongs of a silver fork and slice fine. Unmold the fish molds on individual chilled plates, garnish with the sliced cucumbers and sprinkle with the dill. Serve with or without sour cream to which you have added additional fresh dill, a pinch of salt and some freshly ground pepper. Serves 4.

Tuna Fish and Cucumber Gelatin

1 tender young cucumber, peeled
1 cup crushed ice
1 package celery flavor salad gelatin
7 ice cubes
7-ounce can water-packed white tuna, well drained and flaked
1 cup Sour Cream Dressing

Bury the cucumber in the crushed ice for 1 hour. Drain thoroughly and cut into small cubes. Prepare the gelatin with 7 ice cubes following the directions on the box. Refrigerate until about to set. Mix the cucumber and tuna fish together and place in a chilled 1-quart mold. Spoon the gelatin over all and refrigerate until firm. Turn out on a chilled plate and serve accompanied by Sour Cream Dressing. Serves 6.

Sour Cream Dressing

⅔ cup heavy cream
½ teaspoon salt
1 scant teaspoon Dijon mustard
¼ cup tarragon white wine vinegar
¾ cup sour cream

Whip the cream until stiff, season with the salt and stir in the mustard. Add the vinegar gradually. Fold in the sour cream, mixing thoroughly. Chill and serve. Makes about 2 cups.

Molds make the mousse, aspic or ice cream

Half the delight of a molded summer dish is its shape. Hanging on the wall, large copper molds for seafood aspics and mousses in appropriate aquatic designs, small molds for prettily shaped individual gelatin salads or desserts. On the counter, tin ice cream molds all equipped with covers to protect their contents during freezing process. The forms range from the traditional tall bombe mold and round melon mold to tiny fluted, spiraled or pineapple-patterned shapes. Shopping information for the cook book on page 132.

Meat and Poultry

Cold Chicken Curry

2 young roasting chickens, 4–5 pounds, cut for fricassee
10 tablespoons butter
1 jigger brandy
2 large Bermuda onions, quartered and thinly sliced
Salt, pepper
2 tablespoons curry powder
2 cups heavy cream
2 lemons, parsley for garnish

Wash and thoroughly dry the chickens. Melt 8 tablespoons of the butter in a large frying pan and brown the chicken pieces lightly on both sides. Place an iron cocotte over a very low flame or, better still, on an asbestos mat over a low flame and add the remaining 2 tablespoons butter. As they brown, transfer the pieces to the cocotte. When all the chicken has been transferred, heat the brandy, pour over the chicken and set ablaze. When it has burned out, cover the chicken with the sliced onion and sprinkle with salt and pepper.

Add ½ cup water to the frying pan and stir over a low flame to melt the brown residue in the pan to a clear gravy. Pour this over the chicken, cover tightly and simmer gently until the chicken is cooked through and about to fall off the bones, about 1¼ hours. By this time the onion should be cooked down and the chicken immersed in buttery juices. Sprinkle the chicken with the curry powder and baste well. Remove from the heat and cool until the chicken may be handled. Then remove the chicken from the cocotte and take the meat from the bones. Discard the skin, gristle and bones. Cut the breasts in half lengthwise and lay these symmetrically over the bottom of an oblong glass 6″ by 10″ by 2″ baking dish. Add the rest of the meat, distributing it evenly over the breasts.

Add the heavy cream to the onion and buttery juices remaining in the cocotte. Stir well, place over a low flame and heat just to the boiling point but do not allow the cream to boil. Taste for seasoning and add more salt if necessary. When the sauce is heated through, place a colander over a large pan and strain out the onions. Press gently with a wooden spoon to extract all the cream. Pour this creamy sauce over the chicken in the dish. It should cover the chicken completely and fill the dish. Cool, cover with aluminum foil and place in the refrigerator until jelled and set like custard.

When ready to serve, run a knife carefully around the edge of the dish. Dip the dish into a shallow pan of hot water for a few seconds to loosen the bottom, then turn out carefully onto a large oval platter. Garnish with quartered lemons and crisp parsley. Serve accompanied by a bowl of crisp romaine broken into small pieces, dressed with a good French dressing and seasoned with finely chopped fresh parsley and tarragon. Serves 6–8.

Chicken Breasts in Aspic

6 whole chicken breasts
5 12½-ounce cans jellied chicken consommé (or 8 cups home-made broth)
6 stalks celery
6 carrots
3 large yellow onions
1 small bay leaf
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
1 egg white, slightly beaten
2 dozen fresh tarragon leaves, washed

Wash the chicken, place in a large pan and cover with the chicken consommé or broth diluted with 2 cups water. Place over moderate heat and bring broth slowly to simmering point, about ½ hour. Skim carefully. Add the vegetables and bay leaf, cover partially and cook until tender, about 1½ hours. Cool the broth slightly and remove the chicken. Pull the meat away from the bones in as large pieces as possible, discarding skins.

Strain the broth, cool and refrigerate until fat rises to surface. Skim off the fat and strain the broth through cheesecloth wrung out in cold water. This should make about 7 cups. Soak the gelatin in ½ cup cold water for 5 minutes. Add the slightly beaten egg white to the broth, place over heat and bring to a lively boil, stirring constantly with a wire whip. Remove from heat and allow to cool 5 minutes. Strain once more through a fine sieve lined with a wet cloth. Add the soaked gelatin and stir until completely dissolved. Cool and refrigerate until about to set.

In the meantime arrange the chicken breasts on a large platter and pour over them a little of the gelatin broth to prevent them from drying out. Dip the tarragon leaves in and out of the setting gelatin and decorate the breasts. Place the platter in the refrigerator to set leaves, then pour the remainder of the gelatin over all. Refrigerate until ready to serve. Serves 6.

Cold Ham Mousse

1 envelopes unflavored gelatin
3 cups beef consommé
½ cup Madeira wine
Juice of 1 lemon
Salt, pepper to taste
8 ice cubes
1 tablespoon butter
4 teaspoons flour
½ cup milk
1-pound, 8-ounce can boneless smoked ham
Sliced truffles, black olives or pickles
1 cup heavy cream

Prepare a Madeira aspic: Soak the gelatin in 1 cup cold water. Heat the consommé to the boiling point, add the soaked gelatin and stir until well dissolved. Flavor with the Madeira wine and lemon juice and season with salt. Add 8 ice cubes and continue stirring until melted.

Pour 1½ cups of the aspic (you will need about 4 cups) into a shallow rectangular glass dish. Pour 1 cup aspic into a 5-cup charlotte mold and refrigerate both molds. Allow the remaining 1½ cups aspic to stand at room temperature. Melt the butter in a small enamel pan, blend in the flour and remove the pan from the heat. Gradually add the milk and cook slowly, stirring constantly, until the sauce is smooth and thickened. Season with salt and pepper. Cool.

Cut the ham into small chunks, discarding all fat, gristle and jelly. This should give you about 14 ounces of meat. Put the ham through the meat grinder, using the medium blade. By this time the gelatin in the charlotte mold should be almost set. Decorate it with sliced truffles, black olives or pickles and anchor them in place with ¼ cup of the remaining room temperature aspic. Return mold to the refrigerator to set.

Place the ground ham in the electric blender and blend to a smooth paste, moistening it as you blend with the remaining 1¼ cups aspic. Gradually add the cooled, firm cream sauce. It will be necessary from time to time, when the mixture stops blending, to turn off the motor and pull the mixture from the sides of the container to the center with a rubber bottle scraper. When the entire mixture is blended to a smooth paste, scrape it into a bowl surrounded by crushed ice. Whip the heavy cream until just stiff, being careful not to overbeat, and fold it carefully and gradually into the ham mixture. Spoon into the charlotte mold and press gently to remove air pockets. Cover the mold with wax paper and refrigerate until firm, preferably overnight.

When ready to serve, run a spatula carefully around the edge of the mold, being sure it touches the bottom, and turn the mold upside down onto a round, chilled serving platter. Place a cloth wrung out in hot water on top of the mold for a second or two to facilitate its removal. Cut the aspic in the refrigerator dish into ½" cubes and arrange around the mousse. Chill until serving time. Serves 6–8.

Jellied Duck à l'Orange

2 Long Island ducklings (5 pounds each)
Salt, coarsely ground pepper
3 navel oranges
Juice from 1 large lemon
12-ounce can madrilene
12-ounce can clear chicken broth
1½ tablespoons unflavored gelatin
1 bunch watercress

Clean the ducks and wipe inside and out with a damp cloth or paper towelling. Sprinkle the cavities with salt and pepper. Preheat oven to 350°. Place ducks side by side in a roasting pan and roast until very tender, about 2½–3 hours. Pour off the fat after they have cooked 1 hour and again in another hour. Remove from pan when done and cool; then remove all the meat from the bones in as large pieces as possible, cutting each breast into 4 pieces. Discard all skin, fat and undesirable pieces. Sprinkle lightly with salt, cover with a plate, and chill.

In the meantime, remove the thin outer rind from 1 of the navel oranges, using a sharp knife. Place it in a cup and pour the lemon juice over it. Cover and place in refrigerator until ready to use for flavoring the aspic. Remove white pith left on the orange and cut the rind and white pith from the 2 remaining oranges. Then cut between the sections of the 3 oranges with a sharp knife, removing the pulp in half-moon-shaped pieces. Chill.

Heat together the madrilene and chicken broth. Soak the gelatin in 3 tablespoons cold water, add to the heated broth and stir well. Strain the reserved orange-flavored lemon juice into it. Add salt, if necessary, and cool. Arrange the orange pieces around the edge of a large glass pie plate, and pour just enough of the cooled aspic over them to cover the bottom of the plate with a ¼"-thick coating. Place in the refrigerator to set.

Garnish the center of the aspic-covered plate with a pattern of watercress leaves and cover the whole with the pieces of duck, placing the most perfect pieces in the center and the bits around the edge and on top. Pour the remaining aspic over all and refrigerate until firm. When ready to serve, run knife around the edge of the plate, dip the bottom of the plate in hot water, and turn out on a large round serving platter. Serve at once accompanied by a watercress salad with a sharp dressing made from lime or lemon juice, salt and a very little olive oil or peanut oil. Serves 6–8.

Salads

Avocado Aspic Salad

¾ cup finely diced inner stalks of celery
Ice cubes
1 small raw potato, peeled and cut in half
1 package mixed vegetable flavor salad gelatin
2 cups boiling water
1 large ripe avocado, peeled and sliced
¼ teaspoon salt
Juice of 1 lemon, strained
2 teaspoons onion juice
1 pimiento, cut in small pieces
4 teaspoons tarragon vinegar
2 scant tablespoons sugar
1 package celery flavor salad gelatin
1 head Boston lettuce, washed, dried and crisped

Cover the diced celery with plenty of ice cubes and 1 cup cold water. Add the potato (this, for some reason, makes the celery crisper). Chill for ½ hour.

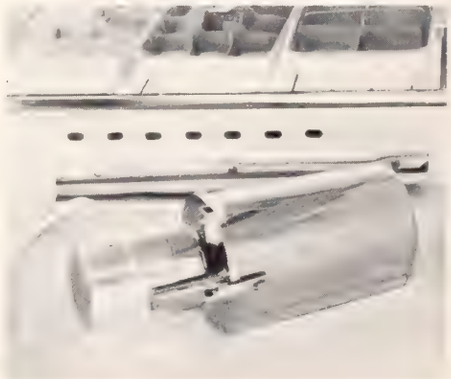
Meanwhile, prepare the mixed vegetable flavor salad gelatin following package directions, using 1 cup boiling water and 7 ice cubes. When gelatin is about to set, pour into a 1-quart ring mold and refrigerate until set, about ¼ hour.

Drain the celery well, pat dry on paper towels and add to the avocado. Sprinkle with the salt, lemon juice, onion juice, pimiento, vinegar and sugar. Spread this mixture over the set gelatin and refrigerate. Prepare the celery flavor gelatin following package directions, using 1 cup boiling water and 7 ice cubes. Pour over the vegetables in the mold and refrigerate until firm, about 2 hours.

When ready to serve, run knife around edge of mold and turn out onto a large deep round platter. Surround the gelatin with the lettuce leaves and serve on well-chilled plates. Serves 6.

Cucumber and Green Pepper Salad

1 bunch watercress
2 tender young cucumbers, peeled and sliced paper thin
2 small green peppers
Cracked ice
1 cup French dressing



Wash the watercress, discard the tough stems, wrap in a wet cloth and refrigerate. Soak the cucumbers for 2 hours in ice water. Wash the green peppers; remove stem end, scoop out seeds and slice in rings. Cover the pepper slices with cracked ice until ready to serve. Add 1 tablespoon of cracked ice to the French dressing and stir well. Arrange the watercress on 6 well-chilled plates. Drain the cucumbers well and place on the watercress. Garnish with the green peppers. Pour the French dressing over all, distributing it evenly. Serve at once, accompanied by crisp heated French bread and sweet butter. Serves 6.

Cucumber Gelatin Salad

1 bunch watercress
2 packages mixed vegetable flavor salad gelatin
2 cups boiling water
14 ice cubes
2 small tender cucumbers, peeled and cut in small cubes
French dressing

Wash the watercress, discard the tough stems, wrap in a wet cloth and refrigerate. Prepare the salad gelatin with 2 cups boiling water and 14 ice cubes, following directions on the package. Drain juice, if any, from the cucumbers and add them to the gelatin when it begins to thicken. Pour the gelatin into six 1-cup molds and refrigerate until ready to serve. Turn out on well-chilled plates and garnish with the watercress. Pass the French dressing separately. Serves 6.

Desserts, Fruits

French Vanilla Ice Cream

2" piece of vanilla bean
1 cup sugar
3 eggs
1 quart heavy cream
1 tablespoon vanilla
1 pint milk

Split the vanilla bean, scrape the soft black center into the sugar and mix well. Beat the eggs until light in the large bowl of the electric mixer. Gradually beat in at high speed the vanilla sugar. When the mixture is light and creamy, stir in by hand with a large spoon the heavy cream, vanilla and, last of all, the milk.

Place the dasher of the ice cream freezer in a 1-gallon freezer can and pour the mixture into the can. Cover the can, place in the freezer bucket, adjust the handle and clamp securely. Test to see if all is properly adjusted for turning. Surround the can with cracked ice and rock salt, in proportion of 3 of ice to 1 of salt, to at least ¾ of the way to the top. Start turning by hand and continue until it becomes very hard to turn. Remove handle and wipe top of can. Remove cover and dasher, scraping the dasher clean with a knife or spatula. Remove the can from the bucket, wipe it carefully and transfer the frozen cream to a 1½-quart ice cream mold. Cover with heavy waxed paper and seal tight with the cover. Place in the freezing compartment of the refrigerator for at least 1 hour to set. Turn out on a cold platter to serve. Serves 6–8.

Macadamia Nut Ice Cream

6-ounce can Macadamia nuts (slightly salted)
1⅔ cups milk
½ cup sugar
2 eggs, separated
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup heavy cream
3 tablespoons rum

Place the nuts in the electric blender, turn the blender on and then off immediately to reduce the nuts to a coarse powder.

Heat the milk in top of a double boiler over simmering water. Add the sugar and stir well. Beat the egg yolks and gradually add part of the hot milk. Stir this mixture into the remaining hot milk and cook, stirring constantly, until slightly thickened. Cool, add the vanilla, the unbeaten egg whites and the heavy cream. Place in an electric automatic ice cream freezer in freezing compartment of the refrigerator and freeze for about 1 hour. Scrape down the sides and bottom and continue freezing about 1 hour longer. Remove the dasher and stir in the rum and about half of the coarsely ground nuts. Continue freezing until stiff, about 3 hours. Half an hour before serving, remove freezer from the freezing compartment and place in the refrigerator to soften slightly. To serve, place the frozen cream in a well-chilled serving bowl and sprinkle with the remaining nuts. Serves 6.

Blackberry Ice

1 pint ripe blackberries, washed
Juice of ¼ lemon, strained
¾ cup 28° sugar syrup (see note below)

Rub the blackberries through a sieve, using a wooden spoon. This should yield about ¾ cup of pulp. Add ½ cup water to the seed pulp remaining in the sieve, rub this through the sieve and add to the ¾ cup pulp. This should make about 1⅓ cups in all. Strain once more through a fine sieve and add the lemon juice. Stir in the sugar syrup. Place in a shallow ice tray in the freezing compartment with control set at medium cold (4–5). Allow to freeze to the mushy stage, about 2 hours. Scrape down sides, stir well and continue freezing until stiff. Serve in chilled glasses. Serves 4.

Note: To make 1 cup syrup of (approximately) 28°, moisten 2 cups sugar with 1½ cups cold water, stir until dissolved. Wipe down inside edges of the pan with a damp cloth. Place over heat and boil, without stirring, for 5 minutes, counting from time syrup is actually boiling.

Black Bing Cherry Ice

1 heaping cup washed, stemmed and pitted black Bing cherries
Juice of 1 lemon, strained
1 cup 28° sugar syrup (see recipe for Blackberry Ice)
1 tablespoon Crème de Noyaux liqueur

Place the cherries in the electric blender with the lemon juice and ½ cup cold water and blend while counting to 50. Add the syrup and liqueur and strain through a fine sieve. Place the mixture in a shallow ice tray in the freezing compartment. Freeze until the mixture is a stiff firm mush, about 2 hours, stirring every half hour. Serve in well-chilled sherbet glasses and garnish with Kirsch flavored cherries. Serves 4.

Note: For Kirsch flavored cherries, wash, stem and pit ½ pound black Bing cherries. Add ½ cup sugar syrup and 2–3 tablespoons Kirsch liqueur. Place in a glass container, cover and refrigerate.

Peach Ice

6 small ripe white peaches, peeled and sliced
Juice of 1 lemon
1 cup 28° sugar syrup (see recipe for Blackberry Ice)
2 tablespoons Crème de Noyaux liqueur

Place the peaches in the electric blender with ½ cup cold water and blend until smooth. Add the lemon juice, sugar syrup and liqueur. Mix well and place the mixture in a shallow ice tray in the freezing compartment with the control set at medium cold. The mixture will start freezing around the edge of the container in 30 minutes. Scrape down, stir well and continue freezing about 1 hour, or until almost set. Stir well, and continue to freeze until ready to serve. Scrape with a sturdy spoon into well-chilled wineglasses. Serves 4.

Red Raspberry Ice

1 pint fresh red raspberries
¾ cup 28° sugar syrup (see recipe for Blackberry Ice)
Juice of ¼ lemon

Place the red raspberries in a sieve and allow cold water to run over them for a second or two. Drain and rub through a fine sieve, using a wooden spoon. Discard the seeds. Add ½ cup water, the sugar syrup and lemon juice to the purée and strain once more through the fine sieve. This should give you about 2¼ cups. Place in a shallow ice tray in the freezing compartment and freeze for ½ hour, scrape down the sides and stir well. Continue freezing about 1 hour longer, scraping and stirring the mixture once more. Serve in well-chilled wineglasses. Serves 4.

To change any of the above ices into sherbets, beat the ice when it is frozen with a rotary beater until soft; add 1 egg white, beaten until stiff but not dry, and beat it with the ice until all the white disappears. Return to the freezing tray and allow to remain until frozen through. Serve the sherbets in well-chilled sherbet or wine glasses.

Tutti-Frutti Treat

½ ripe banana, peeled and sliced
1 ripe peach, peeled and sliced
1 ripe pear, peeled and cored
6 ripe dark red Bing cherries, pitted
¼ small ripe cantaloupe, peeled and seeded
½ cup sugar
½ cup crushed ice

Place the ingredients in the order given in the electric blender. Run the blender while counting to 25. Pour immediately into 4 well-chilled glasses and serve at once. Eat with a spoon as an afternoon treat on a hot summer day. Serves 4.

Aids to cool summer eating

With an electric ice crusher you can always count on a speedy and constant supply of finely crushed ice for serving seafood and chilled soups, for short-cutting a mousse or for whipping up a delicious blender treat of puréed fruits or frosty drinks. Ice tray with a nonstick Teflon coating makes it easy to remove ice cubes, molded gelatin desserts, sherbets or the frozen mixture of water, sugar and juice called a granité.

Brazilian Treat

Per serving:
½ ripe avocado, peeled
Juice of 1 lime, strained
1 tablespoon simple syrup
1 cup vanilla ice cream

Place the avocado pulp, lime juice, syrup and vanilla ice cream in the electric blender. Run the blender for about 5 minutes, or until very smooth. Place in a chilled glass and eat at once.

Violet Sherbet

1 cup Concord grape jelly (purchased home-made)
3 tablespoons Crème de Violette liqueur
Juice of ½ lemon
1 egg white
2 tablespoons confectioners' sugar
4 violets, candied or fresh

Heat together the jelly and 1¼ cups water just long enough to melt the jelly. Add the liqueur and the lemon juice. Cool and freeze in an electric automatic ice cream freezer in the freezing compartment of the refrigerator until it is partially frozen, about 1 hour. Remove dasher, scrape frozen ice into a chilled bowl and return to freezing compartment. Beat the egg white until stiff with the sugar. Add to the frozen mixture and fold it in until no white remains. Beat with a rotary beater just long enough to remove granular look. Return to freezer minus the dasher, cover and return to freezing compartment until frozen stiff, stirring once more if necessary. Place in chilled sherbet glasses and garnish with violets. Serves 4.

Orange Cracker Crumb Pie

2 dozen graham cracker squares
¾ teaspoon cinnamon
Sugar
½ cup (scant) melted butter
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
4 tablespoons Curaçao liqueur
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon grated orange rind
5 eggs, separated
3 navel oranges

To prepare crusts, break 6 graham-cracker squares at a time into the electric blender, cover, blend for a few seconds and empty into a bowl. Repeat until all the crackers are reduced to a fine crumb consistency. Stir the cinnamon into ¾ cup sugar and add to the crumbs. Add the melted butter and stir until the crumbs are well moistened and press into two 8″ pie plates. Chill while you make the filling.

Soak the gelatin in ¼ cup cold water for 5 minutes in the top of a small double boiler. Place over boiling water and stir until the gelatin is completely dissolved. Add 2 tablespoons of the Curaçao, the lemon juice and grated orange rind. Place the egg yolks in a medium large bowl and beat with a rotary beater until very thick and light, gradually beating in ¾ cup sugar. Add the gelatin mixture and continue beating for a few seconds until well mixed. Beat the egg whites until stiff in a separate bowl. Fold the whites into the yolk mixture until no whites show and give a few added turns with the rotary beater until the mixture is smooth. Immediately pour into the 2 chilled crusts. Refrigerate until ready to serve.

Meanwhile cut away the rind from the oranges with a very sharp knife, cutting deep enough to cut off all the white pith. Cut down into and between the sections to loosen the pulp in as perfect pieces as possible. Place in a bowl and sprinkle with plenty of sugar, and pour over all the remaining 2 tablespoons of Curaçao. When ready to serve the pies, garnish with the orange sections, dividing them equally and pour over all any remaining juice. Serve at once on chilled plates. Serves 8.

Apricot Sponge

1-pound, 1-ounce can apricot halves
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
3 tablespoons sugar
3 tablespoons Orgeat (almond-flavored syrup)
3 egg whites
2 cups custard sauce

Pour the juice from the canned apricots over the gelatin to soften. Place the apricots in the electric blender with the sugar, Orgeat and soaked gelatin and blend until reduced to a smooth consistency. Turn off the blender, if necessary, to scrape the mixture to the center and away from the side, thereby removing air pockets. Empty the mixture into a saucepan and bring to boiling point over low heat, stirring constantly. Place in a large bowl and cool. Beat the egg whites until stiff and fold them carefully into the cooled apricot mixture. Pour into a 1-quart mold and refrigerate until set, at least 2 hours. Run knife around edge and turn out onto a chilled dessert plate. Serve at once accompanied by custard sauce. Serves 6.

Charlotte Russe

2 3-ounce packages lady fingers
1½ envelopes unflavored gelatin
Boiling water
3 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons Crème de Noyaux liqueur
2 teaspoons vanilla
2 cups heavy cream

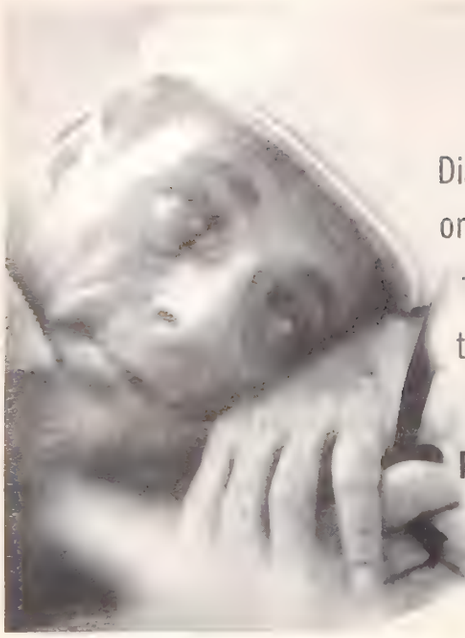
Separate the lady fingers and line 8 Old-Fashioned glasses, using 3 halves for each glass. Soak the gelatin in 6 tablespoons cold water for 5 minutes. Add 4 tablespoons boiling water, stir well and place over boiling water until the gelatin is dissolved. Cool, add the sugar, Crème de Noyaux and vanilla. Beat the cream in a large bowl until almost stiff, then beat in gradually the cooled gelatin mixture. Do not overbeat. Spoon the mixture immediately into the lined glasses, dividing it equally. Refrigerate until ready to serve. Serves 8.

Crushed ice sets a quick Coffee Cognac Delight

Using ice crusher attachment on your electric blender, make 2 cups crushed ice. Set aside until needed.

Put in blender 2 envelopes gelatin, ½ cup sugar, ½ cup strong hot coffee. Cover. Blend 10 seconds.

Add ¼ cup sugar, blend 2 seconds. Then add ¼ cup heavy cream and crushed ice. Cover. Blend 1 minute.



Let stand in blender for 1 minute. Pour into 6 individual dishes. Mixture will set without refrigeration.

Furniture with a future

THE BAKER'S RACK

Presumably, the piece of furniture commonly known as a baker's rack derives from the open shelves bakers used to use for cooking and displaying their fresh-from-the-oven pies and loaves. But from that workaday origin, the genre has risen to scarcely predictable decorative heights without losing a mite of its usefulness. This Italian-inspired version in wrought iron and brass particularly appealed to H&G for its classic "S" curve scrolls, its arrow and acorn finials and generally graceful lines. Other virtues that qualify it as furniture with a future include the sturdy, rustproof frame and removable white glass shelves. Since it is unlike any other piece of furniture you would be likely to have, it could serve as an accent piece in almost any room in the house or even on an outdoor terrace. Standing 72 inches tall and 36 inches wide, the rack might be used to hold a pot garden in a living or dining room, to store pretty cookware and spices in a kitchen or towels and bath accessories in a dressing room. You could also set it up to function as a bar or as a display stand for a prized collection. Gallo is the maker.

A sunny corner in a dining room is transformed into a garden with the help of the baker's rack massed with blooming geraniums and ferns. Since the white glass shelves are quite impervious to moisture, a wipe with a damp cloth is all that is needed to keep them sparkling and ring free.

In a foyer, the baker's rack offers generous hospitality as well as casting delicate shadows of its tracery against the white wall. The middle shelf is just the right height to serve as a working bar and deep enough to keep all ingredients handy. The shallower top shelf would be good for glasses, the lowest could hold a wine rack, extra supplies of mixers.

MARGERIN

In a dressing room, you might use the baker's rack as a showcase where your prettiest towels can be stored to be seen. The middle shelf could serve as an auxiliary dressing table or a display stage for a collection of perfume bottles.

"We air conditioned our 7-room home for just $975."

Mr. & Mrs. M. L. Humphreys of Kansas City, Kansas were surprised by the reasonable cost of General Electric Central Air Conditioning. "Our home has 1,832 square feet of living area," Mr. Humphreys observes, "and the two-ton unit we had in the living room before didn't begin to cool the rest of the house. Our G-E system keeps every room at the same even temperature."

"I have sinus trouble," Mrs. Humphreys remarks, "and I was really afraid central air conditioning would make it worse. Actually, central air conditioning has relieved it. My head stays clear as a bell. It's wonderful."

"We love to entertain," continues Mrs. Humphreys, "but when the temperature got to be over 100° and the humidity high, it used to be almost impossible. Now, we have friends in all summer long."

If you have forced-air heat—as the Humphreys do—you, too, can enjoy General Electric Central Air Conditioning at a very modest price. Call your G-E dealer for a free survey and installation estimate. Ask him, too, about his easy financing terms. He's listed in the Yellow Pages under "Air Conditioning Equipment."

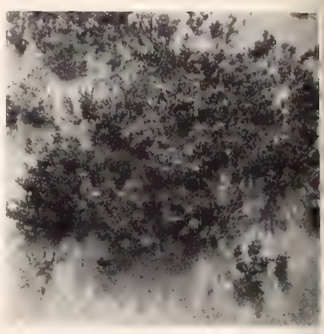
H&G'S GARDENER'S

Japanese black pine (Pinus thunbergii) is best evergreen shore tree

by George Taloumis

The seaside gardener must learn to become the master of pro's and con's. In his favor are the brilliance and sparkle of ocean sunshine, the freshness of the sea wind, the myriad shadings of the sea and sand. Dead against him are the constant winds, the almost continual presence of salt-laden air (except when it is air-laden salt), and the abrasive touch of drifting or flying sand. With all opportunities and obligations met, this leaves the seashore gardener with some of the loveliest and most exciting plants in the whole horticultural realm.



Because in recent years there has been a shoreward turn among home builders, permanent or transient, there has also been a growing interest in salt-water gardening—partly, perhaps, of necessity, but mostly because seaside gardening presents a challenge that cannot even be understood by inland practitioners.

To succeed, the garden by the sea must first of all have good soil. Most soils near the sea are light and sandy, capable of supporting only a limited number of acclimated plants. They need to be enriched with peatmoss, leafmold, compost, seaweed litter or other organic material. This is especially important when setting out trees and shrubs. Once off to a vigorous start, these plants are usually able to fend for themselves. In some instances loads of rich loam must be brought in—perhaps expensive at the start, but less costly in the end. Seashore gardening is a very special exercise indeed.

urally along the ocean's edge. ere it is too difficult to grow a lge of these, a fence 5 or 6 feet h will act as a windbreak. You n construct it of wood, stone or er material, and behind it grow wide variety of plants. It is azing how even a low 3-foot wall ll cut the velocity of the wind fficiently to make gay, colorful wer borders a reality.

In general, however, tree and rub hedges are preferable to ences as windbreaks. Some trees nd shrubs are better suited to his than others, whether they are llowed to grow naturally or are formally clipped. Where winds are especially stiff, set hedge plants at closer intervals than normally so one will protect another. When flung salt spray is a factor, there is not much that can be done except to select the kinds that are least susceptible and hope for the best: Japanese black pine, rugosa rose, bayberry and beach plum

Russian olive (Elaeagnus angustifolia) is an invulnerable shore shrub

These and other windbreaks, such as the house itself, will protect lower-growing plants (except for bearberry, which seems to need no protection). They will also act as bulwarks against blown sand, which during a storm can cover low shrubs and perennials and annuals overnight.

While no garden anywhere is complete without trees and shrubs that add height, shade, flowered beauty of structure all year round, this is even more true in the seaside garden, where choices are limited. At the top of the list is Japanese black pine, already mentioned. Its picturesque growing habits and ability to tolerate actual submergence as well as salt spray and come out unscathed are unmatched in the world of trees.

Mock-oranges, all of them, produce extravagant sprays of spring flowers

In New England hurricanes, Japanese black pine has proved to be the best performer, with American holly, another tree that has often been flooded for several days without being harmed, a close second.

deserve consideration. Pitch pine an evergreen with a twisted habit of growth, is common on Cape Cod, Mass. Other evergreen trees in this category are white, red, Austrian and Scotch pines, the latter recommended for its reddish bark and open, asymmetrical manner of growth. Norway spruce can be set out as a windbreak, as can Colorado blue spruce and Japanese cryptomeria. And both American arborvitae and red cedar make dependable hedges.

Oaks are seashore stalwarts

Among deciduous shade trees, English oak is one of the best—it has been naturalized along the beaches and bluffs of Cape Cod. Other native oaks, such as red, pin and white, make excellent seaside shade trees. American elm, although not often planted today because of the continuing threat of disease, has more than proved its mettle. Sycamore and Norway maple are not to be overlooked when you move back a little from the actual shore. The same goes for horse chestnut, little-leaf linden, ailanthus, tupelo and black locust.

For color or as lawn specimens, a number of small trees tolerate coastal conditions. Crab apples, as a group, are pre-eminent, offering both flowers and fruits, favored by the birds in the autumn. Shadbush can be grown close to the water, and Washington and Arnold hawthorns are nearly as amenable. Pay special heed to Russian olive (Elaeagnus angustifolia), the all-but-perfect small seaside tree, vying with Japanese black pine in endurance. It is very hardy, has a pleasantly irregular growth habit, withstands wind and salt spray, has small silvery leaves that are an ideal foil for the blue of the surrounding sea and sky, and its early summer flowers are sweetly fragrant. The shadblow (Amelanchier Canadensis) is less hardy, perhaps, but even lovelier.

Shrubs are more easily established than trees on the shore because they do not grow as tall and therefore are not as severely subjected to wind force. Certain species are naturals for the seaside garden. Two that head the list are rugosa rose, which actually grows in salt sand, and beach plum, an American native that is admired for its white flowers in May, and even more for the purple fruits used for beach plum jelly.

Bayberry (Myrica pensylvanica) with its aromatic leaves and gray berries is another topnotch candidate, common along the Atlantic coast—including remote islands, where trees simply will not grow because of the wind. In the second echelon, include the following: red osier, Siberian and yellow-twig dogwoods; summersweet (clethra); the cotoneasters; Scotch and Warminster brooms (adapted to dry, sandy soils); Siberian pea tree; speckled alder; arrowwood and withe-rod viburnums; autumn and cherry elaeagnus; winter and tartarian honeysuckles; black alder; elderberry; tamarix; and Amur privet (which makes as good a hedge near the ocean as elsewhere). Add potentillas, buckthorn, high-bush and low-bush blueberries, and groundsel bush (baccharis) with its plumy white or yellow sprays in fall. Sea buckthorn, with orange berries among thorny twigs that last all winter, is also among the tidewater elect.

Low-growing evergreens can be used in many ways in the seaside garden. Japanese yews, tall and short, narrow and spreading, make the grade, and what's more, they are easily available. For others, check Pfitzer, Sargent and Andorra junipers, inkberry (a native holly with shiny, rounded leaves), mugo pine and, of course, bearberry or kinnikinnick, a ubiquitous trailing evergreen that will thrive in pure sand. Mat-forming heaths and heathers are superb on ledges and slopes.

Vines, as a group, are easy, because they are attached or cling to surfaces that prevent them from succumbing to excessive winds. First among them, because it is little injured by salt, is Virginia creeper or woodbine, the supreme vine for use among rocks at the sea's boundary. Japanese honeysuckle, which has to be watched so it will not take over, American and oriental bittersweets, big-leaved Dutchman's pipe, Boston ivy and climbing hydrangea will respond to a minimum of care. Climbing roses flourish.

Groundcovers are easy

Groundcovers, important in any garden to cut down maintenance, are especially valuable in gardens by the sea. Several can be grown on slopes or banks, facing the ocean, or under trees where shade is deep. Purple-leaved euonymous, English ivy, pachysandra, myrtle (vinca), pachistima, sweet fern (good in the sandiest soils), artemisia, santolina (where hardy) and rambler roses, often grown as groundcovers, are an answer to this need.

Behind the shelter of a house or garage, tall fence or hedge—or at a safe distance from the sea—many herbaceous perennials grow lushly, responding to cool evening air and high humidity. If they are staked, hybrid delphiniums make glorious seaside plants with spikes of blue, lavender, purple, orchid, pink and white. Several other species appreciate the dew and coolness of the sea: lupines, violas, peach-leaved bellflowers, Shasta daisies, perennial flax, coral-bells, gaillardia, globe thistle, lavender, mallow, liatris, phlox, sedums, anthemis, rudbeckias, fall asters, pinks, astilbe, bearded iris, day lilies, and filipendula—the list is surprisingly long. Sea holly (eryngium), with gray-blue foliage and prickly amethyst flowers, and sea pink (armeria), which forms dense mats of linear leaves topped by stems of pink flowers, are among the most shoreproof.

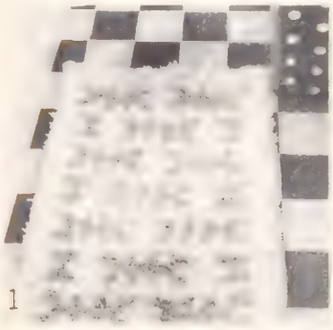
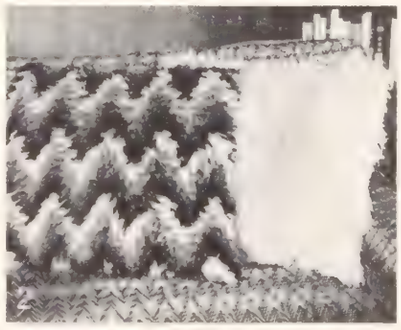
When it comes to annuals, there are no problems. All kinds will grow easily, even if exposed to the full force of the winds during their short periods from late May to late September. Not only are they mostly low-growing, but during those months truly violent storms from the ocean are unusual. The seed-packed annuals represent the flowers that summer cottage gardeners can enjoy in profusion—petunia, pansy, marigold, zinnia, snapdragon, celosia, verbena, cosmos, cleome, annual phlox and calendula.

In choosing summer bulbs or those tender bulbs and plants that offer their vivid colors during the summer months, you can include dahlias, gladiolus, tuberous begonias (better under cool climatic conditions), tigridias, montbretias, cannas, fancy-leaved caladiums.

Among tender pot plants, few are more rewarding than geraniums, which can be planted in the open ground or in window boxes or pots. Red, pink or white, they are flamboyant all summer long. Heliotropes, beloved for their sweet fragrance, coleus, lantanas, wax begonias and patience plant (one of the few that will flower in deep shade) are others that will brighten seaside beds.



One final note: On promontories and extremely exposed headlands as well as on rock outcroppings and shifting sands—any spot where growing plants in the open ground is impossible either because soil is lacking or there is too much wind and salt spray—plants in summer can be grown in planters, boxes, tubs, pots, window boxes and other containers. These can be located in the lee of the house, fence or other barrier. Or they can be placed in the open for the short summer season. Geraniums and annuals will offer gay color for a minimum of cost and maintenance, although they may take a real beating before the season is over.



More than anything, true coastal gardens require faithful care and, more especially, regular feeding and watering. Healthy, well-nourished plants are better able to flourish where growing conditions are all against them. The spell of the sea can then work its magic on contented gardeners.

Richly Textured Accents you can make from kits

Throughout our House of Surprises on pages 82-95, we scattered handcrafted accents—two rya rugs, a set of rya cushion covers, a hooked rug and a knitted afghan—all made from kits that come complete with easy-to-follow instructions and all ingredients. Kits for the three rya-woven accents (1-3, below) provide you with a working plan and pattern, needles, ruler, handwoven rya backing, the correct amount of wool or cotton. To order a rya kit, write to C.U.M. Rya Rugs, Copenhagen Imports, P.O. Box 1489, La Jolla, Calif., 92037. The kit for the hooked rug (4) includes a stamped canvas, a latch hook and the necessary amount of precut rug wool, and comes from Shillcraft, 106 Hopkins Place, Baltimore, Md., 21201. The kit for the afghan (5) has, besides the knitting instructions, the necessary number of skeins of Reynolds Wool Yarn and comes from Knit Crafts, 331 Main Street, Wakefield, R.I., 02879.

Replacing the vines

The first replanting was not the final answer, for the old haphazard system was not beaten. It had been customary to plant the fields with different vines in the proportions that went into the eventual blend. One year one variety would have more grapes, or ripen quicker; the next, another. The vineyard's wine could not be made consistent from one vintage to the next.

It was not until the proprietors took the step of separating grape from grape in different vineyards, giving the most appropriate south slope to the Rieslings or the more sheltered angle of the hill to the Muscat—that really intelligent wine-making could begin and quality be controlled. As so often, specialization saved the day.

Riesling, as I have said, has no peer. The other Alsatian wines are comparable with each other in quality, although different in character.

The Traminer has now been replaced in practice by the Gewürtztraminer, the "spicy" Traminer (some wine is still sold, to answer demand, by the old name as well). Gewürtztraminer is not sweet (only on very rare occasions have any sweet wines been made in Alsace), but it has the almost piquant quality of a pinch of spice. When it is drunk very cold, this, combined with its dryness, gives it a very refreshing distinction. Alsatian food, such as foie gras with truffles, the luxury dish of Strasbourg, or, at the other end of the gastronomic scale, choucroute garnie, tends to be very rich and full-flavored, too powerful for the delicacy of a Riesling—and this is the Traminer's chance.

The Traminer's rival, the Muscat, is elsewhere always thought of as a sweet wine. We expect a Muscat wine to taste like a ripe hothouse grape. In the south of France it is made into some of the most luscious dessert wine in the world. But in Alsace its individuality is interpreted quite differently. Alsatian wine-growers somehow manage to keep the full blast of perfume that distinguishes Muscat wine from every other wine, but they make it light and dry.

The Pinot grape was imported in two varieties, of which the Tokay Pinot has been the greater success. Named after the great sweet Hungarian wine, it has some of its character, but not its sweetness. The other Pinot, the white one from which the glorious white wines of Burgundy are made, only produces a medium-quality light wine in Alsace.

Technically, the Sylvaner strain might be called "noble," but I don't think I will hurt anyone's feelings if I say that it is really the poor man's Riesling. It makes an admirable daily wine—a very refreshing drink either on its own or with a family meal—but it is not, in Dr. Johnson's words, a wine "to invite a man to." For guests I serve a Muscat, a Traminer or a Riesling.

The Alsatians arrange things differently from the rest of France. In Burgundy or Bordeaux, for instance, it is the site, not the plant, that distinguishes a wine from those of other regions. Only in Alsace does the grape appear first and foremost on a bottle label: the vineyard second, if at all. Alsatian wines are identified by the maker's name taken in conjunction with the grape and the vintage, and the names of the best makers are the names to remember, just as they are with champagne. Hugel; Dopff & Irion; Dopff (a separate firm, just as there are three different Heidsiecks in Champagne); Schlumberger; and Preiss Zimmer are all fine. Although all produce a full range, each house has its specialties and idiosyncrasies. Expect a slightly richer wine from Schlumberger. Look to Hugel for a great late-gathered wine (with more sugar, strength and body) such as the Muscat Reserve Exceptionelle. Dopff & Irion make and sell a wine called Clos des Amandiers, a particularly delicate dry Muscat named for the almond trees—a rarity in Alsace—which grow in the vineyard and almost seem to give the wine a hint of their special scent. Recently some makers have been keeping the produce of their best vineyards separate from the rest and bottling them with the vineyard's name in addition to the rest of the wine's description in the manner of German wines. Let us hope this practice will spread, for the less wine is blended, the more of its own character it keeps, and the more exciting the tasting of each fresh kind becomes.

Most Alsatian wines are drunk so young that vintages are of little account. True, one is better than another, but as it grows older, it loses its superiority. Freshness is the thing. The vintages are sold successively; if there is a choice, which is unlikely, take the younger. Great vintages provide exceptions to this rule: 1959 wines are still found that are putting on yet more scent and style with years. Another very fine vintage was 1964, as was 1961. But there is little point in keeping it; another fine one will come along. Drink it while it still has the freshness of youth.

REMEMBER HOW you felt the last time you found something you really wanted at about half the regular price? Now, through the Literary Guild, you can have that wonderful feeling every time you buy a book!

The Guild guarantees always to save you at least 40%, often as much as 60%, on current best-sellers and other books you want. In the past year, for example, Guild members were offered Is Paris Burning? for $2.95, instead of the publisher's edition price of $6.95; The Making of the President 1964 for $3.50, instead of $6.95; Queen Victoria for $3.95, instead of $8.50.

These are typical Guild savings. And time after time, Guild books are—like these—tops on the best-seller lists.

Yet, they were singled out by Guild editors long before publication from the hundreds of manuscripts submitted by all publishers. Because Guild selections are chosen far in advance they can be described before publication in Wings, the club's preview, and shipped to members who want them as soon as published.

Always, you have freedom of choice. You need take only four books in the coming year out of 20 or more offered each month.

An added benefit: the Guild's bonus book plan. You choose a bonus book free after every fourth one you buy.

INCORPORATING LIVING FOR YOUNG HOMEMAKERS

SEPTEMBER, 1965 ... 129 NO. 3

On the cover: A sweet pale member of this year's most popular color family —the pinks—plays a very important role in a light, airy sitting room that illustrates the current swing to color schemes in a more gentle mood. Except for the chaise, every chair and sofa in the room is covered in whole or in part with H&G's Peppermint Pink, creating a luminous frame for the ebullient Mimosa and Lemon Peel rug that was specially designed to be the highlight of the room. The butterflies' three-dimensional quality and their marvelously big scale give the rug the magical look of the inside of an antique glass paperweight and emphasize the room's atmosphere of airy playfulness. Lemon Peel is repeated in the table skirt and combined with Sunflower in the flame-stitch pattern of the print on sofa pillows and chaise, but these bright accents are subtly held in check by the muted tones of the Fern-painted finish on the bamboo furniture and the Black Pearl of the slate floor. Interior design: Howard Smith of Falasco-Smith; rug by Schumacher. For the full story of H&G's Colors for 1966 and the new mood they herald, see page 173.

ake the initiative. You won't always right. But knowing business funda- ntals will cut your margin of error the minimum . . . . .

"Actively seek all of the responsibility you can possibly handle. You'll never get anywhere by avoiding the tough assignments . . . . .

"Develop the instinctive ability to make quick, accurate decisions. Business has always reserved its greatest rewards for men of action and courage . . . . .

"Broaden your knowledge of business in a systematic, organized way; learn the problems and viewpoints of all major departments of business . . . . ."

n interview with James M. Jenks, President, lexander Hamilton Institute

HE famed management consultants—Booz, - Allen & Hamilton—contend that *"The return rigorous competition is forcing the improved e of executives. In many cases the margin of mpetitive success or failure is locked up in the uality of management talent."

It is in times such as these that seniority is ften thrown out the window; and that knowl- dgeable, ambitious young people are permitted rise as fast and as far as their ability enables em to go. For business has too much at stake discriminate on the basis of age.

The man who can do the job, gets the job . . . hether he's 28 or 58.

And today—as in critical eras in the past—p managerial talent is emerging from big and mall organizations throughout the country. rom engineers, chemists and other technical en. Among salesmen. Accountants. Lawyers. Marketingmen.

Their backgrounds are diverse; but all of ese men share a compelling force to succeed, nd the intelligence to realize that only people ith a well-rounded grasp of business functions an direct the activities of subordinates.

A Fascinating "How to Succeed" Plan

Most people are surprised to learn that the aver- ge age of our subscribers is closer to 40 than o 20.

And we, in turn, are equally surprised that his mistaken notion has persisted for so long.

After all, rarely does a man mature sufficiently ntil he is in his thirties to give any serious hought to his future, or to the security of his family.

But the day comes inevitably when he asks himself: "Where am I going to be in five or ten years? Will I be able to put my children through college? Will my estate support my family, for a reasonable period, without the need for addi- tional funds?"

If he's fortunate, acts while time is still on his side and if the program he follows is valid, he frequently becomes successful while he's still young.

All of this, necessarily, is an oversimplification of the problem.

For that reason, we have analyzed the Institute's approach to executive-training problems in written form. The program is outlined fully in a 32-page book titled "Forging Ahead in Business."

This little book is not for children or even the 20-year-old. Rather, it was designed to show the mature, ambitious man how to build his career on a solid foundation—how to cope realistically with the problems everybody must meet and solve before he can hope to aspire to the top managerial level.

A copy is yours for the asking

After having devoted more than fifty years to helping ambitious men help themselves, we're naturally aware of the reasons why some men reach the heights at an early age . . . why others don't hit their peak until years later . . . and why some never do make the grade as major executives.

Surprisingly, native ability and intelligence are not nearly as dominant influences as one might expect (the $50,000 a year man is not five times as intelligent as the $10,000 man.)

Few men work at more than a fraction of their capacity . . . and most are willing to settle for mastery of a single department of business.

Somehow they fail to realize management's need to understand, relate and communicate on an overall administrative level . . . to master the basics of marketing, accounting, finance and production.

While helping thousands to accomplish more in months than they would, ordinarily, in years, the Institute has compiled, analyzed and refined authentic case-history material . . . made depth studies of real and complex business situations. Thus the training is immediately applicable to average everyday business problems.

Many executives have called the Institute's descriptive booklet "One of the most valuable contributions ever made to business literature."

It explains the modern method of attaining success while you're young—while you can still enjoy it to the fullest. Tells you what you must do, what you must know, to make upwards of $15,000 a year reasonably early in your career.

The program it describes is not meant for everybody; but if you happen to fit the pattern of the success-minded man, it's entirely possible that you, too, will find that the Institute's program will bring you a little closer each day to your chosen goal.

There's no charge for "Forging Ahead in Business" because—depending on the individual—it can be worth nothing . . . or a fortune.

It's been a long time since you've bought a new mattress.

Two remarkable things have happened.

1. The Englander COMFORT SEAL Innerspring mattress.

Today, Englander makes a totally new kind of innerspring mattress. It's completely wrapped in foam. Top. Bottom. All four sides. You sleep on cushiony foam. You're supported by firm innersprings. Absolute comfort—edge to edge. Dreamsville. This new way to make an innerspring mattress scraps the old-fashioned border wire. That's why this is one innerspring mattress that won't make like an accordion or tilt like a "see-saw" when you sit on the edge.

2. The Englander "Process 202" foam mattress.

Today, Englander makes a new kind of all-foam mattress, too. The old foam mattresses had to be "broken in." For the first months, you felt like you were sleeping on a trampoline. So we invented a new kind of foam mattress—"Process 202 urethane." This is foam with the fight taken out of it. From the very first night—it gives—it adjusts—its gentle support follows you as you move.

YOU'LL FIND THESE TWO NEW KINDS OF MATTRESSES IN SOME OF AMERICA'S MOST CELEBRATED HOTELS AND MOTELS—AND AT YOUR FAVORITE STORE. Take your choice: innerspring or foam! Both beautifully quilted! Both beautifully tailored! Both beautifully priced! Firm—$49.50. Extra firm—$59.50. Sleep the newest way! Sleep big! Queen size: 60" x 80". King size: 76" x 80".

Antiques Questions & Answers

By Thomas H. Ormsbee

ANTIQUE AMERICAN BRASS ANDIRONS

The dealer assured me these brass andirons were American and handmade not later than about 1830. To substantiate this, he showed me the hand-filed thread of the wrought-iron uprights on which the ball finials screwed. Some friends have questioned their age. Who is correct?

E. J. W.—Burbank Calif.

The dealer was correct. Besides the hand-filed threads, you will find on looking closely that the ball finials were cast in two parts. Finials in one piece were made considerably later.

JARDINIERE BY DOULTON

Would appreciate any information you could give me on this jardiniere.

F. H.—Middle Village, N. Y.

I believe your jardiniere, which resembles one I examined recently, was made by the Doulton Pottery, Lambeth, London, sometime after 1890.

Could you tell me when and where this antique chair was made? A friend bought it in New York.

L. B. McD.—San Juan, P.R.

You apparently have an English Windsor chair with pierced central back splat, made about 1850, probably at a High Wycombe shop.

ENGLISH WINDSOR CHAIR

VICTORIAN WASHSTAND

Under the marble top of this cabinet is written "Rothschild, made to order." What style is this piece? E. P.—Lorain, Ohio.

Your special-order washstand is of the American Victorian Renaissance substyle, dating circa 1865-1875.

ALPHABET PADLOCK

Do you have any idea of the age and origin of the padlock I have sketched? It has movable combination brass rings marked with letters of the alphabet. When manipulated to spell Fulton, it unlocks. E. L. F.—Belleville, Ill.

From your sketches and explanation, I would say you have an alphabet padlock, American, made about 1840. These padlocks were set to unlock by spelling a word or name.

PENNSYLVANIA CUPBOARD

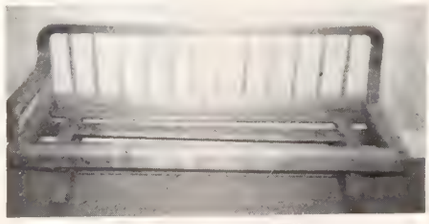
Our old corner cupboard came from Kentucky. It is of walnut with tiger-striped maple shelves. Any information about it would be appreciated. J. V. H.—Charlotte, N. C.

Some American cabinetmaker made your corner cupboard between 1780 and 1820. The design details suggest that it might have originated in Pennsylvania.

PATTERN GLASS MUG

We rediscovered in an old trunk this cup that belonged to my mother. Can you tell when or where it was made? E. B.—Bowie, Tex.

Your amber pattern glass mug was made after 1900 in an American glass factory but in what part of the country is hard to say. Possibly Vineland, N. J.



ITHACA CALENDAR CLOCK

My husband was given this clock several years ago. At one time it hung on the wall of the City Hall entrance in Richmond, Va. Can you identify the clock?

A. C.—Sharpsburg, N. C.

Yours is a calendar clock made by the Ithaca Clock Company, Ithaca, N. Y., in business from 1865 to 1914. Your clock dates about 1880–1900.

"PENANCE BENCH?"

I have been told that this handmade bench called a "penance bench" was used in Vermont and New Hampshire churches for penitents to sit on in front of the congregation when they wished to be taken back into the church. The inside edge across the top is very sharp and most uncomfortable when one leans back. Is my information correct? R. C.—Arlington, Vt.

Vermont history and literature do not refer to "penance benches." Your bench with spindle back dates from the early nineteenth century.

Thank you for the flowers. Roses have always been my favorites-but on towels these are special! Your new Persian roses are more than lovely. They're so soft they seem to bloom against my face. And the colors! My Persian roses are gold. But those shades of red, blueberry olive green and pink-I'm tempted to redecorate my bath every day. And at only $2.25 a bath towel, I could! Dundee, you make beautiful towels but you're also my favorite florist! Love, Emilie

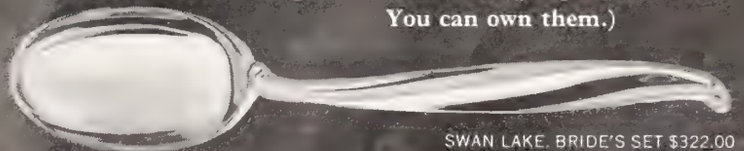
Mr. Beecham sighed. Pamela was in another scrape. This was no hoax. That Royal Danish serving spoon was part of the new sterling service she was taking to Newport.

How proud she was of its handsome Viking boldness. Yet, even with its regal Scandinavian type design, it looked as classic as a Greek column.



But, no sense wasting $500,000. No one could hold Pamela for long.

Nor did they. She escaped. Threw herself a huge welcome home party in the ballroom. And her Royal Danish sterling flatware gleaming on the long buffet out-glittered even the glittering chandelier.

But that's no surprise. The International Silver Company makes it.

The Bride's Set, a 44-piece service for eight complete with walnut chest, is only $356. It would cost $421 in open stock. You save $65.

(Some say the sterling pattern in this story was Swan Lake. Others claim it was Rhapsody. Not so. Although both are greatly favored by madcap contemporaries. The International Silver Company makes them. You can own them.)

Notes for the Hostess

BY DIANA BRYAN

In spite of the tradition that says formal candlesticks must be silver, I am convinced that crystal can be every bit as elegant. A good case in point is the Waterford crystal candlesticks Sara Bennett had on her dinner party table the other night. Slender and not overly decorated, they nevertheless had enough faceting to give them a diamond brilliance. Sara had set two matched pairs four-square around a plain crystal bowl filled with late-blooming roses from her own superlative rose garden. The whole centerpiece had a restrained charm, creating a mood that every guest, sitting down to dinner, responded to.

The Wheelocks had an old-fashioned field day recently and so did their guests—an afternoon of lawn sports followed by supper. Everybody came in casual clothes and played badminton, croquet, or lawn-bowls (a form of boccie), or merely looked on from lawn chairs. Lawn-bowls was played on a rough stretch of grass that added hilarious handicaps to the game. (The Wheelocks' set, incidentally, was made in England and came from Abercrombie & Fitch.) Croquet, set up on the best sweep of lawn, was a serious matter—the Wheelocks' English set is a far cry from the usual children's equipment.

Competition was fierce in all events, and by half-past six the champions—as well as the rest of us—had worked up a good appetite. Ice-cold beer had been served all afternoon, so the usual cocktail hour was passed up in favor of early supper. A barbecue had been set up where a chef, hired for the occasion, cooked enough chickens and roast corn to feed an army. In addition, a groaning board nearby held potato salad, baking powder biscuits, homemade pickles, apple chutney, and even home-preserved sour beets. For dessert, what else but watermelon?

Since nobody was ready to go home, we all sat around in the twilight, closing field day with songs and sundowners.

A young couple down the road from us have invited all the neighbors in for a cocktail this Saturday and I discovered they will be celebrating their tin wedding anniversary. Luckily I saw at Altman's yesterday the cutest pierced tin casserole holders (complete with casseroles)—oval, round, or rectangular, lightly color-washed with transparent paint. They are very much like contemporary Mexican tincraft, very attractive and festive. For the anniversary couple, I bought the oval casserole with lid.

My next-door neighbor recently received a diamond-studded double-dip birthday present from her husband—a Wollensak automatic hi-fi tape recorder-player. After having gone off the deep end with it and recorded everything within earshot, it occurred to her to make wonderful use of it for a party. Not the usual sort of thing where you record clever speeches of your guests and then play them back amid great hilarity (and usually to the eventual everlasting embarrassment of everybody concerned). Instead, she uses it to program an entire evening of recorded background music. She records special music programs from her radio and from her record collection for all sorts of wonderful evenings of uninterrupted music. She also caught a delightful, spontaneous folk-music jam session her teen-age youngsters and their friends had one night, and taped it, along with some of the lively "names" from records, for her children to play at their own next party.

The owl as an object for design has been with us since the ancient Greeks put him on the drachma as the symbol of Athens. People—myself included—have been charmed by his amusing dead-pan stare and concentric outlines; he is almost a caricature of a bird. The marvelous owls on the French plates I just bought at Cardel Ltd. can hardly be considered amusing, yet they certainly are not slavish ornithological reproductions either. Six different species are hand-painted in muted, misty colors on matte-finish china. I plan to use them with a centerpiece of interesting stones, polished pebbles, moss, maybe some dried flowers or fronds of wheat.

Tips for my party food file, seasonings department: Pepper Upper, Green Garnish, and Saffron Seasoning Blend, a trio to keep in mind and on the spice shelf. The first tastes of pepper, garlic, and onion, and can be used on anything you want to jazz up, from sour cream for a dip to a roast or steak. Green Garnish, a combination of herbs, works wonders with cream soups, eggs, and stews—adds color as well as spice. The saffron blend of course gives superb flavor to many rice dishes.

I came across these goodies recently when I went to a bridal shower to which we were all asked to bring a favorite recipe, neatly typed or printed on a standard index card, to be filed later in an attractive recipe box provided by the hostess. Along with the recipe, each of us brought whatever "secret ingredient" made the dish special. The guest who brought the above seasonings from House of Herbs (Salisbury, Conn.) claimed they could help the most inexperienced cook produce rather distinguished dishes. But I discovered that an old-hand-in-the-kitchen like myself can also find them very useful indeed.

Young Diana helped give a birthday party the other day for her best friend's 11-year-old sister. The mother of the two girls was in Europe, so big sister elected to do the honors—a thoughtful gesture indeed. The party was a dozen young ladies in for a late morning swim, with luncheon on the terrace afterward. Diana and Liz worked hard on the gay decorations and the festive sandwiches and snacks, and their pièce de résistance—the dessert—was really a charming coup. They took small white-painted flowerpots (real ones) and lined them with foil, filled them with ice cream liberally covered with sprinkles, and then—just before serving—planted the ice cream with all kinds of little garden flowers. According to Diana the trayful of ice-cream flowerpots all abloom looked terrific and elicited ooh's and aah's all around.

A friend recently brought me from Puerto Rico a collection of native produce, and by that I mean wondrously bright fruits and vegetables designed and made there of papier-mâché, highly glazed, rain-and-fade-resistant. She found them at Don Roberto (205 Calle del Cristo, San Juan)—mushrooms, red hot peppers, leeks, and pink onions. By mail, I plan to order radishes, eggplant, and pea pods to add to my papier-mâché vegetable bin. Heaped in a gay earthenware bowl, they make a fine centerpiece for an informal party table.

From half-buried Mayan temples to pre-fab jungle schools... from fiestas to family life... from Cortés to Castro... here is the real Mexico that most tourists never see!

Visit Mexico for 10 days as a guest of the LIFE World Library find out why Mexicans say "Como México no hay dos" —there is no other country like it!

The attached reply form will take you and your family on a 10-day armchair tour—all expenses paid—of a fascinating, paradoxical world at the very doorstep of the United States.

It's a democracy with only one real party—but it works.

It is 95% Catholic—but in some villages, when the local saint does not produce rain, his statue is whipped.

It has a giant medical center where workers receive free care. But nearby an Indian woman diagnoses illness by rubbing patients with eggs and studying the yolks.

This is MEXICO as only LIFE could reveal it —the sights, sounds, smells, legends, people—all yours to enjoy free for 10 days, in this introductory volume of the LIFE World Library.

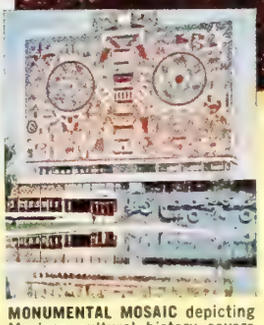
Mexico is torn between ancient ways and new ideologies. And never has it been more important to understand this struggle, for it is being duplicated in many emerging Central and South American nations.

Now here is the Mexico of yesterday, today, tomorrow captured in glowing color and bold black-and-white photographs by outstanding photographers . . . paintings and murals by great Mexican artists such as Diego Rivera . . . vivid, accurate reporting by the reporters and editors of Time-Life Books.

In Mexico City you'll encounter past and present mingling in noisy confusion. Buses careen through the streets with passengers clinging to the roof. A delivery boy teeters by on a bicycle, balancing a basket on his head. An Indian drives a flock of turkeys along the gutter.

It is a city of a thousand exotic smells. The odor of stone-ground corn meal. The aroma of Mexican coffee. The perfume from baskets of carnations, gardenias, dahlias, roses, carried on the heads of Indian women. The reek of chili-spiced mixtures simmering over charcoal braziers.

A turn of the page and you are transported to the abandoned Indian city of Uxmal, rising silently out of a vast, empty plain in northern Yucatán. A few pages further on, you'll attend a rural fiesta where men in caps of monkey fur do a shuffling dance, shaking gourd rattles and waving clay censers.



You'll hear stories of the men who made Mexico. Cortés, the hated Spanish conqueror whose bones were finally hidden to avoid riots. Cuauhtémoc, the Aztec ruler who defied him despite torture, and whose name is honored throughout Mexico. Father Hidalgo, whose rebel mob of 80,000 vainly tried to liberate Mexico from Spain in 1810 armed with sticks, stones, knives and axes. Santa Anna, the self-styled "Napoleon of the West," who sold part of Arizona and New Mexico to the U.S. to pay his troops. Juárez, the stoic Indian leader with the mystical regard for law, who gave Mexico its constitution. The gentle, high-minded Madero, who launched a decade of bloody revolution. President Cárdenas, who ordered the telegraph system to accept free for one hour a day all wires from poor folk to him.

Maps, bibliographies and dates of important historical people and events add to the volume's usefulness to school children in the family.

Ordinarily a book so thoroughly researched and lavishly illustrated would have to cost far more than $2.95. But this is the low price that the vast facilities and direct-distribution network of Time-Life Books makes possible. And you may acquaint yourself with this first volume in the LIFE World Library without paying anything. The postpaid reply form will bring you MEXICO to enjoy free for 10 days. Then you may, if you wish, return it without paying or owing anything. Otherwise it is yours to keep for only $2.95 plus a small charge for shipping and handling. Another volume in the series will be mailed to you under the same plan every two months, until your library is completed or you decide to discontinue.

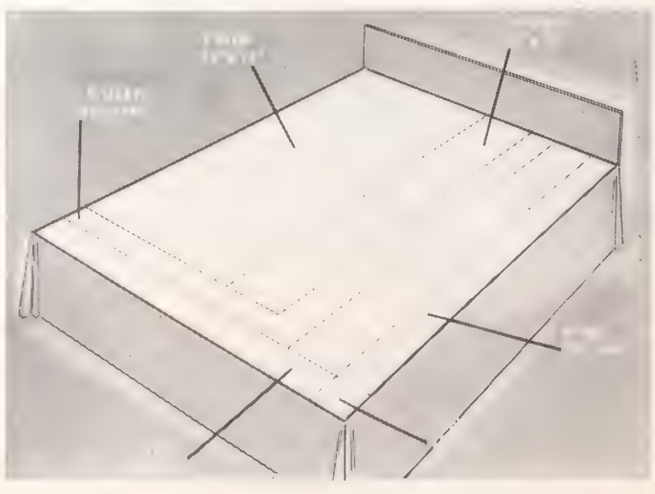
Late report on big beds and big bed linens

Like royalty the world over, king- and queen-size beds have come off their pedestals



Super-size beds and the bedding to fit them, once made-to-order luxuries, have lost their former exalted rank and are now taken for granted by all of us who take our comfort seriously. Long-legged Americans grow so much longer every generation that we have added an average of 2 inches to our height in the last fifty years. And we have been, not unreasonably, demanding longer beds. Not only have we wanted more length but more width, finding that the 27-inch half of the standard double bed—a share no wider than a baby's crib—is insufficient for an adult sleeper. Our needs are being met so effectively that bedding experts believe the standard 54-by-75-inch double bed (standardized one hundred years ago!) will soon be obsolete.

Springs and mattresses in the four super-sizes, below —the queen and three kings—will be found today among most stores' regular stocks. And you have a choice of mattress types: innerspring, latex foam rubber, and the newest urethane plastic foam. In the super-sizes, foam mattresses tend to be especially convenient because they handle easily in bed making and if you move or change rooms, they will bend to fit through a doorway.

Many headboards made for the standard double bed are wide enough to accommodate the additional 6 inches of the queen-size spring and mattress. Several bedding companies sell an expandable bed rail that makes the change-

Most people just can't wait to enjoy the stretch out comfort of their new supersize Beautyrest. It isn't just all that extra "bedroom" that's so great. It's that Beautyrest gives the best rest a body ever had. You see, Beautyrest's coil springs are separate . . . independent. They act separately to cradle hips and shoulders yet are free to firm up and support your back—give body-fitting comfort. Ordinary supersizes have coils tied together. They sag down together under body weight—give uncomfortable "hammock sleep". Ordinary tied-together coils make sleepers roll together too. With Beautyrest, togetherness is optional! "His" coils are separate from "Hers", so both enjoy single bed comfort. So start living . . . sleep supersize.

But, remember a supersize alone is not enough. It's Beautyrest supersize. Prices start at $89.50 over easy for any handy do-it-yourselfer.

The newest form of super-sized bed is the super-sized sleep sofa, a result of the two trends toward longer sofas and toward longer beds. Some years ago the sofa bed lost its bulkiness and became as svelte as a regular sofa. It preserved its svelteness as it grew longer. The new, larger dual sleep sofa is so well designed and its convertibility so well disguised that only its owner knows about its double life.

Alert to the new dimensions in beds, the manufacturers of bedspreads, blankets, and sheets have expanded their own size ranges, so their super-sizes (see chart, page 34) are no longer special-order luxuries. Every type and style of bedspread is now available in queen- and king-sizes. You can get inexpensive and washable cottons in ribbed and homespun weaves, Early American candy-tuft designs, damasks, and plaids. In somewhat higher price ranges, you will find quilted throws and coverlets to be used with dust ruffles (which, of course, also come oversized) and fitted styles as well, in a fabric range as wide as anyone could ask for. Even the luxurious woven-pattern spreads imported from Spain now come in these once-special sizes.

Every kind of blanket made in the previous standard sizes also can be found now in queen- and king-sizes: summer and winter weights, new open mesh thermal weaves, automatic electric styles in fresh new colors as well as the familiar pastels. The new two-tone reversible blanket with velvet binding comes in every new size, as do the increasingly popular ensembles of sheets and blankets in colors preselected to look well together.

Sheets, too, in a seemingly endless array of colors light and dark, of stripes, checks, plaids, and florals, sheets with all-over patterns or decorated borders, even hand-embroidered sheets—all are to be found in stores across the country in the complete range of sizes.

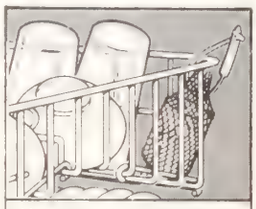
Simply amazing how 'Jet-Dry' automatically dries glasses spot-free in dishwashers!



Even though your dishwasher washes your dishes hygienically clean, your glasses and silverware can still come out with unsightly spots. This happens because minerals in the clean water itself cause these spots. Every drop of water left to dry on glasses and dishes after they are washed causes a spot. The water evaporates, but the minerals remain and form a spot. Detergents are helpless to prevent such spots, simply because they cannot wipe rinse water off dishes. But JET-DRY does. JET-DRY in the rinse water causes glasses, silverware and dinnerware to shed every drop of water right after they are rinsed. In a split second they are as bone-dry, spot-free and sparkling as if you wiped and polished every piece with a clean, dry towel.

If your dishwasher is equipped to dispense JET-DRY, don't let the reservoir run dry. One washing without JET-DRY can cause spots.

Leading dishwasher manufacturers recognize and recommend JET-DRY as the answer to spotting problems. They actually equip many models to automatically dispense JET-DRY, and place sample bottles of JET-DRY in these dishwashers at the factory.

Until recently you could enjoy spot-free automatic drying only if your dishwasher was equipped to dispense LIQUID JET-DRY. Now any dishwasher can dry dishes spot-free with new SOLID JET-DRY — a handy bar neatly encased in a mesh bag. Clip it to any corner of the upper rack, and watch your spotting problems disappear.

If your dishwasher is not equipped with a LIQUID JET-DRY dispenser use SOLID JET-DRY. Clip on any corner of upper rack.

The notes of a happy housekeeper

BY MARY ELIZABETH FALTER

These late summer days it is so pleasant to use the porch for our meals and our cocktail before dinner, and for the ritual of the Sunday papers. And now we're glad we spent so much time on what has come to be called "The Month We Painted the Porch Floor."

Early in the summer, we all decided it would benefit by fresh paint. We decided we would like an all-over spatter effect except for three places where we wanted a geometric design much like a giant hex mark. The floor would be plain directly under the design, but spattered all around it in three colors. As the painters were coming anyway to do some other work, we arranged to have them do a thorough preliminary sanding and put on two good coats of tan floor paint. When that was thoroughly dry, the fun began. First we covered the walls and railings of the porch with newspapers, fixing them securely with masking tape. Then we made patterns from newspaper to cover the three round areas for the design and stuck them down.

Next, using crimson, dark green, and black quick-drying lacquer, and several whisk brooms, we spattered over the freshly painted floor, starting at one end of the porch, working slowly and carefully to the other, and using all three colors at once.

The following weekend Tom painted the motifs—enlargements of one he found in a book of Early American design. He managed to get on all three thirty-six-inch patterns without too many wobbles. Next day, we put on the first of three coats of very hard-finish varnish, the most tedious part of all as we carefully sanded between each coat. Even if it took three weekends to do, our floor is painted to last a long time. We like the spattered effect, and it is very practical as it doesn't show dirt and footmarks.

Came upon a truly amazing laundry gadget the other day. It is a round blue plastic ball, about the size of a tennis ball and perfectly smooth. All you do is put it in your washer with the soiled clothes and half the usual amount of soap or detergent. The clothes come clean and bright and stay very soft and fluffy. The ball contains activated charcoal granules saturated with a special chemical compound. When the ball is agitated in the washer, these granules rub together and make a small amount of fluid that is forced through the plastic sides as a vapor. Although the vapor cannot be seen or felt, it seems to double the action of the soap or detergent. The Wonder Wash Ball costs about $3 and lasts for some 200 washings.

Like most other families we use marking pens for many jobs—addressing packages, writing labels, penning memos to each other, and especially for that most necessary and hopeful chore of labeling the children's equipment for camp and school. For all such purposes, the new Sheaffer "Smoothie" pens have become our favorites. We keep several colors plus black in a kitchen drawer and on the desk. The Smoothie writes quickly and smoothly without squeaking because it has a plastic tip instead of a felt one, and does not dry out. You can replace both the point and the ink barrel. too.

There's something luxurious about having a handy thermos of something hot or cold to drink just ready for the pouring. I have often used our regular picnic thermos to save extra iced tea or hot coffee. but now we have something far more practical and attractive. It's a simple, good-looking thermos carafe that pours without removing the top. The secret is an inner "floating" cap that rises as the liquid is poured and then drops back in place to form a perfect seal when the carafe is set down. Cuts down on spills. And I think coffee, for example, tastes fresher when I keep it in the Aladdin Thermos Pitcher than when it is kept hot over heat.

I love the new, rather fragile white embroidered curtains we have at our bedroom windows, but at first on breezy nights they presented a bit of a problem. We like the windows open wide, but the wind whipped the curtains vigorously, and tying them back only crushed them. Now I think I've got the solution. I sewed tiny white bone rings to the inner bottom corners of the curtain. Then we put white cup hooks about three-fourths of the way up the window casing. At night we simply hook up the corners of the curtains to the cup hooks, being careful not to bunch the curtains, but rather letting them follow their own folds. Next morning they fall back into place unwrinkled.

Sometimes it's fun to find things in out-of-the-way places. For months I had been promising myself a trip to a chemical supply house to buy some jars to store herbs in. I finally got there the other day and acquired exactly what I wanted: four-ounce jars with ground glass stoppers that will keep out the moisture during humid weather. While on the spot, I picked up some bigger jars for cotton balls and guest soaps in the bathroom, and some others for crackers and cocktail nibbles. Also got a pretty white china mortar and pestle—Tom has been wanting one to grind herbs and seasonings for salad dressing and barbecue marinades. That haul made it well worth the trip.

The longer I use my Belgian enameled-iron cookware, the more I appreciate it. Last Sunday I set a casserole of scalloped potatoes on the outdoor grill to keep warm as we cooked a steak. Naturally it got greasy and smoky from the fire. But all it took to get the Descoware bright and clean again was a quick rinse in good hot suds. I love its cheery red color, too.

We have a rather odd stove, one of those made to be used in a restaurant. We bought it because of its open broiler and wonderful cast-iron griddle, and we love it. But recently I noticed its black finish had begun to wear off along the back where pot handles rub, and around the knobs where you turn the gas off and on. This bothered me because it gave our otherwise wonderful stove a slightly tired look. I felt it would be better to remove all the paint from these two areas, leaving two nice clean steel bands—one at the back and one along the front. But in order to use regular paint remover, we would have to go to all the trouble of turning the gas off, and then re-lighting all the pilots again.

One day I saw in the hardware store a product called Klean-Strip that said in large red letters it's non-flammable. Used it with amazing results: The battered paint came off in a matter of minutes. We simply painted the Klean-Strip on with a small brush, let it set a few minutes and scraped the paint off easily with a putty knife. Then we scoured the surfaces with fine steel wool and soap and water. The stove looks like new and has stayed clean, too. To apply Klean-Strip, by the way, use brushes of the 15-cent variety and throw them away afterward; also remember to protect your hands with rubber gloves.

I am so thankful that early in the summer I invested in a cold server to match our hot tray that's been such a joy. The cold tray is ingeniously designed for serving chilled foods and beverages. With it come three (in the large size, four) cans called "cold cells" that contain a cooling agent. You freeze them in the freezing compartment of your refrigerator, then snap them into place under the tray, which stays icy cold for hours. I have used my Salton Hotray Cold Server on the buffet table and on the terrace, of course, but also to keep the frozen foods cold whenever I am cleaning the freezing compartment of the refrigerator. All I have to do is place the packages of food close together on the tray and cover them with the plastic dome. Even on a hot day they will stay frozen until the refrigerator is ready for them again.

Got a fine tip from the refrigerator serviceman the other day. I happened to mention the fact that it was sometimes difficult to get rid of strong odors without removing everything from the refrigerator, disconnecting, washing and airing it. He said that if the box is clean, all you have to do is set a piece of charcoal on a saucer inside and close the door. The charcoal will absorb the odors very quickly. (Just be sure to tell the youngsters the charcoal is not edible!)

SCALE-MODEL FURNITURE KIT for do-it-yourself decorators. Plan-It-Kit, above, comprises three-dimensional furniture shapes, cast in white Styrofoam and scaled ½ inch to a foot, plus wall and window strips, and durable graph paper on which to mark off your room dimensions accurately. Storage and cabinet pieces are in standard modular sizes so you can create your own combinations. You can paint the Styrofoam or cover it with fabric swatches to experiment with color effects. An eight-page illustrated booklet outlines ways of using the kit and useful principles of design. Complete kit, $7.98 postpaid. Plan-It-Kit Co., Colonial Green, Westport, Conn., 06880.

PORTRAIT PLATES. An exhibition of plates by Italian designer Fornasetti will tour several cities in the U. S. this autumn. All 250 black-and-white plates are painted with the face of a woman—in fact, each plate is a different, imaginative portrait of the same face (proving either the well-known infinite variety of Woman or the infinite creativity of Fornasetti, or both). Exhibition stops include Neiman-Marcus NorthPark store in Dallas, August 22 through September 14, La Colonna Galiery in Chicago, beginning October 8.

A VIEW OF OUR BUILDINGS. Seventy-one outstanding examples of American architecture created within the last sixty-five years are featured in an exhibition, Modern Architecture, U.S.A., at the Museum of Modern Art in New York. Shown in large color transparencies, each building is significant for its design qualities and influence, according to Arthur Drexler, Director of the museum's Department of Architecture and Design, who arranged the exhibition. On view in New York through September 6, the show will travel here and abroad.

NEWS IN SIGHT AND SOUND from the music show this summer: advances in electronics, an enlarging field of home entertainment, new designs in familiar TV, stereo, and tape recorder equipment. One big attraction was video tape recorders with companion TV cameras—a device for capturing sound and picture together, for home movies that you play on your TV screen. Other innovations:

- Dimensia IV, a large teakwood cube, (see page 34), with four compartments for housing a 12-inch pop-up television set, a stereo record changer, a tape deck, an AM/FM stereo radio. Via plug-in earphones, four people could enjoy private listening at one time. Another asset: cube's hidden casters. So far, the cube is an experimental prototype. However, a spokesman for RCA suggests this is the kind of entertainment center any enterprising do-it-yourselfer could assemble. By RCA Victor, 600 North Sherman Drive, Indianapolis, Ind., 46201.

- Sun Charger, a small, portable eight-transistor radio that converts power from sunlight for playing or recharging batteries. The 4⅝ by 5-inch model, which houses solar cells in its carrying handle, also plugs into any AC wall outlet, or plays directly from batteries. $59.95, with carrying case, earphone attachment, batteries and AC recharger line cord. By Zenith Sales Corporation, 1900 North Austin Ave., Chicago, Ill., 60639.

THE INSTANT CAR. An all-plastic sports car, below, molded in two parts and stamped out in just 15 minutes by a thermoforming process, may be the car of the future. Some oracles say it may one day displace cars with metal bodies. This prototype, 33 inches high by 156 inches long, is the experimental design of the Borg-Warner Chemical Corporation and has yet to be produced by a car manufacturer. They claim the plastic 140-pound body is almost impervious to damage—a hot-air gun and sander will fix a dented fender in a jiffy. Bucket seats and dashboard are an integral part of the top half; the clutch, brake, and accelerator controls are adjustable. This racy little model, with a 62 horsepower engine, will go up to 110 miles per hour.

How to eat a rose

There's more to a rose than meets the eye. These romantic, sweet-smelling flowers can be turned into delightful concoctions that pique the imagination and tantalize the taste buds.

by Euell Gibbons

EDITOR'S NOTE: Euell Gibbons's two successful books, Stalking the Wild Asparagus and Stalking the Blue-Eyed Scallion, introduced Americans to the wild, free produce of nature's supermarket—the shore and countryside—and the delectable dishes to be made from foods that can be had for the foraging. He and his wife Freda live in an old farmhouse in a part of rural Pennsylvania that provides an ideal stalking ground for wild delicacies.

Everyone appreciates roses for their beauty and fragrance, but how many know that in some parts of the world roses are also highly regarded for their flavor and food value? Roses can be made into various delicious dishes ranging from condiments and flavorings through main dishes and beverages to delicate desserts and sublime jams and jellies. The best-known of all flowers, roses grow from Greenland to Tasmania, from cold Siberia to southern India. There are dozens of species of wild rose, and more than 7,500 cultivated varieties. They have been portrayed by artists and praised by poets more than all other flowers put together. Gather ye rosebuds while ye may—but if you want roses in December, make some heavenly rose-petal jam that can be stored away.

Rose petals

Uncooked Rose Petal Jam is astonishingly easy to make. Gather freshly opened roses on a dry morning, before the sun has distilled away too much of their ethereal flavor and fragrance. Any fragrant variety of rose will do, providing it has not been sprayed with poisonous insecticides. The deep red roses give the color of jam I like best, but by using a different color for each batch you can soon make your jam cupboard resemble a rainbow.

The white base of the rose petal contains a bitter substance, so clip that away. This is not the tedious job that it sounds. Grasp as many petals as you can hold between your fingers and thumb, pull them from the rose and snip off all the white bases at once with a pair of shears. Our ancestors had to pound the rose petals in a stone mortar, but we can do a better job in far less time using an electric blender. Prepare as many petals as can easily be packed into one cup, then put them in the blender with ¾ cup water and the juice of 1 lemon. Blend until smooth, then gradually add 2½ cups sugar, letting the blender run until you are sure all the sugar has dissolved. Stir one package powdered pectin (Sure-Jell) into ¾ cup water, bring to a boil and boil hard for 1 minute, stirring constantly. Pour the pectin into the rose-sugar mixture with the blender running on slow and blend only until you are sure all is thoroughly mixed. Pour immediately into small sterilized jars with screw caps that will seal hermetically (baby food jars are ideal). I was amazed to find that fifteen minutes after I had gathered the roses, I was pouring the jam leisurely into the jars.

Allow the sealed jars to stand at room temperature for about six hours and the contents will be nicely jelled. This jam will keep for a month in the refrigerator, but if you want some for next winter, store it in your freezer. Then when the wind is howling about the eaves and the sleet is pelting against the storm windows, open a jar of this rosy jam. Being uncooked, it captures all the color, flavor, and fragrance of the fresh-blown rose. Besides eating this jam in such obvious ways as spreading it on toast and hot biscuits, you can use it in prepar-

Can woman live by detergents alone?

No. Absolutely no. Absolutely, positively, unequivocally no. No, no, never. What would be the point of ruffled nighties if she could? Or candlelight with leftovers? Or Yardley soap?

Probably you already know the clean-cut joy of bathing with Yardley. How it soothes and scents without depriving your skin of its precious natural oils.

But do you know you can put Yardley to all kinds of other simple disarming uses—long before it goes near the water? Well, you can. Why don't you just put up your feet and let us tell you all about them.

1. Tuck a cake of Yardley soap among your linens and lingerie. A fresh nightie scented with Yardley is an even better reason for climbing into bed than "Casablanca" on the late show.

2. You carry handkerchiefs? Good for you! Put a cake of Yardley in among them, too.

3. Put Yardley in among your little girl's rompers. (A girl can never start too soon with that sort of thing.)

4. Company's coming? Put a cake in the bathroom where it can't be missed. Yardley doesn't cost much; it just looks like it does. Everybody will think you married well.

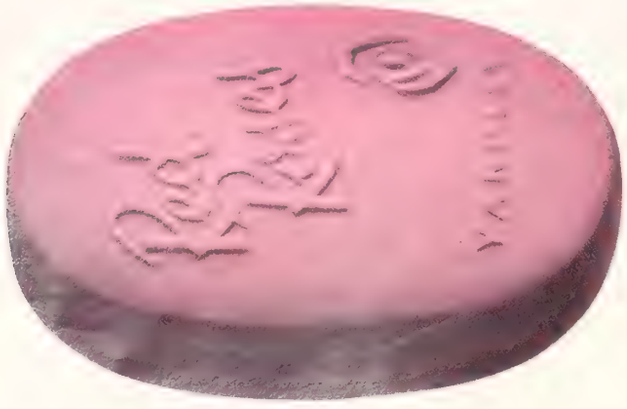
5. You've finally unwrapped your Yardley? Don't overlook the wrapper. Tuck a little piece of it into your shoe. Put another piece into the pocket of a coat. Make everything smell nice.

6. You can't stand not using your Yardley soap? Then goodness, climb into a nice hot tub before you take cold. And take your Yardley with you.

7. Loll.

8. Wiggle your toes.

9. Grin.

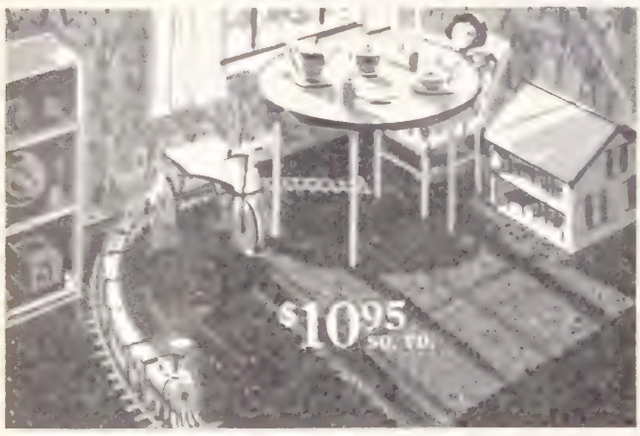


10. Submerge.

11. Wash behind your ears.

12. Hum.

13. Suds all over with those incredibly rich fragrant suds. Yardley will last and last because it's "English-milled "(that means the air's all squeezed out). And the fragrance will last, too, all day, because Yardley puts pure flower oils into its soap.



14. When your soap finally gets too skinny to get a good grip on it, go out to the store for more Yardley, and think of this on the way: I can buy Yardley dusting powder, I can buy Yardley bath oil, I can buy Yardley perfume, cologne, after-bath lotion, talcum, bath salts, and bubble bath. Scented with April Violets, Red Roses, Crushed Carnation, English Lavender and lots of other marvelous things. Three cakes to the box, from $1.25. Gosh, it's nice to be a girl!

A houseful of value...all "501"

The three carpets in these rooms are of Du Pont nylon certified "501". That's where the similarity ends. One costs $7.95, another $10.95 and another $15.95 per square yard.*

Many factors determine the price of a carpet: pile content, density, fabric construction, styling, carpet manufacturing know-how of an experienced mill. Many factors also determine how much money you put into a carpet: your own color and design preferences, where the carpet will be used, and how much wear it will get over the years. Seek the advice of a reputable dealer.

No matter how much or how little you decide to invest in carpets for the various rooms in your house, any carpet of Du Pont nylon certified "501" has passed the five rigorous Du Pont tests of quality; tests for fiber content, pile weight, pilling, light-fastness and backing. ing a number of exotic dishes that will enhance your reputation as a culinary artist.

To make Rose Muffins, simply make tiny muffins of your favorite muffin batter, adding a pinch of mace, a spice that enhances and complements the flavor of roses. When the muffins are nearly done, slide the oven rack out part way, make a small depression in the top of each muffin and fill it with rose jam. Return the muffins to the oven to finish browning and to glaze the jam, then serve hot, each muffin displaying a bright and tasty jewel in its crown.

Rose Pancakes are frankly fancy, and a more sophisticated after-theatre supper can hardly be imagined. Make the batter ahead of time, as it needs to stand two hours or more to thicken properly: Beat 2 eggs just enough to blend; add 1 cup light cream. Sift in ½ cup enriched flour, 1½ teaspoons sugar, and ¼ teaspoon salt, and beat smooth with a rotary beater. At serving time, heat the electric griddle to 375° and oil it lightly. Beat the batter again and use 2 tablespoons for each cake. After browning the pancakes lightly on both sides, spread each with rose-petal jam and roll up. Do not sprinkle with powdered sugar as so many cook books recommend: it looks as if the cook had spilled flour over them. Instead, put a dollop of rose-colored whipped cream on each rolled-up pancake, or even better, make a slight depression in the top of each rolled cake, put a teaspoon of good cognac in each depression, set alight and bear the dish to your guests in a blaze of glory.

Fresh rose petals are good for many things besides making jam. When I want to impress an overnight guest with an unusual breakfast, I make a Rose Omelette. Break 8 eggs into the electric blender, season with 1 level teaspoon celery salt and a pinch of marjoram, then add ½ cup rose petals with the bitter white bases clipped away. Blend at medium speed until the eggs are fluffy and the petals practically liquefied. Every good cook knows that a perfect omelette lies fully as much in the cooking as in the ingredients. Pour the mixture into an oiled pan over medium heat. If you have the heat just right, the bottom will be lightly browned when the top is just set. Make a crease across the top with a spatula, fold the omelette over and slide it onto a platter without trying to lift it. Sprinkle a bright trail of paprika across the top of the omelette and decorate the dish with dewy rosebuds. The rose petals in this omelette not only give it a spectacular color, but an interesting flavor that will be appreciated by anyone whose sense of taste is not overpowered by prejudice. With a dish of Canadian bacon and a pot of steaming coffee, this is a breakfast that can be set before the most discriminating gourmet.

Candied Rose Petals are a delight to eye and nose and a joy to the tongue. Prepare the petals as for jam, plucking them from the rose in bunches and snipping off the bitter white bases. Mix the white of 1 egg with 1 tablespoon of water, dip each petal in this liquid and place the petals, convex side up, on paper towels to drain. When the excess liquid has drained off, but the petals are still evenly dampened, sprinkle both sides with granulated sugar. Shake off excess sugar and place the petals on wax paper to dry for about twelve hours. Stored in a covered container in the refrigerator, they will keep their color and fragrance for about a month. According to an ancient herbalist, this candy is "a very good cordial against faintings, swoonings, weakness, and trembling of the heart, strengthens a weak stomach, promotes digestion, and is a very good preservative in the time of infection." What more could you ask of a confection?

Harem Kisses is the name of an even better candy. Put ½ cup of red rose petals, with the white bases clipped off, into the blender with 1 egg white, 1½ tablespoons water, and 3 tablespoons light cream. Blend until smooth and fluffy, then pour into a mixing bowl and gradually mix in sifted confectioners' sugar until it is thick enough to knead. Work until smooth, then cover with a damp cloth and let stand one hour. Shape mixture with your hands into tiny balls and top each with a shelled pistachio nut.

Rose water

Rose water, a fragrant, flavorful liquid rich in ancient lore, can be purchased in fancy food shops that handle imported delicacies, but a very good grade of rose water can also be bought in most drug stores, for your pharmacist uses this fragrant fluid to flavor many prescriptions. Used discreetly, rose water can work wonders in rice puddings, custards, and gelatin desserts. In Persia, there is a belief that if a woman gives an erring lover or husband some food containing rose water, he will thereafter be faithful to her. (If American women ever accept this belief, it will send the consumption of rose water soaring.) In India, rose water is used to flavor soft drinks, sherbets, ice cream, cakes, and many other delicacies. In Turkey, a bottle of rose water appears on the table in lieu of catsup or other bottled sauces. The Arabs call rose water "dew of paradise" and use it to glaze roast fowl. It transforms an ordinary chicken into a bird of paradise.

To make Rose Water Glaze, mix together 3 tablespoons honey, 2 tablespoons melted butter, and 1 tablespoon rose water. Paint the whole outside of a chicken with this mixture, using a pastry brush, just before you put it in the oven. Any glaze that is left can be painted on as you baste.

For a Rose Water Seafood Sauce that does something inspiring for oysters, fish, scallops, and many other seafood dishes, mix 1 part lemon juice, 1 part rose water, and 1 part melted butter.

Rose Syrup not only goes well with pancakes and waffles, but also makes a delicious sauce for puddings, or topping for ice cream. To make it, mix together 2 cups sugar, 1 cup light corn syrup, and ¾ cup water, and simmer for 20 minutes. When cool, add ½ cup rose water, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, and enough red food coloring to give it a rosy tint. Pour into sterilized bottles with tight-fitting caps, store in a dark place.

A Rosy Soda is a simple matter of putting 2 tablespoons rose syrup in the bottom of a tumbler and adding a scoop of vanilla ice cream. Fill the glass with plain soda and stir.

For Rose Wafers, blend ½ cup sugar and ½ cup butter. Add 1 beaten egg, ¾ cup flour, and a pinch of salt. Mix well, then add 1 tablespoon rose water, working until smooth. Drop by teaspoonfuls on an oiled cookie sheet and bake at 375° for 10 minutes.

To enhance broiled grapefruit, put a tablespoon of rose syrup in the center of each half before you broil them.

Rose hips

Rose hips are better known as food than is the flower. The hips are the fruit of the rose and [illegible] bush like small apples. They vary from the tiny, bird-shot size of the Rosa multiflora to the huge, plum-size hips of the Rosa rugosa. The larger varieties are more tasty, less tedious to prepare, and generally higher in vitamin content. For the very best hips, gather them in the autumn [illegible] they turn bright red, for later they develop a bothersome silkiness about the seeds.

There are few foods that are comparable to rose hips in vitamin C content. Although we think of oranges as being high in vitamin C, rose hips contain even more of this protective vitamin. In England, during the last war, there was a great shortage of citrus fruits, so the civilian population turned out and picked thousands of tons of rose hips. (At about the same time, it was discovered that B vitamins could be processed from spent brewery hops, and some wag remarked that nutritionally, England was getting on by its hips and hops.) In Northern Europe, from Germany to Lapland, rose hips were eaten purely for enjoyment, long before the word "vitamin" was coined.

To make Rose Hip Jam, prepare the rose hips by cutting off both the stem and blossom ends, making a slit down the side of each hip and removing the seeds. Put 1 cup prepared rose hips, ¾ cup water, and the juice of 1 lemon into the blender, and blend until perfectly smooth. With blender running, gradually add 3 cups sugar and blend until you are sure all the sugar has dissolved. Stir 1 package powdered pectin into ¾ cup water, bring to a boil and boil hard 1 minute, stirring all the time. Pour this into the blender and blend until it is thoroughly incorporated. Pour immediately into small, screw-capped jars, seal and store in the refrigerator. If the jam is to be kept more than one month, store in the freezer. Being uncooked, all the rich vitamin C content is retained, and a small serving of this tasty jam will give you your daily minimum requirement of Vitamin C.

Rose Hip Soup is a wonderful Scandinavian invention. It can be served hot or cold, at the beginning of the meal or at its close, and a bowl of this bright soup will turn a very ordinary meal into a feast. Boil 2 cups rose hips in 1 quart water until they are tender, then put through a sieve to remove the seeds and skins. Add enough water to again make 1 quart, stir in ½ cup sugar and return to the heat. Mix 1 tablespoon cornstarch into a smooth paste with a little water and stir this in. Cook a few minutes until it thickens slightly and looks clear. If you want to be really festive, stir a jigger of Cherry Heering into the soup just before dishing it up, and float a spoonful of sour cream on each serving. This is a wonderful way to fortify yourself with Vitamin C. No wonder that an ancient herbalist once wrote that the use of roses in cookery "maketh a man merrie and joyful and putteth away all melancholie and madnesse." Try some of these rose recipes on a grouchy spouse.

MICHOACÁN MEXICO

BY ELLEN SHERIDAN

EDITOR'S NOTE: Ellen Sheridan, an editorial consultant for H&G in Los Angeles, has written many perceptive articles about her two favorite sources of folk art, Mexico and Japan. During a recent visit to the state of Michoacán, she discovered the amazing affinity between the Tarascan Indian wood houses and those of the Japanese. One of these distinctive houses, along with demonstrating craftsmen from Pátzcuaro, will be a highlight of the Mexican Art Show in the Fine Arts Building at the Los Angeles County Fair, held in Pomona September 17 through October 3.

Unspoiled is a fitting word for Michoacán. The waves of successive civilizations that swept over Mexico never completely inundated this remarkable state, nor has the modern era defaced the colonial integrity of its capital, Morelia. A beautifully preserved pink sandstone city, Morelia is the gateway back into receding ages of time and the empire of the Tarascan, the proud, reserved Indian race that resisted the power of the Aztecs and was conquered but never assimilated by the Spanish. The lake of Pátzcuaro was the heartland of this empire, and the Tarascan still lives around it much as he did before the Conquest. Pátzcuaro has one of the finest outdoor markets in Mexico, rivaled only by that of Oaxaca, and the entire region is a rich source of folk art and crafts.

Despite spectacular Alpine scenery and good facilities, Michoacán is not overrun by tourists. The more obvious lures of the two cities it lies between—Mexico City and Guadalajara—have kept it relatively undiscovered. The motorists who rush through Morelia, trying to make the trip from Mexico City to Guadalajara in one day, unwittingly bypass an opportunity for one of the most fascinating insights into Mexico that is possible today.

Spanish-colonial Morelia is worth entering from the east just to see the monumental stone aqueduct that has become its symbol. This imposing mass divides the highway, its 250 proud arches becoming taller and taller as the road descends into the city faster than the water channel.

The main street, Avenida Madero, leads to the city center—the Plaza. As with most Mexican towns, the best way to see Morelia is to begin here and explore on foot.

The Plaza is classically enclosed on three sides by arcades, or portales, and dominated at one end by the Cathedral, perhaps the finest in Mexico. For us, the Plaza's greatest charm was as a place to watch Morelia's people, especially on Sunday, when the band gives a concert at five in the afternoon and families turn out for a stroll. You can well understand their brimming pride in their children, the little (Continued on page 64) girls dressed within an inch of their lives. Clouds of huge balloons appear for the children on Sunday in the Plaza, giving it the color and atmosphere of a circus or carnival.

It is worthwhile to digress briefly down the tree-shaded promenade of Calzada de Guadalupe to visit the Sanctuary of Guadalupe. An example of just how exuberant Indian baroque art can get, its interior is totally carved in colored cake-icing flowers that subdue the indifferent paintings they surround. The side chapel is crammed with another genuine folk-art form, retablos, the primitive, often touching votive-offerings that commemorate real favors from the Virgin or saint to the faithful.

The experience of Morelia could hardly be complete without a visit to the market, to mix with the people of the town and the region and see the crafts they produce and the foods they eat. Sundays and Thursdays are the best days, for then the market spills over for blocks around the main wooden structure near the San Francisco church, south of the Plaza. We were fascinated by the bounty of fruits and vegetables, and especially by the large, fat, round, green onions. We bought several dozen hanks of henequen twine, dyed vivid orange, magenta, yellow-green, lime, purple, and turquoise. (Henequen, heavier here than elsewhere, is not color-fast and must be kept away from dampness.) We use it at Christmas to wrap large Styrofoam cones for an effect of a forest of trees in folk-art colors.

Even a museum can be brought to life by people. Our guide in the Casa de Morelos—home of the patriot for whom this city, once called Valladolid, was renamed—took us through the rooms and displays of personal effects with such vivid and enthusiastic pantomime that he made the patriot seem real even through a language barrier. The State Museum is less populated by enthusiasts, but it makes up for this with its lively collections, ranging from pre-Columbian figures of subtle humor to contemporary frescoes by Cantu and Alfredo Zalce, all in the framework of a lovely eighteenth-century palace. We especially enjoyed the ancient Tarascan flat clay figures that look as if they have been molded from cookie dough. (A California friend actually used these Tarascan designs as a basis for Christmas cookies for her friends.)

One of Mexico's ranking artists is Zalce, a native Morelian. His mural in the entrance of the state capitol, Palacio de Gobierno, across Avenida Madero from the Cathedral, is well worth seeing. Around his house near the Charro Park he has built a complex of studio-workshops for craftsmen of the region. Presiding like the master of a medieval atelier, Zalce works, instructs, and stimulates. He and his artisans turn out and sell pottery, prints, silver, and polished horn jewelry, abalone shell inlaid in wood, matte-finish tiles, pierced building blocks of fired clay, and murals on wood. Especially interesting are Zalce's hand-printed wood blocks depicting the history of the Toltec civilization.

Two recent additions to Morelia are the new Casa de las Artesanias de Michoacán and Office of Tourism, both housed in the same building at 493 Madero Oriente. The Casa de las Artesanias has a permanent exhibition of Michoacán arts and crafts, some of which can be bought in the tourist office.

Hotels in Morelia are either in town or two miles south of town in the hills of Santa Maria. The Hotel Virrey de Mendoza on the Plaza is in the colonial style, with a modern annex, the Hotel Alameda, across the street. A block north of the Plaza, at Zaragosa and Melchor Ocampo, is the seventeenth-century Hotel de la Soledad, recently restored by two architect brothers, and toward the east end of town is the Acueducto Hotel, worth visiting for its display room of carved Churriguer-esque bed, chests, and chairs that might have been seen in the rooms of a colonial mansion.

If you prefer to go to the hills, you will find three things that are lacking in the city: commanding views, a group of shops, and a cluster of nonurban places to stay—the Villa San José, set in a garden with a view; the Motel Vista Bella, which has large airy rooms and a dining room built around an inner garden court; and the Villa Montaña.

We chose the Villa Montaña, a unique inn. Staying there is like being in a friend's house—with good reason, for this is how it started. When Raymond Coté, an American, built his house in Morelia, his friends were so delighted with their visits that they asked if they could return as paying guests. The house grew over the years, and today twenty-one rooms surround a central sala or salon, dining room, kitchen, swimming pool, and terrace. The architecture of the Villa Montaña has a colonial flavor, but is warmer and friendlier. Mr. Coté has lowered the height of the ceilings, used large but not enormous panes of glass for windows, combined brick with stone for warmth, and installed a working fireplace in every room. The ceiling construction, unique to Michoacán, consists of beams over which wet shingles are set in a herringbone pattern, with a final layer of tile.

Before dinner, served promptly at half-past seven, everyone is invited to cocktails at half-past six in the salon or on the terrace as Mr. Coté's guests, while guitarist-singers in local costume render the haunting songs of Michoacán. The food is often matched in color to the local pottery—pea soup, for instance, in green-and-brown Patamban ware. At breakfast time an antique Spanish table is laden with a beautiful arrangement of fruit from the high country and the hot country—melons, watermelon, pineapple, papaya, mangoes, oranges, bananas, berries, and exotic tropical fruits we did not recognize.

Rooms at the Villa Montaña are furnished with antique colonial and contemporary Mexican pieces, and the gardens are filled with Michoacán sculpture and stonework (anything you fall in love with may be bought, since Ray Coté has a large stock of treasures). We noticed that the garden walls were made of short sections of terra-cotta pipe that allow the breeze to pass through, and decided that this was an excellent idea adaptable to gardens at home.

The Villa has three outstanding shops. One sells excellent handloomed wool and cotton textiles (Continued on page 70)

1. Doorway of sixteenth-century church in Angahuan, near Uruapan, is in the style known as Plateresque, originally derived from the designs on silver ornaments. 2. Natural sisal door mats with naïve designs in colors from Salinas, Pátzcuaro, which can also be used as outsize (11 by 18 inches) informal place mats. 3. Unusual ceiling construction of crisscross shingles, a unique feature of Michoacán architecture. 4. Antique vargueño with tiny carved and gilded drawers covered by a drop front. A vargueño is customarily placed on top of a narrow table to serve as a desk, but it works equally well as a chair-side table. Similar vargueños may be found at the Villa Montaña antique shop.

Why the softest Kroehler sofa can't give you a hard time

Sofa and chair comfort depends entirely upon the pitch of the seat and back and the way they form an angle of relaxed rest under your weight.

This demands "teamwork under pressure" in everything from basic frame design to cushions to springs and the way they're suspended.

Springs especially are important. They have to be soft enough to yield comfortably (but don't confuse "softness" with comfort!) yet not so soft that they let your weight unbalance the pitch. When that happens your body is forced into stresses and strains. You might not even notice them with a few quick sit-downs, but in longer sitting you squirm, fidget, and "can't seem to get comfortable." In short, your soft sofa gives you a hard time.

This can't happen with Kroehler sofas or chairs. They don't force you, they hold you—in Balanced Comfort. They keep the correct pitch correct with the best, perfectly tempered spring steel money can buy. Remember that term, Balanced Comfort. It's one of the reasons people buy more Kroehler sofas and chairs than any other brand.

Suggested retail prices may vary slightly in different areas due to varying transportation costs and fabrics selected.*

So durable it's used outdoors...so attractive it's used indoors. Costs only about $5.40 a square yard.

Now it's practical to use carpet where you've never used it before—patio, porch, terrace, poolside, kitchen, playroom, bath. Ozite Town 'n' Terrace Carpet is easy to install, easy to clean—and gives long, hard wear.

(bedspreads are especially good, as are handloomed wool capes), dishes from the Michoacán pottery villages, and copperwork from Santa Clara del Cobre. I bought a stunning glazed green-and-brown pottery jar, twenty-eight inches high, that I now use as a party punch bowl, and a crude stone angel, one of the reproductions from the garden. A second shop sells a selection of the best folk art from Michoacán and the surrounding states, and a third is a storehouse of antique chests, tables, chairs, iron candelabra, and santo figures.

You need reservations for the Villa Montaña at any time (it is closed, however, between May 15 and June 15), but if you plan to go for Christmas, they should be made months in advance and are accepted only for stays of ten days or two weeks. The address is Villa Montaña Apartado 233, Morelia, Michoacán, Mexico, and the telephone number is 2-25-88.

Of the many side trips from Morelia, the most important is to Pátzcuaro, just forty miles away on a good road, where remnants of the ancient Tarascan civilization still survive. You cannot get the most out of Pátzcuaro on a one-day trip. It deserves at least two or three separate visits.

We made our first trip on Friday, market day, going directly to the town in order to be there early enough to see the Indians arrive with loaded dugout canoes from the lakeside villages, or with loaded burros from the hills. The channel through the dense tule reeds and water hyacinths is so narrow that the dugouts seem to be gliding across dry land. Most of the vendors converge on the huge plaza. Those who set out their wares in the smaller plaza a block away specialize in pottery, masks, and wood carving.

At first, the market is dazzling and overwhelming. We made several circuits, past a forest of serapes hanging from tree trunks, past broad leaf platters of whitefish from the lake, stacks of vegetables, piles of whole cheeses, noticing something new each time around—orange mushrooms, white sweet potatoes, twine products, and some attractive red-brown mats, which we bought for terrace cushions. The market has fairly good serapes (which should be checked for color-fastness by dabbing a section with a moistened handkerchief) and the restrained Tarascan rebozos, mostly of black cotton with vertical blue stripes.

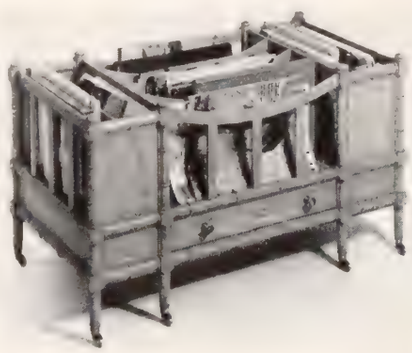
Magazine racks: a miscellany

In that period of glory when they are news, good magazines deserve good homes. Here are nine ways to keep them handy, handsomely housed, yet neatly out of the way



When even a little floor space is at a premium, a hanging rack (you can't bark your shins on it) makes an excellent storehouse. This one, of black cowhide, is dashing enough for almost any wall. Loops hold five magazines tautly furled, titles well visible. Available at Matthews, $35.

Cartouche-shaped, a beautifully grained hanging rack of teak is as solid as Gibraltar and (should you lack wall space) a particularly good choice for a door. In the manner of an old-fashioned letter rack, metal brackets hold a surprising number of glossies in view. At Wilburt, $39.

A Canterbury (a pretty conceit Victorians used for sheet music) makes a fine cache for magazines. Of ash-wood, almost a yard long and caster-borne, this elegant example has a carved chassis of faux bamboo, a shallow drawer, eight compartments. By Baker at Altman's, $260.

MIEHLMANN

Designed like a double easel, a rack of solid walnut has an oiled finish, a pleasant see-through look, and a handle to tote it by. It might at times sit on a table and double as a reading stand; it could hold a heavy dictionary, display a print or painting. 22" high. At Altman's, $20.

For women who have better things to do than iron draperies.

Don't ever iron your beautiful Fiberglas Beta draperies. You don't have to. Just hang them up and enjoy them (or enjoy something else with the ironing time you've saved). They are perfectly washable, won't shrink, or stretch. They're also sunsafe, firesafe. In patterns, styles, and colors absolutely right for any room in your house. Nothing has ever been so nice to windows as Fiberglas Beta.

A good all-around choice for either a traditional or contemporary room (and hence, a thoughtful gift), a rack with a very simple, dark walnut frame owes its sleek look to side panels of wheat-colored caning. Its 7-inch width should hold a dozen periodicals and the morning paper. At Abraham & Straus. About $25.

For a true magazine enthusiast (the collector who can't bear to throw one away), a sleek two-tiered rack of brass tubing offers storage enough for a year's issues of at least two publications. Slightly canted top shelf keeps titles and dates well in searcher's view. At Altman's. $50.

For perfectionists who insist on the right rack for the right room, this slick, very masculine specimen could find no better home than Father's study. A V-shaped trough of black leather straps is laced in permanent tautness onto a squared solid walnut frame. Stands 19" high and 20" long. At Abraham & Straus. $21.50.

For a lady who likes pretty things that won't fall apart, a rack with a deceptively delicate air is strong enough to heft all the periodicals she is likely to want. Made of metal tubing simulating bamboo, the basket rack conceals its steeliness under an elegant finish of shimmery gold leaf. At the Nosegay. $35.

In the days of the remote kitchen (particularly in English country houses), hot plates were hustled to the dining room in a carrier quite like this rack—a wooden box with slatted sides and a bright brass handle. Strong, capacious, it holds almost as many magazines as you would care to lift. Altman's. $35.

Old trunks—

how to turn them into treasures

by Almeda Coberg

If you have fallen heir to a trunkful of keepsakes from your grandmother, you are fortunate indeed, because, no matter what it contains, you are likely to have a treasure in the trunk itself. Lacking a grandmother, keep your eye open next time you pass an antique store. A truly old trunk can be turned into a beautiful piece of furniture. In fact, trunks originally were used for storage and considered furniture—there was a trunk for silverware, one for the linens, and so on. That was long before they hit the road as a means of transporting belongings from one place to another, and today their value as storage pieces is just as real as ever. Trunks are almost without equal as blanket chests; they can hold hobby equipment, phonograph records, or toys. In a den, a handsomely decorated trunk will hold years of favorite magazines. A venerable trunk with a tray is an excellent place to store a sewing machine, patterns, materials, and trims.

Restoring one of these relics can be a rewarding and simple project. Mrs. Gladys Hunt, former instructor in arts and crafts at Philbrook Art Center in Tulsa, Okla., suggests this procedure:

1. Strip the trunk.
Generally, trunks are coated with a heavy black paint which can be quickly removed with paint remover. Occasionally, you find a trunk covered with fabric; in such case, just tear it away. The object is to have a clean surface before you begin to work. Unless your trunk is lined with beautiful old paper in good condition, remove the lining paper and scrub the trunk inside and out with soap and water.

2. Check its pedigree.
Just for fun, search the hinges for any markings (similar to our modern laundry marks), initials, dates, etc. If they require translation, write to H&G's "Antiques Questions and Answers" department (see page 12). Knowing when and where and perhaps for whom your trunk was made can enhance your enjoyment of it.

3. Prime the surface.
The surface of a wood trunk can be as rough as an old apple crate and may require a great deal of sanding. When perfectly smooth, apply a combination filler-and-wood-sealer primer and let dry.

A tin-surface trunk requires no sanding, of course; only a coat of zinc chromate, which is a rust-preventative primer. Let it dry thoroughly.

4. Paint the base coat.
Ivory or bone white semi-gloss enamel makes a good base coat. Apply with an ox-hair brush. When completely dry, sand down with number four-0 sandpaper. Now rub with Tack Rag.

5. Apply the color.
To give your trunk an aged and mellow look, apply antique fluid. An excellent and inexpensive antique fluid consists of raw sienna or burnt sienna oil paint dissolved in turpentine. Brush on, then wipe off excess paint with Tack Rag, using greater pressure on the areas which would normally receive more wear. When working on an embossed tin surface, leave more paint deep in the design to bring out the embossment. If you prefer to paint the trunk in a color, use

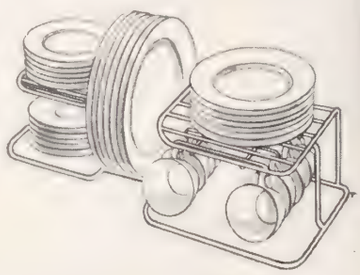
The care and safekeeping of CHINA and GLASS

How to prolong their life and sparkle

In this day of detergents and dishwashers, loving care of china and glass does not begin to be loving enough if it does not include the use of updated methods, cleaning products and equipment.

To keep your dishes and glasses relatively free of such afflictions as fading, filming, spotting, et al., manufacturers of dinnerware, dishwashers, and detergents have all come up with stacks of do's and don't's. But before considering them you would be wise to put this one at the head of the list: Don't let the numerous recommendations and warnings dissuade you from using your treasures as often as you would like. After all, they were made to be used—the materials and designs have been formulated for service as well as beauty.

But there is no sense in hedging: Some cleaning methods and products can, in time, cause harm, specifically to the decorations on fine china and the surfaces of lead crystal. Designs on fine china are prone to scratches and to fading because, for technical reasons, they are applied over the glaze. (As you probably know, you can recognize fine china by its translucency and by the clear ring it gives when tapped.) On the whole, china is stronger than earthenware, but its overglaze decorations may be affected by certain foods, detergents, and improper cleaning methods as well as by careless handling. (Earthenware—which is not translucent and appears more creamy than white—chips easily, but its decorations are usually underglaze and virtually invulnerable. So the main item in its care is gentle handling.)



How to be kind to fine china and crystal

To safeguard dishes and glasses the first thing to watch is your method of scraping and stacking. Acid foods may change the color of fine china if they are left on the plates for long spells. So if you can't wash dishes immediately, rinse or soak the ones that have been exposed to such foods as hollandaise sauce, vinegar and fruits.

Whether you wash dishes by hand or machine, don't scrape the plates with a knife or fork. Rather use a soft sponge, paper towel or rubber scraper.

Next, examine your washing methods. Frequent bouts with a strong detergent can fade the overglaze patterns on china, especially when the detergent is combined with a forceful rush of very hot water—in other words, in a dishwasher. Some detergents actually make a new plate look like an antique in no time at all, while others take a good deal longer to cause any noticeable fading. So choose your dishwasher detergent with care, paying special heed to recommendations from the manufacturer of your china.

If you wash your china and crystal by hand, offset the chipping hazards inherent in hard counter and sink surfaces by using a plastic dishpan, counter mats and coated drainer. Tempting as it may be to dump the nearest plates and cups into the dishpan, resist because the resulting jumble will only lead to scratches or breakage. Wash your glasses, silverware dishes, pots and pans separately and in that order, being careful not to overload the dishpan during the glass and dish stages. Place your rinsed goblets, tumblers, and cups upside down side by side in the drain, and stack rinsed dishes so they will not hobnob (nothing scratches hard china like another piece of hard china). Then let the works dry naturally, or wipe with a lint-free towel. If you use a dishwasher, follow carefully the manufacturer's directions for loading the dishes to prevent jostling.

There are two schools of thought—the Don't's and the Do's—on the advisability of putting your best glasses in a dishwasher (assuming, in the latter case, that yours is a relatively recent model with coated racks). Breakage is one risk, of course. Another is the chance of etching or other damage to the glass surface caused by residual alkalies from detergents left by inadequate rinsing on the part of your dishwasher. Soft leaded glass is particularly vulnerable to this type of damage.

The high water temperature and strong detergents in dishwashers also tend to soften gold or silver decorations on crystal. So if you do wash such glasses in the reports on the performance of this exciting new rug.

"What most impressed me about this Aldon rug is its durability and strength. As you know, I must fly low over some very pointy buildings. So I need a very strong rug. And this rug outperforms all others of its type in actual durability tests.

Also very important to me is soil resistance and washability. Here, in the Middle East, we have many oil wells, lots of smoke and dust in the air. I used to ruin rugs right and left. But with this Aldon rug all it takes to look new again is a quick machine washing.

And boy! Does this gold rug look good! Now all the girls wav to me. There are other colors the girls wave at too: sapphire blu moss green, white, petal pink, red and amethyst.

As for comfort, it's unbeatable. The dense velvety pile by Bor is 100% Kodel® polyester. It stays unbelievably soft and luxurio even after repeated washings.

machine be sure not to wipe or otherwise disturb them until after they cool to room temperature.

Those pesky spots and streaks

One of the commonest causes of streaks and spots on machine-washed china and glass is the use of too much detergent. To determine how much is enough, follow directions provided by dinnerware, dishwasher, and detergent manufacturers. If they differ (and they are likely to), try using the smallest amount of detergent suggested. Increase it slightly on subsequent loads only if you feel you must. Once you find the amount that does a good job, stop there. Never, no never, use more detergent than you have to. If two teaspoons of the stuff do a good job, a tablespoonful will definitely not do a better one and may even be the cause of trouble.

Nylon and plastic hood, one of seven sizes, keeps dust off dishes. At Hammacher Schlemmer. $5 a set.

Hard water is a natural-born troublemaker. Its minerals combine with detergent to form a film which, in turn, streaks and spots. In a dishwasher, this film may become baked on during the drying cycle and, if allowed to accumulate, could become permanent. A good preventive is the addition of a small amount—say ½ teaspoon—of Calgon water conditioner to your detergent or in place of an equivalent amount of detergent. Experiment is called for here, since water hardness varies so much from one locality to another. When washing dishes in hard water by hand, add 2 teaspoons of Calgon along with your usual detergent.

Even in relatively soft water, hand-washed china and glasses may emerge with a film, in which case the cause is probably a residue of food soil from milk, butter, or other fats. Calgon in the wash water will eliminate that too.

Safer storage

For all the cracks and chips that dishwashers are accused of, it is safe to say that ten times as much damage is perpetrated by human hands, especially when those hands are putting the china and glass in the cupboard or taking them out. So orderly storage arrangements are critical.

Cups should be hung on hooks—or, if you have all the cupboard space in the world, placed separately on the shelf. A sliding cup rack is a joy because it makes the cups so easy to get at and it can be attached to the underside of a shelf where it utilizes waste space.

Just about everyone concerned with fine china advises using plate savers between stacked plates. These may be rounds of felt or foam rubber that come ready-made in a range of appropriate sizes. Or you can make your own or use paper towels or napkins. (If your china has a border design, use rounds that are small enough to fit within the border to rule out unnecessary rubbing.)

A modicum of space around each stack and glass is desirable, but if your cupboard space is limited, you can make the most of what you have by using a coated dinnerware rack that will hold a complete service for ten in a relatively few square inches.

If stacks of china are not protected from dust, they may need between-use washing to keep them at the ready, which means not only added nuisance but one more chance of chipping. So it is a good idea to cover stacks with dust-protecting hoods of plastic.

Your most precious china may rest undisturbed between grand occasions in protective cases made of quilted vinyl that have round-about zipper openings for easy access. There is a special type for glasses that has rigid partitions which can be modified to hold from four to twelve glasses depending on their size and shape.

More frequently used glasses which are kept in the open on the shelf are best stored right side up, each type in a row that goes from front to back so you do not have to risk reaching over a sherry glass, say, to get at a water goblet.

Seal Sac matching case keeps cups separate. $4.

Which costs less? The lamp, the sofa, the table, the silver service, their gowns, or the Inlaid Paneling?

nswer: the Georgia-Pacific Hardwood laid Paneling.

Really! That elegant 12 by 8-foot elm-ith-walnut wall cost just $80.85. A ouple of years ago, you'd have been cky to buy a wall like that for $300.

Of course that was before G-P dis-overed how to put Inlaid Paneling on asy-to-install 4 by 8-foot panels. We ow offer a selection of eleven mod stly priced Inlaid Hardwood Paneling ombinations.

Quite frankly, the new Georgia-Pacific Inlaids are better than the old hand-crafted walls. The reason for this is our exclusive Acryglas® finish.

It looks like a hand-rubbed oil finish. Yet it's so durable you can actually scrub it with fingernail polish remover—without a speck of damage.

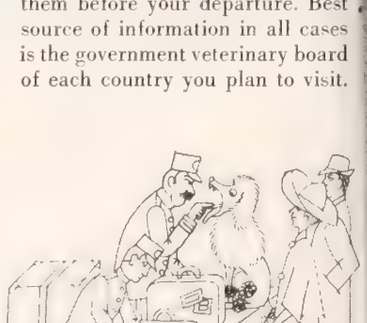
How to take your pet to Europe

by Barry Edgar

Taking a pet to Europe can be, surprisingly, a rather simple proposition. If you acquaint yourself beforehand with the few rules and regulations and comply with them, you and your friend will most likely be received with courtesy even cordiality in nearly every country on the Continent. Having traveled around Europe with two animals (Siamese cats) for the past two years, I have yet to find a hotel that has refused them. No customs officer at any border has ever delayed me on their account. Not one of the myriad problems I anticipated has materialized. True, I have never tried to travel with a cheetah or a macaw, but the rules that cover cats and dogs apparently apply as well to monkeys and most small cage birds.

Fairly obviously, if you are planning a whirlwind seventeen-day excursion through twelve countries and thirty-four cities, your four-legged companion won't have much fun, nor for that matter will you! But if you are planning a leisurely trip by car, visiting a resort for a couple of weeks, or headquartering in one place for the season, taking your pet is more than feasible. (Naturally, in handing out this advice, I am assuming your pet is over six months old and housebroken.)



The welcome mat

First consideration is your itinerary. You can take an animal to: Austria, Belgium, France, Germany, Greece, Italy, Luxembourg, The Netherlands, Portugal, Spain, and Switzerland and most of the East European countries including the Soviet Union. You cannot legally take your pet into Norway, Denmark, Finland, Sweden, Ireland, or Great Britain without subjecting him to a quarantine ranging anywhere from six weeks to six months.

If you want to go to England with your animal, you will be stuck for a six-month quarantine even if you have a Seeing Eye dog. This procedure is strictly enforced. Fortunately, there is one small but helpful exception to the harsh English rules. London airport maintains an "in transit" dog and cat "hotel" where "guests" may stay for a maximum of three days. Confirmed reservations are an absolute necessity. But you must arrive and depart London by air only. If you arrive by ship, the animal has to be transported to the airport hotel, and this requires obtaining an import license—a long and tedious process. The costs in the Heathrow Animal Airport Hotel are nominal, ranging from 95c to $1.25 per day, depending on the size of your pet. This fine institution is run by the R.S.P.C.A. (Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals). It makes a short visit to England at least a possibility when your pet is with you.

France, which usually admits animals, will not permit them to enter from Spain (although the Spanish courteously welcome travelers—human and animal—from France). However, in the case of an American animal, French officials will not detain the pet at the French border if you have obtained a second Good Health Certificate for him in Spain.

It should be pointed out here that quarantine regulations are always subject to change, and it is only common sense to recheck them before your departure. Best source of information in all cases is the government veterinary board of each country you plan to visit.

FUNK

The passport

You need to obtain only two documents for your traveling pet: (1) a Good Health Certificate (serves as his passport) which you can obtain from your veterinarian and which states the animal's name, age, breed, etc., and identifies him as being free from any diseases; (2) an Anti-Rabies Vaccination Card (this corresponds to your own International Health Card) which you can also get from your veterinarian. Be sure the vet states on the form the type of vaccine he uses. He will, of course, include the dates on these forms. Dates are important—all countries which do admit pets require that the Good Health Certificate be issued within three days of the animal's departure from the United States. The anti-rabies vaccination must not be more than one year old and some countries (The Netherlands, for example) require that it be not less than one month old. If you should be in Europe for longer than six months, you go to a vet in the country you are visiting and he will issue the same papers all over again—except they'll be in another language. And these are the only papers you need to bring your dog or cat back into the United States.

If your animal takes any particular medication regularly (vitamins, for example), it would be wise to include a supply in your luggage. And should your pet become ill abroad, the veterinarians in most European cities are usually excellent, particularly in those countries where pets are generally prized and well treated. However, in some parts of Southern Europe it might be wise to ask the local American consul to recommend one.

The Jet Set pet

Getting your companion across the Atlantic is no problem. Airlines charge one per cent of the one-way first-class passenger fare. Ships charge $10 for cats, $50 for dogs.

Let's take the quickest way first. If your pet is small—that is, if he and his carrying case weigh under 22 pounds or can conveniently fit underneath a seat—then he can ride in the plane cabin with you. Several airlines provide, free of charge, special carriers for just this purpose—check your airline before you go out and buy one. (If you provide your own, it must have a waterproof lining on the floor, by the way.) What's more, if he is well behaved, he will be allowed out of his case and you can sit with him on your lap or under your seat. But only one animal is allowed in each class—one in first and one in tourist—although if you are traveling with two pets who ordinarily live together on friendly terms, then permission may be granted to keep them together. Incidentally, should Fido be allowed to travel in the jet's cabin with you, try to book a seat in the very front row—there's a bit more room.

This is as good a time as any to learn one important principle about traveling with pets: Regulations are made to be broken. If a transportation company is very busy, they are not inclined to make exceptions for you or to extend themselves particularly. However, if the flight is not fully booked, or if the airline is eagerly seeking new business, then they are more inclined to accommodate themselves to your special requests. From a pet owner's standpoint, this gives a mighty edge to off-season travel. Generally, however, pets larger than the above-mentioned sizes will have to travel air freight. Air freight is a quick and humane way to get your pet across, and it is easy for you to plan your separate flights so that you are parted for the least amount of time.

On the plane you will be expected to provide food for him, and if he's going air freight you write out his feeding instructions and tape to the traveling case.

The stateroom pet

Ships are a little more accustomed to transporting animals. All of the larger liners maintain kennels—some quite elaborate offering special "haute cuisine" canine and feline menus. Fido will be given a "cabin" of his own where you can visit him as often as you wish. Like you, he'll also have his own "steward" to feed and exercise him regularly. He'll lead the life of Riley. But with most people, the question inevitably arises, "Can I take my pet into my stateroom with me?" Technically, the answer is "no." But, in fact, many ships do make exceptions.

Providing your animal is well house-trained, and providing your neighbors don't complain, you might be permitted to keep him with you in your stateroom. But in all cases he will have to be aired in the kennel section. Up on the promenade deck, with those fresh sea breezes, even the best-trained pet is likely to feel he's outdoors and "free."

What ships will let you keep him in your cabin? It's hard to say. Generally, ships on the Southern route aren't too fussy—the big express liners are used to passengers' eccentricities and at least endeavor to accommodate the first-class passengers. Smaller Northern ships eager for business are also often co-operative, at least with their first-class passengers. The Italian Line, French Line, Holland America Line have all granted cabin privileges on occasion. Cunard has also been known to, but they are usually inclined to be a bit sticky about rules. The best way to go about getting permission is to write the public relations director of the steamship line, with a carbon copy to the passenger traffic manager, and make your request known. Give him the full details about your pet and be certain to tell him how you especially love traveling with his company. Always offer to post a bond for any damages that could conceivably be incurred to the furnishings of the room. I have never been asked to post such a bond, but willingness to do so expresses a proper degree of responsibility on your part.

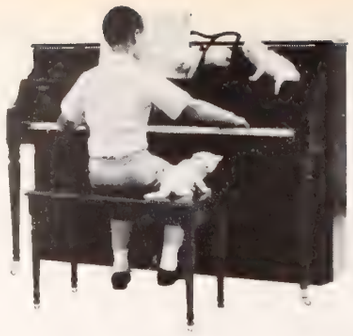
The daily vittles

Be sure to think through in advance the matter of your pet's food, both en route and in Europe. On ocean liners, the kennel will provide, unless Fido has any finicky preferences. In that case, you may prefer to bring your own. However, if he's in your cabin with you, you will logically be expected to supply your own food.

From my own experience, I have found it a good idea, when flying, to send a case of the animal's favorite food over well ahead of time. Send it care of your first hotel stop, marked "hold for arrival." Write the hotel porter and ask him to clear it through customs when it arrives. If you're traveling by ship, then of course it's easy enough to take it with your luggage.

Once in Europe, you'll not encounter any difficulty in finding good pet foods—except in Italy. There, the idea of buying special food for an animal is considered sheer extravagance, and if you "crazy American" insist on doing it, you will be made to pay accordingly. By contrast, in France you can find a good product called "Ron-Ron—pâté pour chats" and an equally elegant counterpart for dogs. In other countries, canned pet foods may have less chic labels, but the contents are appealing and wholesome.



The four-legged wayfarer

Traveling around in Europe with a pet is pretty much the same as at home—it's easiest by car. But trains and planes will present no problems. If you're traveling with an Afghan hound or Great Dane on a train, it's wise to make arrangements ahead of time. Often there is a car or compartment on a train especially for passengers traveling with pets. Trains do require that small pets be in carrying cases, and large ones should be muzzled. Airline regulations for continental flights are the same as for your trans-Atlantic crossings.

You can walk a well-mannered dog almost everywhere—especially if he is small. Ditto a cat. (Europeans often walk cats on a leash.) Naturally, you can't take a pet into a church, cinema or most restaurants, any more than you could at home.

For your own self-protection against avaricious hotelkeepers, check your room thoroughly for damages, with your maid, when you arrive. If anything—no matter how small—is damaged and could possibly be attributed to your pets, point it out and be certain the manager knows, too. Once after a week's stay in an Italian hotel, I was charged for a badly ripped cushion which would have taken a cat at least six months to accomplish. The management blandly said my pet did it and I couldn't leave the hotel until the damage was paid for. I coughed up, knowing I had no rights, and even less time to catch a plane.

In general, traveling with your pet to Europe is no more trouble than traveling with him in the U. S. If anything, it's even easier. Perhaps because Europeans are more accustomed to foreigners, they are more likely to be flexible and tolerant about foreigners' pets. While the desk clerk might take a dim view when you check in with your Giant Schnauzer at the Mason City Inn, it would probably seem perfectly natural to the concierge at your pension on the Côte d'Azur.

Why do some children hate learning to play, and others enjoy it?

Yamaha knows why.

"Sit just so! Keep the hands in this position! Curve your fingers like this!" Run the scales over and over. And so on and on through eons of drudgery. This is the old-fashioned piano teaching you may remember (with pain). It eliminates enjoyment.

But a good modern teacher brings out the joy of actually playing. Little melodies leap out from the children's touch right away. They may even transpose a simple tune into another key within a few minutes.

They get the feel and thrill of actual music first. It's not impossibly adult. They can do it! Then, gradually, later, they start reading music and learn technique. In short, a good teacher leads the child to pleasure. Progress can be literally amazing.

And recommendation of a modern, enthusiastic teacher is one of the things you can expect when you visit a Yamaha piano dealer.

What else can you expect? A thrilling demonstration of one of the world's finest pianos – Yamaha.

An instrument to inspire your child with its sound. Rare richness and clarity of tone. (Children respond far better to real quality.)

Many models to choose from, all of unusual craftsmanship. Beauty that complements your home. An exclusive Yamaha Service Bond that assures continuing peak performance. And prices that are startling in their modesty. This is Yamaha.

Both you and your children will enjoy it when you begin the Yamaha way. Begin now with an informative visit with your friendly Yamaha dealer.

Oil-tempered carbon steel blade with "zero edge" can slice fresh bread 1/16 inch thin.

Who else wants really sharp knives?

Send for free brochure "Kitchen Cutlery that Really Cuts"

Think they don't make sharp knives any more? Comus PRO knives are different — they really cut! And you can try these professional quality knives for 30 days without risking a penny.

The Secret is the Steel

The remarkable Comus PRO knives are not made of stainless steel. The blades are not scalloped or sawtoothed. Instead they are razor-keen, high-carbon, cutlery steel — forged, ground and oil-tempered to hold their edge. This is the steel used for professional cutlery . . . These are the knives used by professional chefs.

Still Sharp in 1974?

Yes! Carbon steel does make an astonishing difference. Comus PRO knives are so sharp you can thin-slice ripe tomatoes and fresh bread — carve rare chuck as if it were finest tenderloin — chop and mince vegetables like lightning. And a few occasional swipes on steel or stone keeps your Comus PRO knives factory-sharp for ten, twenty years, or even more!

Send for Free Brochure

Comus PRO knives are not sold in any store, so send today for our free brochure. By return mail, we'll send you pictures, prices and facts on the new Comus PRO knives. Then you decide whether you want to try them for 30 days at our risk.

"I lost 80 pounds of dangerous fat . . . in only 4 short months!"

No Doctor's Prescription! . . . no strenuous dieting necessary!

I stopped temporarily after losing 80 pounds when my doctor advised me that I was losing weight too quickly. Yes, I roved beyond a doubt that it was possible for me to lose any amount of weight I desired, quickly—safely—and pain-essly. . . . A total of 150 pounds of fat literally melted away. I did all this by following my own simple method."

Now, at last, you can lose 5-10-20 or even 50 pounds of excess weight without the usual starvation diets, calorie counting, exercising, educing fads, machines, and the like!

MY AMAZING METHOD, which is used by an internationally famous institute located in New York City, has not only helped me lose 80 pounds n only four short months, but has done wonders for my friends who were ursed with the same problem for years!

YES, EXCESS WEIGHT CAN TAKE YEARS OFF YOUR LIFE, and ctually gave me a heart attack . . . that almost killed me! Even if you are lightly overweight, look what this condition has done to your appearance . . . nd how limited you are when shopping for clothing. . . . And who wants to e the "heavyweight" of the family anyway? There certainly isn't anything omantic or inviting about an overweight person's appearance that I know of.

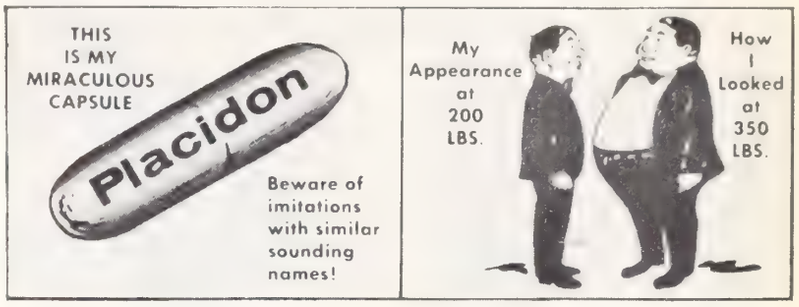
BEING OVERWEIGHT IS DEFINITELY A SERIOUS PROBLEM and any person being aware of the dangers should do something about it.

I MYSELF KNOW HOW DIFFICULT it was for me to lose weight before I came upon this fantastic method . . . and how to my utter amazement losing weight actually became simple. Until the time I started using this miraculous discovery, it was literally impossible for me to lose even a pound.

DEFINITE WEIGHT LOSS OF 10-20-50 OR EVEN 100 POUNDS MAY NOW BE ACCOMPLISHED IN A VERY SHORT TIME!

Yes, with the use of my miraculous formula you can lose as much weight as you desire. The amazing formula is comparatively inexpensive and is safe and effective for any man or woman who enjoys normal health.

I CALL MY METHOD "PLACIDON." Yes, "PLACIDON" has certainly been the answer to my prayers and the hopes of my close friends.



HERE'S HOW SIMPLE IT IS TO USE THE PLACIDON FORMULA. All I did was take three capsules a day; once in the morning before breakfast, one before lunch, and a capsule before dinner. And that's all. THE "PLACIDON METHOD" did the rest.

MY FORMULA ACTED SO QUICKLY, I couldn't believe my eyes. "PLACIDON" seemed to soak up the fat as 10-20-50 pounds melted away. And after a very short time, as if a miracle happened, my double chin disappeared . . . my stomach left me . . . my hips, arms and legs began looking normal again! Yes, I felt and looked as though I were actually reborn . . . a new, attractive and trim looking man!

I'LL MAKE YOU A MENTAL WIZARD IN ONE EVENING!

Yes! Here at last is your chance to gain the THINKING-MACHINE MIND you've always dreamed about . . . so easily and quickly that you'll be astounded . . . and actually do it without risking a penny!

By HARRY LORAYNE

Let me explain! I don't care how poorly organized your mental powers are today — how difficult it is for you to concentrate . . . how bad your memory may be . . . how much a prisoner you are of crippling mental habits . . . how long it takes you each morning to get your mind going with adding-machine speed and certainty!

I BELIEVE THAT YOUR MIND IS WORKING TODAY AT ONLY 5% TO 10% OF ITS TRUE POWER — SIMPLY BECAUSE YOU DON'T KNOW THE RIGHT WAY TO FEED IT DIRECTIONS!

Simply because you don't know the right way to feed your mind problems — so clearly and logically that those problems half-solve themselve before you even touch them!

Simply because you don't know the right way to feed your mind facts, figures and names and faces — so they burn themselves into that mind in such picture-form that you remember them forever!

Simply because you don't know the right way to feed your mind a FULL CHARGE OF ENTHUSIASM — so that it revs up instantly every morning . . . so that it operates at full power, not for just a few brief minutes each day, BUT FOR AS MUCH AS 8 TO 10 FULL HOURS AT A STRETCH!

Mind Power Is A Trick! I'll Teach It To You In One Weekend!

Yes! Problem-solving is a trick! Concentration is a trick! Memory is a trick! Habit-breaking is a trick! And, above all, generating the will power that means success IS A TRICK! Mind power can be made to order — you don't have to be born with it! The secret of a fast-acting, full-power, THINKING MACHINE MIND is as simple as tying your shoelace! And I'm willing to prove it to you without your risking a penny! Here's how!

All I ask from you is this. Let me send you — at my risk — one of the most fascinating books you have ever read. When this book arrives, set aside a few moments each day from the following weekend. Glance through just one chapter. And get ready for one of the most thrilling weekends of accomplishment in your entire life!

The Very First Hour After You Pick Up This Book, You Will Perform A Feat Of Mind Power That Will Astound Your Friends!

What you are going to do in that very first hour you receive the book, is this. Turn to page 144. Read three short pages — no more! And then, put down the book. Review in your own mind the one simple secret I've shown you — how to feed facts into your mind so that they stay there — permanently — as long as you wish!

Then put this simple trick to work for you — that very same hour!

Call in your family or friends. Ask them to make a list of any TWELVE facts, names or objects they wish, as fast as they wish. Have them write down the list so they won't forget it! But, as they give you each fact, YOU are going to perform a simple mental trick on that fact, that will burn it into your mind, IN PERFECT ORDER, as long as you wish!

And then — INSTANTLY AND AUTOMATICALLY — you are going to repeat that list, backwards and forwards, in perfect order, exactly as it you were reading that list in your friend's hand! And you are going to have one of the most exciting moments of your life, as you watch the expression on those people's faces as you reel off those facts as though they were flashing on a screen on the inside of your memory!

Thrilling! Yes! But also one of the most profitable secrets you will ever learn. For that list of twelve facts can just as easily be an appointment schedule — with each appointment flashing automatically into your mind at just the right time and place that you need it! Or a shopping list — or the outline of a speech — or a sales presentation — or the highlights of an important article — or a list of things that have to be done in perfect order!

Any one of them — they flash into your mind automatically, as though you pressed a button! And this astonishing mental gift — which will serve you every day for the rest of your life — is yours from the very first hour that you pick up this book!

And yet it's only the beginning!

Which Areas Of Your Mind Do You Want To Strengthen In A Single Weekend? Concentration, Will-Power, Self-Confidence, Habit-Breaking!

Yes! From this moment on, in less than one thrilling hour a day, you begin testing the wonder-working techniques of Automatic Organization on every untrained corner of your mind! You begin breaking through mental barriers — mental limitations that have been blocking you for years!

You begin tapping the buried powers of your own mind . . . powers that you have glimpsed before in brief flashes . . . now brought to the surface — organized with simple formulas to double their potency — and placed forever at your beck and call, ready to go to work for you at the blink of an eyelash!

For example —

DO YOU WANT TO DEVELOP "STEEL-SHUTTER CONCENTRATION" — OVERNIGHT?

Then turn to page 85 . . . master one simple exercise . . . and thrill to your ability to absorb huge amounts of information — easily and swiftly — even in a room filled with half a dozen howling children!

DO YOU WANT TO DEVELOP "X-RAY EYES" — POWERS OF OBSERVATION THAT AMAZE YOUR FRIENDS?

Then turn to page 136 . . . play three fascinating games . . . and then startle your friends, time and time again, by your ability to spot revealing details — put together hidden pieces of evidence — that they never even dreamed were there at all!

DO YOU WANT TO SEE HOW EASY IT IS TO REPLACE BAD HABITS WITH HABITS YOU CAN BE PROUD OF?

Then get ready for the revelation of your life on page 103 . . . that replaces agony with fun . . . that actually lets your bad habits break themselves without your hardly touching your will power.

YES! AND DO YOU WANT TO GENERATE ENTHUSIASM . . . FRIENDLINESS . . . PERSONALITY AT AN INSTANT COMMAND?

Then read every word starting on page 165! Learn how to overcome shyness and fear, automatically . . . make anyone like you . . . dissolve opposition with as little as a simple word . . . earn both trust and respect from everyone you meet — and keep them — for good!

Read It For Ten Days — Entirely At Our Risk!

And this still is just the beginning! What Harry Loravne has described to you on this page is just a small sampling of the information packed into his amazing new book, SECRETS OF MIND POWER — now available only through this article!

Here at last is a practical, fascinating, easy-to-read book on improving the powers of your mind that really works! Its author, Harry Lorayne, has been called by experts "the man with the most phenomenal memory in the world!" He has already shown over 250,000 men and women, all over America, how they can achieve startling improvements in their memories overnight, with just a few minutes work!

But this fabulous Push-Button Memory Technique is only one small part of Harry Lorayne's great new book! Here — in addition to Memory — are complete "Push-Button Sections" on Observation, Concentration, Enthusiasm, Will-Power, Idea-Creating, Rapid-Learning, Time-Saving, Clear-Thinking, Personality, Friend-Making, Public-Speaking, Worry-Control, Conquest of Fear, and many more!

Yes! Here are dozens of simple techniques that enable you to overcome crippling emotions, and keep your thoughts headed straight for each goal! Showing you how to think clearly and effectively in any situation — make decisions without agonizing delays — learn vital facts and figures at a glance — work at full mental power, all day long, for weeks and even months on end!

Here are tested, and proven "Thought-Stimulators" that streamline your mind — develop your creative imagination — increase your daily output — help you make time for everything you have to do!

Here are "Confidence-Generators," that let you laugh off worries and fears — make your own good luck — keep other people from taking advantage of you — turn bad breaks into opportunities — yes, even sharpen your sense of humor and improve your ability to speak well, whether in private conversation or before a crowd of hundreds!

It Must Work For You — Or You Don't Pay A Penny!

The price of this fascinating, one-volume Mind-Power Encyclopedia is $4.98 — far less than similar books that do not do its job as well!

But even more important is its unconditional guarantee! We realize that this book is of no value to you unless it does everything we have promised you! Therefore, we allow you to read it at our risk for ten full days.

If at the end of that time you are not delighted in every way, then simply return the book for every cent of your purchase price back! There are no conditions! You are the only judge! Send in the No-Risk Coupon below — TODAY!

NOW READY Amazing year 'round blanket of silver-blue beauty ... covers the toughest slopes and bare spots thoroughly as a lovely rug!

A single plant spreads into a beautiful 4-6 foot carpet! Virtually no patch of land is too tough for Stern's "Blue Carpet" Juniper. It's perfect for steep banks or slopes, even bare, unsightly areas where little else will grow. Grows along and over retaining walls, even filling in holes and cracks, making it ideal at walk intersections or at the entrance to your home. Spreads so thickly, it's excellent for rock gardens, as it covers outcropping rocks. Not even seaside conditions can daunt its growth. One plant alone spreads out into a carpet up to 6 feet long at maturity, grows so densely and compactly, it will cover and hide the most unsightly areas.

Lovely feathery foliage decorates your landscape 12 months a year! Unlike many ground covers, "Blue Carpet" Juniper is strikingly beautiful. Spring and summer, its delightful feathery foliage is an intense silvery blue-green color. In fall and winter, the foliage changes to a most stunning lavender-purple, to create a breathtaking contrast with snow and ice. Tiny silver seeds often nestle among the foliage adding immensely to its charming beauty.

Never grows taller than 10 to 12 inches! Another outstanding feature is the fact that "Blue Carpet" is a prostrate grower—never grows taller than 10 to 12 inches! This saves hours of laborious clipping or cutting.

Hardy and drought-resistant! This exciting plant thrives in any well-drained soil ... even in dry, rocky or sandy conditions. Grows in full or partial sun. It laughs at winters. With the barest care, will decorate your landscape for years.

Supply very limited—order now with full guarantee! Stern's "Blue Carpet" Junipers are ready for planting now at new low prices. Supply is limited. So order at once. Plant 4 ft. apart. You must be delighted or notify us within 2 weeks after you receive plants and we'll send a refund or free replacement for any unsatisfactory plants.

GENUINE VIRGINIA SLAB-BACON

LIKE VINTAGE WINE . . .
AGING MAKES THE DIFFERENCE

You couldn't find a more delicious bacon anywhere—it just isn't available in most stores and markets. The real secret is in the 300 year old traditional method of preparation. This fabulous bacon is taken from only the finest prime porkers, then dry-cured in salt and sugar. After aging, we smoke it over mellow hickory fires. This and more makes Jordan's the freshest, tastiest, most flavorsome bacon you've ever eaten. You receive it, rind off, neatly packaged in cloth, and you'll find it stays fresher longer than pre-sliced bacon. Another advantage, slice it to a thickness suiting your taste. I guarantee you'll like it best, or I'll refund your money. Try it, at only $5.95 per slab (4 to 5 lb. av.). Post-pd. You'll want to order more.

You can teach your 2 year old to read!

THE DOMAN-DELACATO READING DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM, featured in P.T.A. JOURNAL, LADIES HOME JOURNAL, PARADE, and LIFE, is giving an educational head start to thousands of pre-schoolers. With this kit of tested materials—using a play approach during a few minutes a day—your child can learn to read—as young as two. University research has proved that children who come to school as readers start ahead and stay ahead of those who wait until age- 6½ to learn this vital educational skill. In addition, psychologists now demonstrate that an enriched pre-school environment can add as many as 20 points to a child's I.Q.

You can teach your young child to read just as easily and naturally as you taught him to hear and speak language. A simply written Parent's Manual included in the kit tells you all you need to know. Already, more than 50,000 parents have used this joyfully simple and effective approach with their pre-school children.

School teachers are delighted with a child who comes to school already knowing how to read. Many school districts have provided special enrichment programs for children who do not have to spend time learning to read.

Use the coupon below to write today for a FREE PROSPECTUS describing the DOMAN-DELACATO READING DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM. You will receive it by return mail with no obligation whatsoever. This may be the most important gift you ever give your child!

When you consider that 180° is perfect, then you realize what a masterful optic this is. Only as round as your finger (tucks into pocket easily), it is ½" across, telescopes out from 1" to 5" which fits most walls today. Police use it for investigative purposes (it was discovered in one room as the "eye" in an old master painting). You can install it in your door, in department stores, offices, warehouses, anyplace (think) you want to watch an entire (top, bottom and sides) area unobserved. Quite a gadget—just one shipment available. Each only $8.95.

The man who paid an extra $300 for these 26 windows is already glad he did!

But not many men know why. Many are not even aware that windows make up a third or more of their outer wall area.

Very few consider that poor windows are a luxury only the rich can afford.

But the man who just bought these Andersen Windows... he knows. He looked beyond the price he paid to the added values he got with Andersen Windows.

Things like welded insulating glass that eliminated the need for storm windows . . . gave two fewer glass surfaces to keep clean.

Or removable grilles that pop in or out instantly for easier window cleaning. Or precision engineered sash and frame design that keeps them operating smoothly, silently for a lifetime.

This man knows Andersen Windows are up to 4 times more weathertight than ordinary windows . . . figures they will save 15% or more each year on fuel costs . . . and was willing to bet a few dollars a month over the life of his mortgage that they pay off.

This is the kind of man who best knows why Andersen Windows are worth a little more. He lives with them. There are men just like him in almost every neighborhood. Talk to a few before you buy.

Next best, visit your Andersen dealer or distributor. See all 5 beautiful types (hundreds of sizes). Ask for a complete demonstration of the quality features that make Andersen Windows your best value at any price!

A trio of new roses comes to the fore

Once again, as for the past twenty-five seasons, the breeders and sellers of rose plants have reached what may popularly be called a consensus. In the name of the All America Rose Selection committee they have agreed upon three new varieties as being the most generally outstanding of the varieties to be offered for American garden use in 1966. Consensuses being what they are, these roses may not, in every case, produce the best results in any one region or any one garden in any one season. But they all should perform better than the general run of new offerings, and they all, when well grown, yield very beautiful flowers indeed. Two of them are hybrid tea roses and one is a floribunda—about the normal ratio of types. All will be sold by most dealers in roses, by mail (mostly dormant plants), or pre-potted at garden centers and many nurseries.

AMERICAN HERITAGE shows both white and red (in varying shades and in varying proportions) on the same petals. Blooms start cream-yellow, develop red flares and margins as they open. The typical hybrid tea flowers are big and fully double.

APRICOT NECTAR has more than the share of fragrance allotted to most new roses. A floribunda (large cluster) type, its apt name characterizes both the shaded pink color and the fragrance (you name it) that distinguish it.

MATTERHORN, as its name implies, is a clear, strong white. The blossoms are not profusely petaled, but they are large and well formed. A hybrid tea, it joins a list of good whites that is short but prized, especially among exhibition kinds.

INTRODUCING H&G COLORS FOR 1966

Like music and the words of poets, color has enormous power over our spirits, lifting us up or casting us down, or simply boring us. The colors in a room have power over the very way we move and speak, inspiring grace or restlessness, quiet or stridence. We have all been in rooms filled with lovely hues that make us feel not only happy, but lovely ourselves. We have been in drab rooms that depress us, and in harsh, overexciting rooms that seem to have no connection with the sensitive humans who live in them. Yet the whole point of color is to give us pleasure—stimulation when we want it, serenity when we need it.

We are always the children of our time, however, often in ways more complicated than we can comprehend. So our reactions to color change; our needs change; our tastes move in cycles. Each new arc takes in some of the past, and each repetition of the full cycle is somewhat different for the weight of history it bears. Pale colors today, for instance, have only a family resemblance to the pastels of a former cycle, and dark walls in 1966 play a quite different role than those of the 1940's.

Charting the orbits, every September, with the help of our color research consultant Faber Birren, H&G presents a palette of thirty-six colors, reaching into the recent past for favorites that continue to satisfy us, highlighting those of the present, and foreshadowing the trends of the near future. Invariably we touch every point on the color wheel, assuring everyone at least one or two examples of his favorite hue that are in the mood and manner of the moment.

Now in its nineteenth year, H&G's continuing color story is far more than a blue-sky forecast, for nearly 400 manufacturers throughout the country are using H&G Colors in everything you might want to buy for your home: paints and stains, wallpaper, fabrics, towels and sheets, carpeting and floor tiles, kitchen appliances, lighting fixtures, dishes, table linens, and uncountable decorative accessories. Since these products are carried by over 100 leading stores (see list, page 242), you can plan your color schemes before you shop and be certain of finding what you need to carry them out. This month, for the first time, you will also be able to buy, in the full range of H&G Colors, (except Snow), sets of felt-tipped markers with which you can block out your color schemes on paper. And our purse-size H&G Color Chips can be an enormous help when you go shopping. (See page 241 for more details on both.)

This year's color story begins on the next page, and, facing it, H&G's glowing new palette for 1966 makes its debut. On the following twelve pages you will see how these colors can be used in a refreshing new manner. You will see them again in our House of Color, pages 200-209, which has been furnished and decorated by H&G outside and inside, from the front door to the back terrace.

H&G COLORS: THE SWING TO SUBTLETY

Within the next twelve months you will become aware of a new mood in color—both a change in the nature of the colors themselves and a change in the mood they create. Already the swing has started. We are moving away from brilliant, high-spirited color schemes—from showcase rooms that dominate the people who live in them—to palettes that are far more gentle, more sensitive to our current need for serenity. Two galaxies composed of both new and established H&G hues—the sweet pales and the smoke tones—offer the wherewithal for a new kind of subtlety. Each group has enough character to stand alone, but they are beautiful in combination, and they also serve as marvelous foils for our third galaxy—the bright accent colors.

THE SWEET PALES

These lighter colors are light in many senses of the word: they are the opposite of dark, the opposite of weighty, the opposite of solemn. They hold something of the sun, illuminating darker hues against which they are played. In concert, they can turn any room into summer. Two new colors for 1966—Celery and Apricot Ice—join with other pales that have been moving into H&G's palette over the past three years—Pineapple, Pistachio, Peppermint Pink, Aquamarine Blue, and Sunflower—to form a lucid array that contributes notably to the new soft look. You can use the very palest of these tender tints for walls in place of the white that has served us for many years and achieve a light neutral background with a more gentle character. On our cover, throughout the rooms on the following pages, and in our House of Color, pages 200-209, you will see the sweet pales, sometimes set against bright or deep tones, sometimes working softly together. Snow, last year's whitest of whites, stays with us in the background of sweet pale prints, or in a room filled with subtle neutrals, becomes itself a bright accent. For two very effective ways to use the sweet pales, [illegible] pages 114-117.

THE SUBTLE SMOKES

This varied company includes the off-white and the neutrals, the deeper versions of more positive colors and the off-blacks. But light or dark, they are all quietly grayed. Surrounded by the subtle smoke tones, most of us feel peacefully at home. Their dusky but vital character stirs our deepest memories because these are the colors of our native clay and rocks, our berries, roots and tree barks—colors originally produced by techniques taught us long ago by the Indians. Among the smoky tones are two new members of the H&G palette: Putty, a warm grayed beige, and Eggplant, a very dark purplish brown that makes a wonderful background for the palest of the pales. Two of the subtle smokes are greens: the familiar shadowy Bronze Green and last year's lighter newcomer, Fern; two are in the old gold family: Antique Gold and the lighter, grayer Maple Sugar. This earthy palette also includes two more browns, Mushroom and Espresso, plus the cool gray Pussywillow, off-black Black Pearl, deep Purple Iris and dark Blueberry Blue.

You will find the subtle smokes used abundantly in our House of Color, playing both major and supporting roles, and you will see two quite different examples of the new quiet mood they create in the rooms on pages 178-179.

THE BRIGHT ACCENTS

Both the sweet lightness of the pales and the subtle haziness of the smokes benefit from a little bite of sharpness—either a light touch or a serious wallop of something truly bold. That is the role our company of bright accents plays in the new color mood for 1966. In contrast to the smoky native colors that are rarely found in European or Asian decoration, this group includes bright hues we have adopted from other countries: hot Mexican pinks, regal French-Empire green, brilliant African yellows. Two quite divergent roles for bright accents are demonstrated in the rooms on pages 180-183.

THE VERY IMPORTANT PINKS

In the forefront as this year's color favorites are the pinks—from the palest blush tints to the boldest off-reds—because of the tingle they can add to a quiet color scheme. The newest is Azalea, a slightly mauve pink that stops short of "hot." Most of the other pinks also belong to the galaxy of bright accents (see the starred colors, opposite page). The exception is icy Peppermint Pink, a sweet pale which can look very pink indeed when placed in contrast with such smoky tones as Espresso, Eggplant, or Black Pearl, but turns to warm white next to deeper pinks. For more about the very important role of pink and the marvelous variety of pink-to-red fabrics and furnishings you will find in the stores this year, see pages 184-187.

OFF-WHITE PLUS OFF-BLACK is the newer, more subtle version of the classic contrast of opposites. In Mrs. Herbert Richards' living room, the walls and ceiling are smoky Oyster White and the Belgian linen corduroy upholstery is not really white at all, but Putty, H&G's new warm neutral. By the same token, the patterns in the zebra skins and the lacquered finishes on the furniture are all a bit off-black. In this muted setting, lamps and shades in Snow white have the sharp effect of bright accents. Interior design by Michael Taylor.

SEVERAL SMOKY SHADES USED TOGETHER produce an inviting ambiance of warmth and livability. One of our new subtle smoke tones, deep purple-brown Eggplant, on the picture wall of Arthur O. Whitney's living room, leads a parade of smoky shades that includes Black Pearl on the bench, Espresso on the sofa, Mushroom in the lamp, Putty in the rug and bergère, Oyster White on screen and ceiling. Because the juxtaposition of lights and darks gives all of them richness and depth and there is so much textural variety the one bright accent is enough to give the room vital spark. Bright accents bring to life rooms mostly white or mostly neutral

A SINGLE CHAIR AND CUSHIONS OF POSITIVE HUE are all the accents needed to make a white room glow. When the background is as white a white as the Snow walls and ceiling framework in this living room, a bold smoky tone like Blueberry and a positive pale like Sunflower seem brighter than when they stand alone. CHAIRS AND CUSHIONS IN BRIGHT ACCENT COLORS banish bland monotony from a mostly neutral room. The cool neutrals in Mrs. Alan H. Rosenthal's living room —Putty rugs and sofa, Oyster White curtains and blinds, a travertine wall, marble-topped tables—are roused by ebullient pinks and orange. Stripes of Cyclamen, Tiger Lily, and Tangerine on the two pull-up chairs blend into a single sizable splash of vibrating color (neutrals, as a rule, need bolder accents than pure white), and bright cushions spread the warmth. Broken up into patterns, bright hues create a more gentle effect

ABOVE:

ON THE WALL, SMALL MOTIFS in vivid hues take on the softness of the sweet pales because they are widely dispersed over a field of white. Pungent Azalea and sharp Empire Green, for all their essential boldness, have a gently demure look in the wandering small-scale motifs of the wallpaper and curtain fabric in this young girl's bedroom. Again Azalea's strength is cut in half by the white background of the table-cover plaid, and the one splash of undiluted Azalea—the bedspread and headboards—is softened by the pillows. Interior design by Audré Fiber.

Subtle smokes:

LEFT:

ON THE FLOOR, LARGE MOTIFS in lively colors are quieted by a subtle smoke tone. Even though Green Gage stars in the bold border pattern of the rug in the Freddie Fields' living room, it is subtly toned down by the large area of smoky Eggplant in the center. There is more Green Gage in the fabric in the French Provincial sofa, but there, too, it is subdued because it is broken up into a plaid. The Mimosa chairs provide the strongest accents, softened again by the smoky Maple Sugar and Bronze Green of the rug under them. Interior design by Austin-Lane.

TWO BOLD PINKS, CHEEK TO CHEEK in a print, light up broad areas of black and white. But the heady combination of Cyclamen and Red Apple in the velvet on the seats of this conversation pit boosted by more Red Apple in the rug does not dazzle the eye because the brights are confined to one area. And their exuberance is cooled by the surround of Snow white walls, a Black Pearl floor of polished slate. Interior design: Florence Karasik.

Barn-siding walls painted smoky Eggplant establish a mood of quiet richness, yet the profusion of pattern—spotted calfskin on chest, snakeskin on table, Moorish tiles on floor—calls for sharper accents than would unpatterned neutrals. Whether you love pink for itself alone or for the very important role it can play in a company of other colors, you will have a marvelous array to choose from this autumn. The six pinks in H&G's 1966 palette are available in great profusion and in guises ranging from sweet pale area rugs that would light up smoky toned rooms with a candle's soft glow to papers in bright accent pinks that could give one wall the gleam of banked embers. Pinks tend to clarify and intensify the yellows and the oranges and to warm the blues and greens. Most important—if you love pink—is what the pinks do for each other when used together as in these rooms planned by H&G.

Plentiful PINKS...

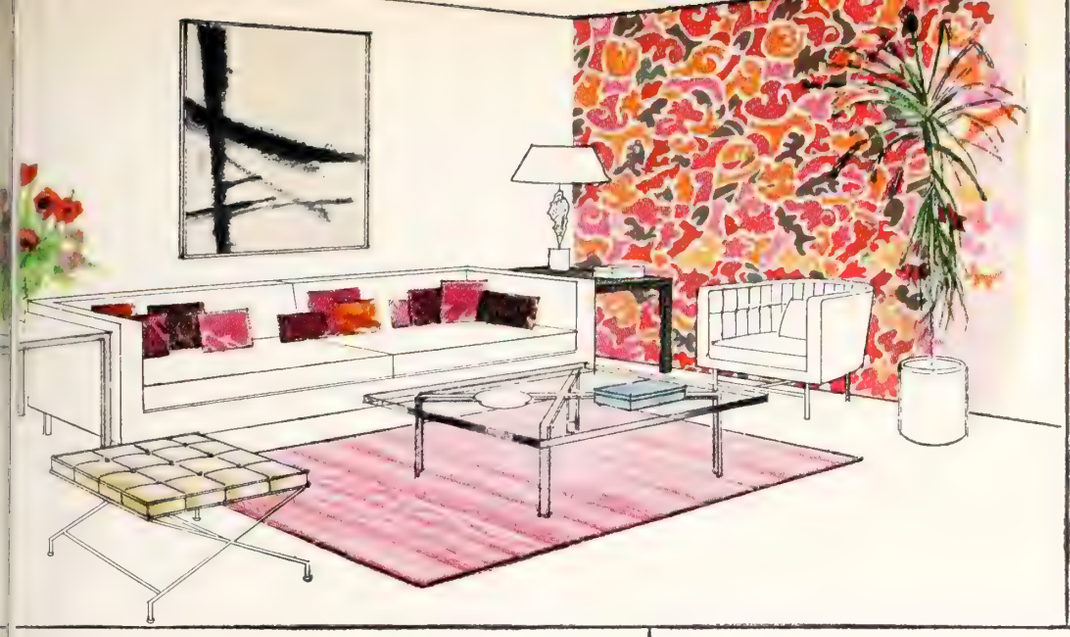
1. One stroke of drama for an entrance hall: white painted commode accented with Cyclamen moldings and silhouetted against a Cyclamen wall that sheds its glow on three other walls painted Snow and a floor tiled in Snow and Black Pearl. The important transition between commode and wall: a Red Apple lamp with an Azalea shade. Martin-Senour paint; Wilmar lamp; Kindel commode.

2. Warm-up for contemporary furniture: one wall papered in a stained glass pattern that mixes Red Apple, Cyclamen, Tiger Lily, and Peppermint, the Cyclamen echoed in a rug whose radiance glows through the glass-topped coffee table. On the Oyster White sofa: a reprise of the whole chorus of pinks in suede, silk, and velvet pillows. "Tiffany Window" wallpaper by Pageant; rug by Regal Rugs.

3. One painted accent piece for a mostly white dining room: Parsons table lacquered in Coral which is as flattering to diners as candlelight. To make the meal irresistible: dinner plates of Peppermint and Snow; goblets of Snow glass; Purple Iris napkins. Table from the Door Store, Washington, D. C.; pottery by Stargl.



4. Stimulating conversation group for a living room: an elegantly roomy sofa covered in a Cyclamen-on-Azalea print and teamed with a pair of chairs covered in Cyclamen nylon, the whole set off by a sweet pale background: Snow white walls accented with Apricot Ice molding; a white and Peppermint rug. Eaglesham printed cotton; Caprolan nylon fabric by Jacquard Fabrics Co.

5. Gentle breath of summer for a master bedroom: Peppermint Pink fabric strewn with bouquets of Azalea, Cyclamen, Sunflower in the curtains, on the king-size headboard, in the ready-made bedspread, softening Green Gage walls, Fern rug. Fabric and ready-mades by Cohama.

6. Flower-fresh palette for a young girl's bed-sitting room: a sweet pale background of Apricot Ice walls and window shades and Azalea patterned Snow white curtains brought to life with bright accents—an Azalea chair seat and pillow; Bluebell painted floor and table, Blueberry chest. For COLOR saturation you can't beat SPRING BULBS

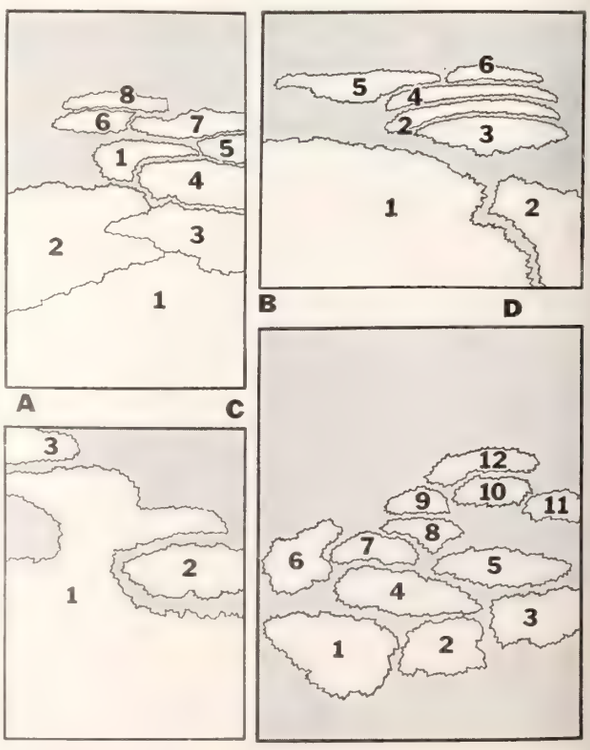
Sow bulbs by the peck in September and reap color by the square yard in April. It is a simple formula, producing its abundant results at a time when bright flowers are the first reliable sign of the earth's renewal. The dimensions of the color splurge, opposite page, are prodigal indeed, and not at all calculated on a backyard scale. But the principle remains constant.

To saturate an area with color, you must, of course, plant your bulbs as thickly as the law allows. The effect can be achieved with just a few dozen bulbs provided the area is proportionately small. (By approximate rule of thumb, you need two or three dozen big bulbs, or four times as many little ones, per square yard.) That represents a considerable number of bulbs per unit of space—and a considerable investment. But investment is the right word. If you choose well, and exercise reasonable care, your horde will increase, in both numbers and richness, in succeeding springs.

Among the delights of prodigal planting is the glory that spreads from the first points of color among green leaves and brown earth into pools and rivers of brilliance as the blossoms open. Such a triumphant display is likely to be brief—lasting a week or so in any individual phase, little more than a month for the whole progressive sequence of peak bloom.



To find out how this kind of color saturation was achieved on its grandest scale, H&G returned, for the first time in five years, to the Keukenhof Gardens near Lisse in the Netherlands. Here the world's best growers of hardy spring bulbs put on the world's greatest bulb show. We caught the season at its early best, when much of the color was supplied by tulips, abetted by late daffodils, hyacinths, and sheets of blue scillas and muscari. Among the tulips, a few relatively new races and groups stood out, notably hybrids of Tulipa greigii (for more about them, see Gardener's Month, page 244). Their star roles will be taken over successively by the more familiar garden varieties, the magnificent Darwin hybrids, and the lily-flowered varieties as the season closes. All the principal color highlights subject to harvest conditions and variety inventories should be widely available this autumn.

A The approach to color saturation exemplified in Holland's famed Keukenhof Gardens, opposite page, could be adapted—with the same species and varieties—to most home plantings a fraction of the size. Prominent varieties, keyed to diagram, right, include: 1 Tulipa praestans 'Fusilier' (sometimes four blooms per stem). 2 T. greigii 'Pandour.' 3 Lavender anemone blanda (like the blue scillas, used as under-and-interplanting). 4 T. greigii 'Cape Cod.' 5 White narcissus triandrus 'Thalia.' 6 T. fosteriana 'Purissima' (now, alas, renamed 'White Emperor'). 7 Yellow Philadelphia daffodil 'Dutch Master.' 8 White trumpet 'Mount Hood.'

B For a limited period, greigii tulips alone can have an enormous impact on any spring garden. This virtuoso planting includes: 1 T. greigii 'Philadelphia.' 2 Muscari armeniacum (for the true blue no tulip can [illegible] T. greigii 'Miskodeed.' 4 T. g. 'Gershwin.' 5 T. g. 'Cap d'Or.' [illegible] trumpet daffodil 'Dominator' at base of trees.

C Less controllable, perhaps, but more exuberant and easier to arrange is an informal grouping of a very few varieties with a few later kinds to extend bloom: 1 Mixed greigii tulips (sometimes called Peacock hybrids. 2 Scilla sibirica. 3 Daffodil 'Carlton.'

D A well-planned collection of bulb varieties is easily adapted to [illegible] season: 1 Hyacinth 'Jan Bos.' 2 T. kaufmanniana 'Fritz Kreisler.' 3 N. bulbocodium conspicuus. 4 Darwin hybrid tulip 'Big Chief' (not yet open). 5 Hyacinth 'Bismarck.' 6 T. k. 'Goudstuk.' 7 Pink hyacinth 'La Victoire.' 8 T. k. 'Gaiety.' 9 Hyacinth 'Ostara.' 10 T. fosteriana 'Red Emperor.' 11 Hyacinth 'Lady Derby.' 12 Double daffodil 'Texas.'

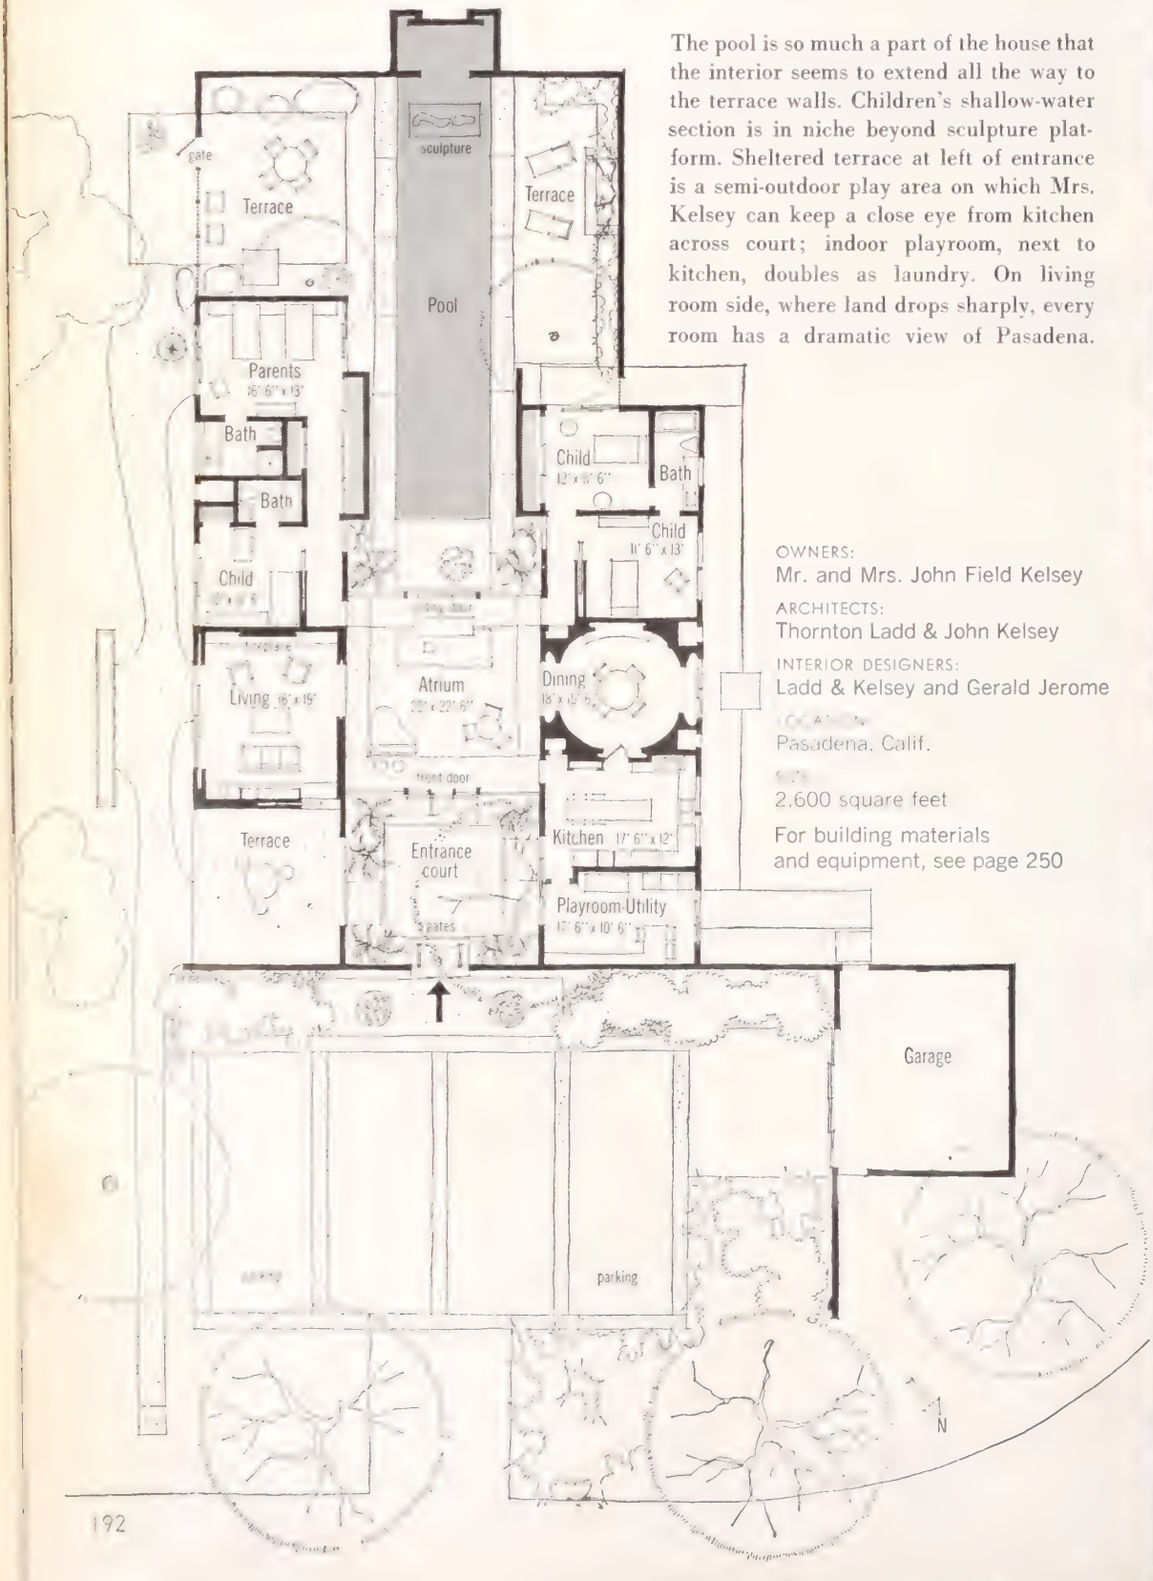
HOUSE DIVIDED BY A GLIMMERING POOL

The swimming pool, as H&G observed two years ago, has become far more than merely a place to swim. Imaginative designers have transformed it into the crowning jewel of the garden, the central motif of the landscape. But architect John Field Kelsey has gone still further. In the house he built for his own family in Pasadena, Calif., the pool is the dominant element in the architectural plan and a visual delight to be enjoyed from the moment you enter the front door.



pool seems actually to penetrate house itself, for it starts only a feet outside the glass wall of entrance atrium, above, and arates the two wings, opposite e, top. Dramatically centered at far end, opposite page, bottom, bronze by Jack Zajac mounted on latform that serves as a stepping ie between two poolside terraces.

Exterior of house is greenish-gray stucco accented by redwood fascia and gates of teak

Outdoors and indoors are so thoroughly interlaced in the Kelseys' house that you sometimes have to look sharply to tell which is which. You enter, for instance, through a pair of handsome teak gates in what appears to be the wall of the house but is not. Inside the gates you are still outdoors, in a charmingly planted courtyard. On your left is a semi-outdoor room, open on two sides, but walled on the others and sheltered by a roof. And straight ahead is a glass wall with glass doors that take you into the house. But having entered, your feeling of enclosure is only partial since you see, through another glass wall, the 66-foot pool dramatically stretched out before you. Throughout the house, in fact, there is not one opaque outside door, and every major window doubles as a door.

The pool is so much a part of the house that the interior seems to extend all the way to the terrace walls. Children's shallow-water section is in niche beyond sculpture platform. Sheltered terrace at left of entrance is a semi-outdoor play area on which Mrs. Kelsey can keep a close eye from kitchen across court; indoor playroom, next to kitchen, doubles as laundry. On living room side, where land drops sharply, every room has a dramatic view of Pasadena.

The brick-paved 10-foot-high entrance room—the Kelseys call it an atrium, some might call it a hall, and H&G would be inclined to call it a garden room—is the only link between the two sections of the house that flank the pool. On one side are the living room, Mr. and Mrs. Kelsey's bedroom and eight-year-old daughter Elizabeth's room. On the other side are kitchen, dining room, and two bedrooms for the younger children—Jennifer, five, and Brent, four. Every one of these rooms is meticulously designed; every functional detail worked out with finesse. Curtain tracks are recessed in the ceiling. Lighting fixtures are concealed by teak cornices. Living room and dining room are finished with teak paneling, teak built-ins. Movable furniture is limited to the minimum needed for comfort. For the house was conceived as an undistracting background for art, which the Kelseys, still in their early thirties, have only started to collect. (Continued)

The dining room is as carefully modeled as a piece of sculpture. And curve pockets tucked behind the teak paneling conceal the curtains when they are draw back from the doors to the garden. This is an intimate room designed for dinner fo six or less. Opening the door to music for the musically shy adult

MILTON GLASER

"There is no hand so inept," claimed Sir Joshua Reynolds, "that training cannot render it skillful." He was speaking of painting, but the maxim is equally valid when translated to music. Today we know that very few people are really tone deaf. Almost anyone can be trained to sing in key. In most cases, even perfect pitch can be acquired. And virtually no one is so hopelessly unco-ordinated that he cannot learn to play some kind of musical instrument. Our children are energetically demonstrating these facts. What parent has not undergone ordeal by school band? Yet we all know adults, knowledgeable enough about the other arts, who insist that music, for them, is a forbidden world. "Can't tell one note from the other," they say, with the finality of one who has been given a life sentence.

Most of these musical exiles went to school in the days when anything more than the most elementary training in music was looked upon as frill—a special privilege to be reserved for children with unmistakable talent. Or worse yet, their earliest musical experience was blighted by malpractice. A friend of mine, for instance, was banished to the back of the classroom with the "crows" who were forbidden to sing with the upfront "canaries." His teacher said he couldn't carry a tune and he obliged by growing up to prove she was right (or so they both thought). He even extended her verdict on his vocal chords to include his ears and his fingers.

How can such musically scarred adults reverse the wheels of time and open the door to the delight in music that most of us feel is an indispensable facet of daily living?

● The magic of learning to play

One of the best ways for the musically deprived adult to approach (or reapproach) music is directly through an instrument. When you take up an instrument, you have the satisfaction of acquiring control of an object and, hopefully, of producing pleasure for yourself and for others. This is what psychologists call "participative action," and it can be one of life's profoundest joys. But there are also psychological stumbling blocks. One is the self-consciousness that an adult is apt to feel at the thought of starting out like a child fumbling with the abc's. Another is the discouraging prospect of long, monotonous drill in scales, chords, and arpeggios before arriving at the threshold of pleasure. Such disciplines may be salutary for the young, but happily they can be bypassed by an adult, at least until he has tasted enough pleasure to make the game seem worth the candle.

Of primary importance is choosing the right instrument. It would be well to steer away from stringed instruments like the violin and cello for they do demand a long period of practice bowing, fingering, and vibrato before the results are tolerable even to the performer himself, much less his family. Many wind instruments such as the oboe require a degree of breath control which would be almost as difficult for an adult to develop as for a woman of thirty-five to master the professional techniques of ballet. Even the piano (although possibly unequaled as a means of learning the rudiments of music) takes practice to play well and with any degree of sophistication: an adult-in-a-hurry is not apt to reap as much satisfaction from his own perfect rendition of "Twinkle, twinkle, little star," as he does when he hears his eight-year-old play it. But several instruments give promise of early rewards.

Some, in fact, reduce instrument-playing to near effortlessness. For instance, the autoharp. You merely press a button on this little square box, flutter your nails over its strings, and out comes a tinkle of familiar and resplendent harmonies. It is capable of sufficient chords to supply a prefabricated, you-can't-go-wrong accompaniment to a very large repertoire of folk, popular, and even classical songs.

Another simplified instrument is the bell set or piccolo xylophone. Also a portable box, it has a small, numbered keyboard of metal bars made from high carbon tempered steel which you hammer to produce a pleasant tune. This instrument is not a toy: Richard Adler used it when he was composing the songs for both "Pajama Game" and "Damn Yankees."

For those who would rather blow than strum or hammer, the recorder yields sweet-sounding tunes faster than any other instrument with the possible exception of the tissue-paper-and-pocket-comb ensemble. The recorder is also an invaluable aid in developing an ear and a sense of pitch, both vocal and instrumental, yet its tube and holes require not a jot of musical knowledge or experience. You look at some pictures, press your fingers, and blow. The result is a-b-c-d-e-f-g-a, but simple as the instrument is, Bach, Handel, and Mozart all wrote compositions for it.

Although the guitar ultimately requires as much musical sophistication as the piano, it can also bring immediate rewards to the novice. In a consistently pleasant way, it demonstrates the principles of melody, harmony, and rhythm, and has the added advantage of being a very private as well as a public instrument. You can practice it in secrecy in the quiet of the woods or play it in the middle of the night so softly that no one can hear you.

● The encouraging organ

For the musically ignorant adult, the electric or electronic organ has one great advantage over other keyboard instruments: even when you pick out a melody with one finger, you get a smooth progression if impressively rounded tones. In addition, some of the newest electronic organs have "captured registrations"—preselected combinations of stops that produce a rich and vibrant sound at the flick of a button. Left to himself, it would take even an experienced organist some time to discover such felicitous and appropriate tonal adjustments. Thus, if you insist, like Sir Arthur Sullivan, on fumbling around for that lost chord, the search will no longer be so raucous. Even your mistakes will be bold and bearable.

Another lure for organ novices has been the recent addition of percussion combos in the form of special attachments or built in. They make a "ssh-boom" sound and offer a wide range of drumbeats to support the melody or chords played on the organ's keyboard. You have, literally, a band at your finger tips.

For the adult who shrinks from touching any keyboard lest he hit a false note, systems have been developed for numbering or painting the keys (of piano, organ, or accordion), so he can tell at sight which ones correspond to which notes. Another device is a string of little white buttons just above the lower manual of an organ keyboard that lights up to show you which chord to play to go with the note you have just struck with a pedal. The same principle has been elaborated into an invention called "Guided Fingers Music Scroll." An electronic contraption that is placed above the keys rolls out before your eyes like a player piano roll, and arrows point out exactly where to put each finger and when. The result is a sort of instant music, somewhat reminiscent of painting pictures by numbers. Nevertheless, it is a fast, effective means of evading note-reading.

Apart from these and other Pavlov-like methods designed to bolster the courage of musically diffident adults (under "Music Instructions" in almost any city telephone directory you will find such assurances as "play a tune your first lesson" or "even if you never played a note before"), teaching techniques originated by two well-established music schools have long since proved their effectiveness for giving a grasp of music per se. And these schools' graduates and trainees have been making their methods available in cities throughout the country.

● Grown-up methods for grown-ups

New York's Dalcroze School of Music, for instance, originally developed for adult beginners the principles that have made its children's classes famous—i.e. eurythmics or the co-ordination of the whole body with the musical experience. An adult venturing into a Dalcroze evening group begins by walking, sitting down, standing up, and making other everyday movements which he is encouraged to channel into rhythmic patterns. Then he goes to the piano where he is instructed to improvise—striking whatever notes he likes—within the meter or pattern established by his movements. From these barely disciplined, natural beginnings where breathing is as essential as the correct touch of the keys, the lessons proceed gradually to take in finger-dexterity, note-reading, ear-training, and other musical techniques. The result is both the development of musical awareness and a liberation from musical shyness.

The old and distinguished Diller-Quaile School of Music which has branches all over the country also welcomes adult beginners. "There is hardly anyone," says Dorothy Weed, the director, "who cannot accomplish enough to give himself great pleasure." Her adult pupils range from burly Wall Street men who want to learn just enough piano to play simplified opera arias, to high-powered secretaries who come once a week on their lunch hours and hope eventually to play a few classics. The broad principle of the Diller-Quaile School is to start the adult on theory and musicianship at the same time he starts learning to play. There are no dry facts, no mental theory papers, only the experience of music, as opposed to sound. At the first lesson, for instance, when rhythm is introduced, the accent of two beats and three beats is not pounded out with a pencil, but instead with changing chords. The principle is the same, but the effect is musical, not muscular. Within a half-a-dozen lessons, the pupil plays a melody to the teacher's accompaniment, or the teacher plays a melody to a simple chordal accompaniment by the pupil.

● Joy without end

You do not, of course, have to be able to play an instrument in order to understand and enjoy music. It is possible to understand a great deal about music without being able to play any instrument well. But in addition to giving you the satisfaction of making your own music, an instrument by its physical action—by the actual operation of its keys, strings or stops—demonstrates the principles of music in the way that makes them easiest to grasp. Furthermore, some experience with the problems involved in playing helps you to appreciate more fully the performance of the accomplished artist. Even for an adult whose musical aim is merely to become a more intelligent listener, it is worth the effort to learn how to play something.

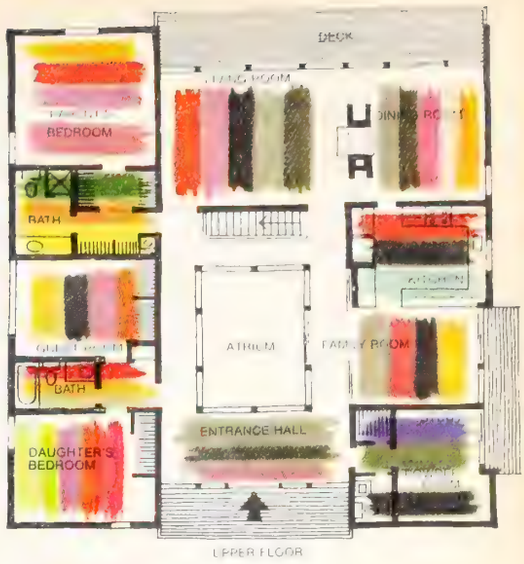
To enjoy music is as natural for a human being as to enjoy color or a fine sunset or a breath of fresh air. No one needs to be taught, in the sense that he is taught to ski or to speak a second language. Learning to enjoy music is really a matter of getting rid of inhibitions. But it is an enjoyment that has no ceiling: the more you learn about music, the more you will enjoy.

NEW COLOR ACCENTS for your bathroom

New lavatories in three strong colors from H&G's 1966 palette have opened up a new and marvelously flexible approach to bathroom color planning. Instead of having to settle for all white fixtures or a matched set in one of the standard pastels, you can combine a lavatory in a new bold accent color with a tub and toilet of less dominant hue. Two of the new colors—Curry and Red Apple—are from H&G's group of Bright Accents; the third, Blueberry Blue, is one of the Subtle Smoke tones (see page 175). Any of these might be chosen to emphasize the motifs in a wallpaper, for instance, or the color of your towels, or even the shade of the floor tile when the walls are in a lighter, quieter hue. And the opportunities are multiplied by other new materials available for bathrooms—ceramic tiles in new shadings and textures, plastic laminate in new colors and patterns, new vinyl tiles. To illustrate the refreshing possibilities, H&G has designed three bathroom color schemes:

For a master bathroom, this page, we chose a pair of Curry lavatories and designed an hexagonal freestanding lavatory counter topped with hexagonal white ceramic tiles. The tiles are laid with extra wide joints filled with Curry colored grout—a new way to add a small touch of color. We selected for one wall of the room a new plastic laminate, upper left, patterned to resemble barn-siding, and for the floor, a new kind of textured ceramic tile, subtly shaded in color from Bronze Green to Green Gage. For the rest of the room: tub and toilet in pale yellow; three walls painted white above a dado tiled in hexagons with Curry grout to match the counter.

For a guest bathroom, opposite page, top, we started with a Blueberry Blue lavatory, and surrounded it with a counter of one and three-quarter-inch maple butcher block. The ceramic floor tile is a new Moorish design that shades slightly from Blueberry Blue to Ultramarine. Tub, toilet, and dado tiles would be pale blue, walls above dado papered in a black-and-white toile pattern.



For a children's bathroom to be shared by two young boys, opposite page, right, we designed a lively red-white-and-blue scheme based on three new products: lavatories in Red Apple, laminated plastic in Ultramarine; pebble-finish vinyl floor tile in Red Apple. Everything else in the room would be white.

The new products that inspired our color schemes include accent-color lavatories by Kohler Company; ceramic tiles by Stylon Corporation; plastic laminate by The Formica Corporation; vinyl floor tiles by Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.; towels by Stevens Utica. For shopping information, see page 238.

Our color plan for the main floor: a gentle muted palette for the family living areas; brighter colors reserved for the more private rooms.

H&G's HOUSE OF COLOR illustrates the new swing to subtlety

In a house, as in a painting, too many, too strong colors in too many areas end by canceling each other out. Even Matisse did not fill his canvases edge to edge with vivid hues, but used them to highlight a flower or a scrap of fabric. So in a house, the excitement of potent color is likely to be more welcome when it is reserved for a few rooms. To test this principle, H&G borrowed a recently finished house designed by architects Keyes, Lethbridge & Condon and constructed by builders Edmund J. Bennett Associates in a planned community in Carderock Springs, Md. The house is a contemporary two-level design with the main floor rooms forming a U around an open-to-sky, glass-walled atrium brimming with flowers. The rooms for family living open from the gallery that encircles the atrium; and the bedrooms and study are tucked away at the corners of the house. Using H&G's five new colors for 1966—Apricot Ice, Celery, Eggplant, Putty, Azalea—plus eighteen others from our current palette (see page 175), we created for the open living areas quiet, muted color schemes dominated by our subtle smoke tones and our sweet pales—and concentrated most of our bright accent colors in the more personal rooms. You can judge for yourself the effectiveness of this color technique when you are in the vicinity of Carderock Springs, because the house will be open to visitors until October 1.

IN THE GALLERY AROUND THE ATRIUM, soft smoky tones form a flattering three-dimensional frame for the flower colors in the court. The inner clapboard walls of the gallery, like those of the exterior of the house, are stained Putty, and the quarry tiles of the floor are in a nearly matching shade. For contrast, the frames of the sliding glass panels around the atrium are painted slightly darker Mushroom. Floor tile by American Olean Tile.

IN THE LIVING ROOM, opposite page, we took our cue from the fireplace wall of pale mellow bricks and composed a scheme of beiges and taupes with a few pink and orange accents. A range of textures adds variety to this company of pale neutrals—corduroy on the tub chair and the two sofas, below, suede cloth on the oversized ottoman, leather on the armchair. The rug designed for the room teams Mushroom (color of ceiling beams) with Sunflower and Snow. Barwick rug; Wilmar table lamp; all furniture throughout house by Drexel.

IN THE DINING ROOM, above, which is on the other side of the free-standing fireplace wall, the same combination of smoky colors is accented with the fresh, glossy pinks —Peppermint and Azalea—in the vinyl upholstery on the dining chairs. Pleated window shades, identical to those in living room, are made of Belgian linen laminated to a stiffened backing and strung on guide wires. They can be lowered to floor, raised to ceiling, or left partially open from both top and bottom. Vinyl upholstery from Gilford.

THE FRONT DOOR framed in Azalea pink with matching side panels gives the house a gay, welcoming face. The rest of the exterior is in earth colors—Putty stained clapboard siding and Mushroom trim—that marry house to landscape.

ONE-AND-A-HALF STORY PLAN takes advantage of the slope of the land. Although the house looks small from the outside, its two levels contain plenty of space for a family of four. We furnished it for an imaginary couple with a twelve-year-old son and a fourteen-year-old daughter. The parents' and daughter's bedrooms on the main floor are separated by her sitting room which doubles as a guest room. There is a study for father next to the family room on the other side of the house. The son's bedroom and bathroom are on the lower level.

IN THE STUDY, below left, wall panels of golden elm plywood create a rich masculine look. The prefinished white shelves can be rearranged on the perforated strips to fit any wall composition. FOR THE DAUGHTER'S BEDROOM, left, we chose one of our new sweet pales —Celery—as the wall color and background for a trio of bright accents: Azalea, Tiger Lily, and Green Gage. All three plus blue and yellow appear in the printed cotton we used quilted for the bedspread and chair, plain for the bed's canopy. For simplicity's sake, we kept the curtains tailored: panels of Tiger Lily and Azalea striped cotton shirred onto rods at both top and bottom. The same colors are repeated in the wall-to-wall carpeting. IN HER SITTING ROOM, left, which is quickly convertible to a guest room, the floor is covered with the same Tiger Lily and Azalea carpet as in her bedroom, but the fabrics here emphasize the orange. In the cotton print, Mimosa and Ultramarine are mixed with Tangerine, a deep pink that plays a very important role on this floor as you can see by our color plan (inset in photograph). The rest of the colors are more subdued: pale Sunflower sailcloth on the chair cushions; black hop sacking on the overscaled sofa; chestnut-patterned vinyl squares in weathered beige tones on the floor. A round pedestal table doubles for games or refreshments and a hutch cabinet, right, holds all the necessary china. Against another wall stands a bar cabinet (see it on page 248) with a refrigerator. THE SON'S BEDROOM, left, and his bathroom, far left, share a common color theme of black and white plus red, but the proportions differ in each room. In his bedroom, they are almost equally divided: a Red Apple bedspread, Tangerine rug, and desk accessories countered by black and white herringbone tweed curtains, and an armchair and ottoman covered in black, white, and brown cotton plaid. Bathroom glows with a Tangerine bandanna-patterned wallpaper accented by a black-and-white shower curtain and sharp white of fixtures. Leoda de Mar wallpaper.

At home with Carol Channing

in the hotel apartment where she and her family have forged a rich and personal world

On a high floor of Manhattan's Waldorf Towers, in an apartment bursting with color and brimming over with books, drawings, and a lifetime's photographs, Carol Channing lives her off-stage role as wife of TV writer-producer, Charles Lowe, and mother of their eleven-year-old son, Channing. Here, in four large rooms, the Lowes have gathered all the things they love best, transforming the apartment from an impersonal hotel suite into a warm and inviting home. (Continued)

An appealing mixture of clown and little-girl-lost, off-stage as well as on, Miss Channing nevertheless knew precisely how she wanted the Lowes' new apartment to look. Having supplemented or replaced the hotel furniture with a few favorite pieces she and her husband always keep with them, she poured color into the rooms—the same ones she loves best to wear, yellows and lots of white. Deep mustard yellow walls in the living room set off a collection of Al Hirschfeld theatre cartoons (see previous page); slipcovers and upholstery in yellows, golds, and green give a fresh face to the hotel sofas and chairs. In the Lowes' own bedroom, opposite page, top, and the dressing room, right, below, walls in a sunnier yellow laced with white moldings form a lively background for painted furniture.

The Lowes buy nearly every book written about the theatre, and the floor-to-ceiling bookshelves they had built across one end of the living room are already filled to capacity, so books rise in pyramids around the room. Drawings, paintings, and photographs, all with a story to tell, crowd walls and tables everywhere. In Miss Channing's bedroom hang costume sketches for her various roles by Orry-Kelly, Freddy Wittop, and Miles White. In the hall you come across Oliver Smith's backdrop paintings for her hit, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." The apartment even boasts two paintings by Miss Channing herself. (One of her current regrets is that she has no time to paint.) Sharing space everywhere with the theatre memorabilia are photographs of the three Lowes over the years—on vacations, at Christmas, in the park.

Channing's room, above right, is the only one where all the hotel furniture has been replaced. Deeply involved in a boy's world of electric trains, experiments-in-progress, model airplanes, and such, he needs—and has—lots of free floor space. Campaign chests placed end to end provide him with a long countertop, and a gate-leg table in front of the window serves as an expansible desk. His bunk-type bed placed along a third wall saves space for his trains.

Since Miss Channing herself usually sleeps until noon, her curtains are lined with Milium to black out the light. After breakfasting, she loves a long bath during which she reads mail and scripts. An inflated rubber-back cushion props her up, and a metal bath tray holds the folder of daily reading material her husband has marked "Baby Lowe To Read." An addicted collector of hats, she keeps them around her in towering displays. A floor-standing hatrack in her bedroom holds some of the largest. Others live in white cardboard hatboxes piled high in the bedroom and dressing room.

On Sundays, Channing and his mother love to experiment with cooking. But in the Lowe household, even cooking has a personal flavor. A recent, not entirely successful venture was a peanut-butter omelette. Once a batch of mother-and-son's rock candy exploded all over the kitchen ceiling.

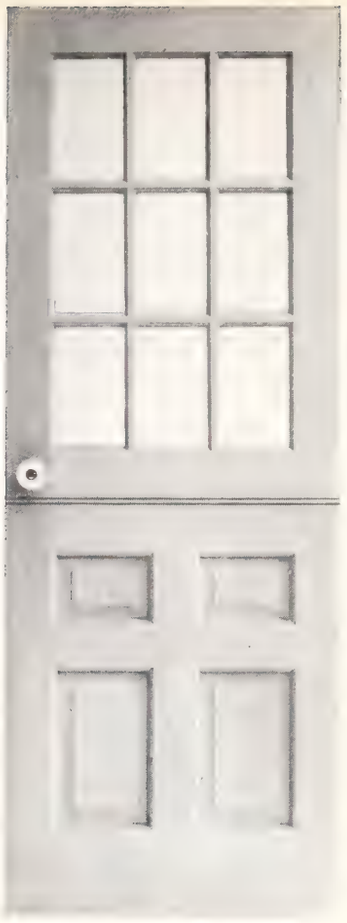
TYPICAL AMERICAN FARMHOUSE DOOR

the new DOORS

DOOR WITH ELLIPTICAL PANELING

The door of a house, more than any other one architectural feature, is what gives it individuality. And today you will discover a marvelously expanded array of standard ready-made panel doors to choose from: French Provincial doors, English Tudor doors, half-a-dozen other distinctive designs that until recently would have to have been made to order. Top quality doors are also being made more painstakingly. The milling and jointing are more carefully controlled so door sizes are dependably accurate; glass panels come mounted in their frames.



If you are choosing a new door yourself, here are a few points to check out before you buy. Be sure the wood has been pre-treated for moisture, termites, and rot, and that the grain is uniform and without knots. Be sure that the door is straight and smooth-edged. An exterior door should be at least $1\frac{3}{8}$ inches thick, and it should have been pre-sanded at the factory so that it is ready to paint, stain, or varnish. The price will be somewhere between $30 and $60 depending upon the elaborateness of the design. (A door with glass inserts usually costs more than an all-wood door, and the English Country door, left, tops them all at about $100.)

Every exterior door should be fully weather-stripped, for no matter how well it fits its frame, there must always be hairline cracks to let the door open easily. The best weather stripping is either the interlocking or compression type that keep the door snug when closed. Weather stripping also helps to make the door soundproof.

Most new doors need at least two coats of paint or, for a lacquerlike finish, three coats. The exterior paint should be thinned slightly (too-thick paint will coarsen the moldings) and each coat should be lightly sanded before the next is applied. Nothing makes a new door look old faster than sloppy painting. And, very important, doors should be installed with three sets of hinges, not only two. All the doors on these pages are stock designs made of Ponderosa Pine with hardware by Luten-Clarey-Stern.

HEAVY FLORENTINE PANELED DESIGN

Irresistible games that prompt a lively party

Everyone who saw the Vatican Pavilion's extraordinary appliquéd banners at the New York World's Fair—banners illustrating familiar biblical verses in a fresh, happy style—shared a tingling sense of discovery. The designer of the banners, Norman Laliberté, and his company of young artists, del Sol Productions, have adapted their playful style to a new collection of wood, fabric, and paper games, and each is a decorative object in its own right.

The games mesmerized Manhattanites when they were displayed in the lobby of a Park Avenue office building. They are now on tour and on sale, enchanting youngsters and many grown-ups who supposed they were too sophisticated to want to hide handkerchiefs or play hopscotch or pin a tail on a unicorn. But even the staunchest anti-gamester might covet as a wall hanging the banner of pockets and handkerchiefs that mixes patterns with op art abandon. The hooked hopscotch rug would fit right into a child's room or a family game room. The wooden games and plaques—hand-carved, painted with lightly brushed clear colors, and glossed with shellac—have the naïve look of anonymous folk art, yet each artist's quirkiness makes them strikingly individual.

Looking at the games put us in a party mood, so we decided to try them out. We invited over twenty youngsters in the wide and generally unworkable age range of ten to eighteen to an afternoon back-to-school party. At the entrance to the party room we placed the hopscotch rug and as each boy and girl arrived, they were urged to remove their shoes to hop. By the time the loser kissed the winner, according to the hooked-in instructions, all shyness had melted. Everyone made a beeline for the other games which we set up on sawhorses or hung on walls in the manner of a game gallery at a county fair. Before long even the adults who had come only to help or chaperon couldn't resist getting in on the act.

It was the carnival spirit of the games themselves that inspired our picnic-style eat-as-you-wander supper which we set out on a long table covered with a vinyl cloth gay as a meadow of flowers. Our centerpiece consisted of bouquets of flowery paper napkins (handy with fried chicken) and kaleidoscopes which the guests could take home as party favors.

Winding up with a Happy Unbirthday cake that everyone could wish on, we were content that we had made another happy discovery: old-fashioned games served up in new ways make a new kind of party no one is too old for, and no one too young.

Mexican drinks

These south-of-the-border specialties made with tequila, rum, and Kahlúa are your passports to a new world of taste

By Philip S. Brown

When the conquistadors arrived in Mexico in 1519, they found the natives enjoying pulque, the lightly fermented juice of the maguey. For special occasions, fermented drinks were also made from various other plants, fruits, and bark, but the Mexicans apparently had no knowledge of distillation. Before very long the Spaniards had enlightened them on this matter, and mezcal and tequila made their appearance. These drinks are still going strong and are the principal tipple of the Mexicans to this day.

With the introduction of sugar cane, rum and aguardiente came along. Rum was first made in the southeastern part of Mexico, in the Veracruz region, for it was there that the Spaniards planted sugar cane so that sugar and molasses would be handy to the seaport. Now, of course, it grows in many parts of the country and many different rums are made.

The Spanish mission fathers planted grapes and started making wines and brandy on a small scale, but the climate of Mexico is not conducive to the growing of wine grapes, so production has remained small and quality inferior. (The best-known wines of Mexico are those of the old Mission Santo Tomás, in Baja California, but the vineyards there have all but died out.) A number of liqueurs are indigenous to the country, the most notable of which is Kahlúa, the popular coffee-flavored after-dinner drink.

Pulque is still a favorite beverage of the poorer classes in Mexico, but because it is drunk fresh, it is not exported. The picturesque pulquerías, brightly painted and bearing such fanciful names as "My Love," "Purity," "Remembrance of the Future," "Diana's Salon," "The Last Days of Pompeii," and "The Temple of Love," were once prominent in every Mexican city. Now they are for the most part found only in the smaller towns or on shabby back streets. Pulque, being in a state of fermentation, has a sour acrid odor which takes quite a bit of getting used to, hence it is seldom consumed by tourists.

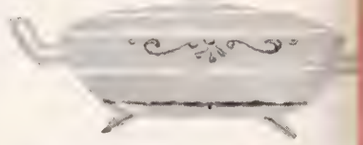
Of course, in Mexico today, most bars have complete selections of all kinds of liquors and liqueurs in all of the familiar brands. However, it's fun to try the local specialties, and you will probably find these bibendas Mexicanas very enjoyable. Salud y pesetas!

Tequila

Tequila, made principally in Jalisco, and mezcal, from the Oaxaca region, are both made from varieties of cactus and, although practically flavorless, are both pretty fiery. Until the latter part of the nineteenth century, the distilliation of these liquors was carried on informally, in many small stills, and the product was raw and extremely potent. Nowadays the whole production is carefully controlled in large distilleries so that the bottled spirits are uniform and seldom over 90 proof. While naturally clear white, some tequila acquires a light tan color by being left in charred casks for a short while. A small amount is cask aged for a longer time and is bottled with the designation añejo (aged). One large producer recently bottled a limited quantity called Conmemorativo, in celebration of ninety years in business. This had been aged for seven years with remarkable results, but as it sells for three or four times more than ordinary tequila, it is a very special drink indeed.

The classic way of drinking tequila is with salt and lemon or lime: a little salt is held in the hollow between the thumb and forefinger of the left hand, a segment of the fruit between the finger tips. A lick of the salt, a straight shot of tequila, then a suck of the lemon is all there is to it. (Some drinkers vary the order; there is no set rule.) Another simple and felicitous way of imbibing is the "Mexican boilermaker"—a schooner of beer and a shot (or shots) of tequila. Here are a few other good drinks in which tequila or mezcal may be used interchangeably:

Dorado Cocktail



2 ounces tequila
1 tablespoon honey
Juice of ½ lemon

Shake well with cracked ice and strain into a cocktail glass. A most interesting flavor and a lovely pale golden color.

TOM FUNK

The present-day Mexican kitchen in all its rich variety arose from a unique collision of three cooking worlds—Aztec, Spanish, and French. To the Spanish conquistadors, the native cuisine of the Aztecs came as a delight and an astonishment. Bernal Diaz del Castillo, who accompanied Cortez, noted in his writing foods then unknown outside the Americas: chocolate, vanilla, corn, chiles, peanuts, tomatoes, avocados, squash, beans, sweet potatoes, pineapple, and papaya. To this list, Spain added oil and wine, cinnamon and cloves, rice and wheat, peaches and apricots, and the cattle that provided beef, milk, and butter—all culinary contributions from Europe, Asia, and the Arab countries. Later, during the brief reign of Maximilian and Carlotta, more sophisticated dishes of French, Austrian, and Italian origin were introduced. Contrary to general belief, Mexican cooking is not necessarily hot. It is subtly spiced and the range of dishes goes far beyond the popular tacos, tamales, and mole. Once, authentic Mexican food demanded hours of preparation, but this has now been short-cut by modern labor-saving devices such as the electric blender, which has replaced the molcajete and tejolote (the black stone mortar and pestle of the Aztecs) and the tortilla press. Mexican dishes are superbly suited to entertaining, for much of the preparation can be done ahead, and the traditional earthenware casseroles (cazuelas) and pots (ollas) are not only attractive enough to take from range to table, but have the advantage of keeping food hot longer than ordinary utensils.

Ingredients Used in Mexican Cooking

Chiles are essential to the Mexican kitchen. Although there are an estimated sixty-one classified varieties—sweet, pungent, and hot—no cook needs all of them. Eight will do nicely; you can even manage quite well with five.

The red chiles used in cooking are all sold dried. The most popular are chile ancho, a broad, red chile, full-flavored but not hot; chile pasilla, longer and a deeper red, not quite so full-flavored but rather more pungent; and chile mulato, in shape midway between the two, and darker in color. Chipotle, smaller and almost brick-red, is available pickled, in cans. It has a very distinctive flavor and is extremely hot. The tiny red chile pequin, sometimes called tepin, is also hot. These chiles can be bought in Spanish and Puerto Rican grocery stores, packaged or loose. In a pinch, commercial chili powder can be used in place of the dried chiles, but the powder has added spices such as cumin and oregano, and unless these spices are called for in the recipes, the flavor of the finished dish may be altered. If using chili powder, add one tablespoon of flour to each six of the powder.

The green chiles are hotter than the red ones and are sold fresh or pickled in cans, never dried. The small green chile serrano, available canned and in some markets fresh, is always hot. The larger jalapeño, sold canned, is also hot, although a deseeded pickled version retains the flavor of the chile while eliminating most of the fire. The deep green poblano, about the size of a bell pepper, has a very distinctive flavor and can be extremely hot, although soaking it in salted water takes care of this. If poblanos are not available, use green bell peppers, which lack the special taste of the poblanos, but are acceptable.

Beans, indigenous to the Americas and India, are also important in Mexican cooking. They come in a wide range of sizes, colors, and shapes. The most popular in Mexico are the black beans, frijol negro, pintos, available in Spanish and Puerto Rican markets, and the red kidney bean or pink bean which is sold in supermarkets.

Tomatoes are perhaps Mexico's best gift to the world of food. The red tomato, called in Mexico jitomate, can be found everywhere. The green tomato, small and green with a papery brown covering and known variously as tomate, tomate con cascara, tomate verde, tomatitto and tomatillo, is harder to get. It has a very delicate flavor that does not develop until it is cooked for two or three minutes. Green tomatoes are used in many sauces and are available canned in Latin-American and Puerto Rican grocery stores and in many specialty food shops. In some markets in the Southwest they can be bought fresh.

Herbs and spices figure largely in Mexican cooking. Fresh coriander, in Mexico called cilantro, in its fresh form looks like parsley (it is also known as Chinese parsley) and is sold in Chinese markets, Puerto Rican grocery stores, and often in stores that specialize in foods from India. Annatto, in Mexico called achiote, is the name given the seeds of a tree that grows in tropical America. It has a delicate flavor, and the red pulp surrounding the seeds colors food a deep golden yellow. It is widely used in Yucatan as a substitute for saffron. Puerto Rican and Latin-American grocery stores carry it. Epazote or anserina ambrosiada is the green leaf of an herb widely used in Mexico, but hard to obtain elsewhere except in certain markets in the southwestern U.S. It has a distinctive flavor for which there is no substitute. It is not, however, essential.

The following stores sell, and will mail, foods needed for Mexican cooking:

Call and order a day ahead to be on the safe side.

Tortillas and Tamales

Corn plays a vital role in the Mexican kitchen. The corn dishes—tortillas, tamales, and so on—have changed very little since Aztec and Maya times. The original laborious process of boiling dried corn with lime to make nixtamal and then grinding it into flour on a metate, a three-legged, flat, oblong stone, with a metlalpil, a stone rolling pin, to make the masa (dough) for tortillas and tamales has been modernized. Flour for the masa is sold packaged as masa harina. Masa harina made by the Quaker Oats Company can be bought in major cities in Spanish and Puerto Rican grocery stores, or may be ordered by mail.

Tortillas, the bread of ancient Mexico before the Spaniards introduced wheat, and the basis of many dishes, are easy to make. You need masa harina, a tortilla press, and a comal, which is a round iron or earthenware baking sheet (a griddle will do as a substitute). Traditionally, tortillas are made by patting the ball of masa between the palms of the hands until a thin, flat, round cake is formed. This is very difficult and very time-consuming and the tortilla press does the job just as well.

Tortillas

cups Quaker Masa Harina cups warm water
teaspoon salt

Mix the ingredients to form a soft dough. Divide into balls the size of a small egg and flatten on the tortilla press between two sheets of plastic or waxed paper to a thin pancake about 4″ across. If the tortilla sticks, the dough is too moist. Scrape it off, add a little more masa harina to the dough and begin again. It does not hurt the dough to handle it.

Place ungreased comal over medium heat and cook tortillas one at a time, about 2 minutes on each side, or until the edges begin to lift and they are very slightly browned. Makes 1 dozen small tortillas.

Note: Tortillas can be kept warm for several hours. Preheat oven to 150°. Have ready a cloth napkin or kitchen towel wrung out in hot water. As you make the tortillas, wrap them first in paper towels and then in the napkin and put in the oven. When there are a dozen stacked up, dampen the napkin again, wrap the lot in aluminum foil and keep in the oven until needed. Cold tortillas can be reheated over direct heat, turning them constantly. If they have become dry, pat them with damp hands.

Large tortillas, about 6″ across, are mostly eaten as bread with meat dishes, as are the small 4″ tortillas, which are also used for made-up dishes. Use a ball of masa about the size of a large egg for the 6″ tortillas. To make tiny tortillas for appetizers, use a walnut-sized ball of dough.

Endless variations are played on the tortilla theme. There are the antojos—literally whims, fancies—such as enchiladas, which make robust dishes for lunch or supper. Allow 3–4 tortillas per person according to appetite. Antojitos, little whims or fancies, may take the place of appetizers which do not occur as such in the traditional Mexican kitchen. Tortillas for antojitos should be made half the size of the usual small (4″) tortilla.

Enchiladas Verdes

(Green Enchiladas)

fresh or canned poblano chiles or 6 green bell peppers
10-ounce can Mexican green tomatoes
2–3 sprigs fresh cilantro
1 cup heavy cream
1 egg, lightly beaten
Salt, pepper to taste
3 small chicken breasts, poached, boned, and shredded
1 onion, finely chopped
4 ounces cream cheese
Lard
2 ounces grated Parmesan cheese
24 small tortillas
Lettuce, radishes, chopped onion as garnish

Roast and peel chiles, remove stems, seeds, and veins and cut in strips. Cook in boiling salted water for 5 minutes. Drain. Put chiles in an electric blender with drained green tomatoes, cilantro, and enough of the liquid from the tomatoes to blend to a thick purée. Mix with cream and lightly beaten egg, season with salt and pepper, and set sauce aside. Mix shredded chicken with onion and cream cheese. Season to taste.

Heat about 3 tablespoons lard in skillet. Dip tortillas, one by one, in tomato-chile mixture and fry in lard on both sides until they are limp. As they are fried, stuff each one with the chicken mixture, roll up and place in a fireproof dish. Keep hot in the oven. When tortillas are all used, top with grated cheese. Warm sauce and pour over the tortillas. Garnish with lettuce, radishes, and chopped onion.

Variations:
1) Use cooked, shredded pork loin instead of shredded chicken.
2) Use frijoles refritos covered with hard-cooked, sliced egg and moistened with a little of the dipping sauce as a filling.

Tacos

Tacos are small (4″) tortillas stuffed with various mixtures, rolled, fastened with a toothpick, fried in lard and served with various sauces and chiles on the side, or served unfried so that they can be partly unrolled and filled with extras to individual taste. In the United States the taco is not rolled, but simply folded in half. In Mexico they are always rolled.

For a taco party set out bowls of various sauces, canned chiles, chopped lettuce, fried chopped chorizo (hot Spanish sausage), shredded chicken and pork, guacamole, frijoles refritos or some of the following taco fillings. Serve with hot tortillas to be filled and eaten unfried.

Taco Fillings

1. Tacos de Jamon: Mix together 1 cup chopped boiled ham, 1 tablespoon finely chopped onion, 3½-ounce package mashed cream cheese, 2 medium, peeled, seeded, and chopped tomatoes and chopped canned serrano or jalapeño chile to taste. Stuff 12 small tortillas with the mixture and serve with guacamole.

2. Tacos de Picadillo: Make up a recipe of picadillo (see page 227). Stuff tacos in usual way and serve with guacamole.

3. Tacos de Mole Poblano: Stuff tortillas with leftover mole poblano (see page 228) and serve with guacamole.

4. Tacos de Adobo: Stuff tortillas with leftover adobo (see page 227) and serve with guacamole.

5. Tacos de Frijol: Stuff tacos with frijoles refritos, strips of jalapeño chile, Monterey Jack or similar cheese and serve with guacamole.

Tostadas

Tostadas are tortillas that have been fried until golden brown and crisp in hot lard or oil, then covered with various combinations of meats, poultry, fish, sauces, chiles, etc. For a luncheon dish use the small (4″) tortilla. For appetizers use the half-size (2″) tortilla. Radishes and green olives are a favorite garnish.

Tostada Fillings

(for 12 small or 24 cocktail tostadas)

1. Tostadas Tapatias: Skin, finely chop and fry 3 chorizos. Heat 2 cups frijoles refritos. Spread beans on tostadas, follow with a layer of sausage, a layer of shredded lettuce, a little finely chopped onion, a layer of guacamole, and some grated Parmesan cheese. The lettuce may be seasoned with a little oil and vinegar if you like.

2. Tostadas Compuestas: Cover the tortillas with a thin layer of mashed red kidney beans. Lightly toss 1 head shredded iceberg lettuce and 2 cooked diced potatoes with a little oil and vinegar dressing. Place a layer over the beans, then a layer of shredded cooked white meat of chicken, then a layer of guacamole and grated Parmesan cheese. Place strips of chipotle on the tostadas, or serve chile separately if you prefer, as it is very hot.

Nachos

Peel, seed and chop 1 tomato. Seed and chop two mild, pickled jalapeño chiles. Melt ½ pound coarsely grated Cheddar cheese in the top part of a double boiler. Stir in tomato and chile. Spread mixture on tostadas.

Quesadillas

These turnovers are made with unbaked tortillas stuffed with a variety of fillings, the edges sealed by pinching together, and fried until golden in lard or oil. For a first course use the small (4″) tortilla, for cocktails the half-sized one.

Quesadilla Masa

2 cups masa harina
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons melted butter
1 egg
½ cup (about) milk

Mix the dry ingredients thoroughly, add the melted butter, egg, and enough milk to form a fairly stiff dough. Form into tortillas, and use for quesadillas. Makes 12 small or 24 cocktail-size quesadillas.

Quesadilla Fillings

Leftover picadillo, mole, adobo, beans, sardines, etc., or the following filling may be used.

Relleno de Sesos: Sauté 1 finely chopped onion in 3 tablespoons butter until tender, add 1 set cooked chopped brains, and cook until golden. Add a sprig epazote or a pinch of nutmeg and a little chopped serrano or jalapeño chile. Season with salt and pepper and cook 2 or 3 minutes. Mixture should be quite dry. Use to stuff tortillas. Fold over, seal edges, fry in hot lard or oil, drain on paper towels and serve hot.

Tamales

Tamales, which are made from a more elaborate masa and steamed with or without a filling in dried corn husks, or, in Oaxaca, in banana leaves, are mostly eaten as a meal in themselves. Tamales blancos, the unfilled ones, are eaten as bread with certain dishes such as Mole Poblano; sweet tamales are eaten as a dessert; and half-sized ones can be eaten as appetizers.

Tamales may be filled with a variety of meats and sauces. Mole Poblano made with either turkey or chicken and Adobo Rojo made with pork or chicken are among the most popular fillings. Picadillo also makes an excellent filling. Meat and poultry for tamales should always be boneless and either shredded or cut into small pieces.

Plain Tamales

2 dozen dried corn husks
⅓ cup lard
2 cups masa harina
1½ teaspoons salt
1½ teaspoons baking powder
1½ cups (about) warm stock

Soak the corn husks in hot water until softened. Cream the lard until it is light and fluffy. Mix masa harina with salt and baking powder and beat into lard, bit by bit. Gradually beat in enough stock to make a rather mushy dough. Shake excess water from softened corn husks. Spread 1 tablespoon dough on the center part of the husk, leaving room to fold over ends at top and bottom. Place a tablespoon of filling in center of dough and fold like a jelly-roll so that the filling is completely covered by dough. Fold ends of husks over at top and bottom. Put tamales in a steamer with the bottom end of the corn husk down and steam for about 1 hour, or until the dough comes away from the husk. Sheets of kitchen parchment, about 8″ by 4″, can be substituted for corn husks.

Note: If using an adobo filling, add 1 tablespoon Spice Islands Chile con Carne seasoning powder or Fancy Chili Powder to the masa harina or add 1 ancho or pasilla chile, deseeded and deveined, soaked in hot water and puréed in a blender with ¼ teaspoon each cumin and oregano.

Sauces

Salsa Cruda
(Uncooked Tomato Sauce)

This sauce appears on Mexican tables almost as often as salt and pepper. It is served with meats, poultry, fish, and eggs in tacos and tostadas.

Mix together 2 ripe large tomatoes, peeled and chopped fine; 2 or more canned serrano chiles, chopped; 1 small onion, finely chopped; 1 tablespoon cilantro, chopped; a pinch of sugar, and salt and pepper to taste. Makes about 1 cup.

Guacamole
(Avocado Sauce)

Peel and mash 2 large avocados. Add 1 medium tomato, peeled, seeded, and chopped; 1 tablespoon finely chopped onion; 2 or more canned serrano chiles, chopped; 1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh cilantro; salt and pepper to taste, and a pinch of sugar. Mix well and pile into a serving dish with the avocado pit in the center to keep the guacamole from turning dark. Use either as a sauce or as a salad. Makes about 2 cups.

Guacamole del Norte
(Avocado Sauce, Northern-Style)

Peel and mash 2 large avocados and 6 canned Mexican green tomatoes, drained. Add 1 tablespoon finely chopped onion; 1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh cilantro; 2 or more canned serrano chiles, chopped; and salt and pepper to taste. Mix well and pile into a serving dish with avocado pit in the center. Use as sauce or salad. Makes about 2 cups.

Salsa Verde
(Green Sauce)

Drain liquid from a 10-ounce can of Mexican green tomatoes and mash them with 1 small white onion, finely chopped; 1 clove garlic, chopped; 2 or more canned serrano chiles, chopped; 6 sprigs fresh cilantro, chopped; and salt and pepper to taste. Or mix and whirl for a second or two in an electric blender. Serve like Salsa Cruda. Makes about 1 cup.

Salsa de Chile Rojo
(Red Chile Sauce)

This is the classic Mexican red chile sauce which is used with cooked meats and poultry, enchiladas, tacos, tostadas, etc. It is mild but can be made fiery with the addition of pequin or tepin chiles.

Remove seeds and veins from 4 dried ancho or pasilla chiles and soak for about an hour in 1 cup hot water. Put chiles in a blender with 1 large peeled tomato, 1 large onion, and 1 clove garlic, and blend together, using as much of the water in which chiles have soaked as necessary to make a fairly thick paste. Heat 1 tablespoon olive oil and cook mixture for 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Add 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, salt and pepper to taste, and ½ teaspoon sugar. When cool, add 3 tablespoons olive oil and 1 tablespoon wine vinegar and mix well. If using tepin or pequin chiles, add to the blender with the other ingredients. Makes about 2 cups.

Soups, Dry Soups

Sopa de Avellanas y Espárragos
(Hazelnut and Asparagus Soup)

½ cup hazelnuts
1 tablespoon sweet butter
1 onion, finely chopped
2 ounces boiled ham
5 cups rich chicken stock
¼ cup dry sherry
Salt, pepper to taste
½ cup heavy cream
10-ounce can asparagus tips in 1″ pieces

Soak nuts briefly in hot water and remove skins. Dry, sauté until golden in butter, drain and reserve. Sauté onion until limp in remaining butter, adding a little more if necessary, but do not brown. Put nuts, onion and ham into an electric blender with a little of the stock and blend to a smooth paste. Heat remaining stock, add sherry and nut mixture, stirring to blend well, adjust seasoning and simmer for 10 to 15 minutes. Remove from heat and beat in the cream. Add the asparagus tips. Reheat soup without allowing it to boil. Serves 6.

Sopa de Calabaza
(Zucchini or Summer Squash Soup)

1 large onion, finely chopped
1 pound zucchini or summer squash, roughly chopped
6 cups beef bouillon
Salt, pepper to taste
1 egg yolk
½ cup cream

Cook the onion and zucchini in the stock until tender. Rub vegetables through a sieve, return to stock and adjust seasoning. Keep warm. Beat the egg yolk and cream. Add a little of the soup to the egg mixture, then whisk mixture into soup and heat through without letting it boil. Serves 6.

Sopa Seca de Sesos
(Dry Soup of Brains)

It is usual at the main meal in Mexico to begin with soup followed by a rice, pasta, or tortilla dish known as a Sopa Seca or dry soup. No one knows why. As both rice and pasta were new to the Aztecs, the term probably came into use when they saw that the Spaniards used rice and pasta in soup as well as in other, less watery, dishes.

2 sets calf's brains
Salad oil or lard
1 large onion, finely chopped
1 clove garlic, chopped
1 pound tomatoes, peeled, seeded, and mashed
4 canned chopped serrano chiles, or to taste
Salt, pepper to taste
Pinch sugar
8 leaves dried or fresh epazote (if available)
18 small day-old tortillas
½ pint heavy cream
1 ounce grated Parmesan cheese

Remove the membrane enveloping the brains and soak them in cold water until quite white. Put the brains into a saucepan with enough boiling court bouillon or water to cover, skim and cook gently for ½ hour. Cool in cooking water. Remove, drain well and chop coarsely. Reserve.

Heat 3 tablespoons oil or lard in a skillet and fry the onion and garlic until the onion is [illegible]. Add tomatoes, chiles, salt, pepper, sugar and epazote—crumbled if dried, chopped if fresh. Cook until sauce is smooth and well blended. Reserve a quarter of sauce. Mix brains into rest of sauce. With kitchen shears cut the tortillas into strips about ½″ to 1″ wide. Heat 6 tablespoons lard or oil in a skillet and fry tortillas on both sides for a few minutes without browning. Drain on paper towels.

Grease a casserole and put a little sauce on the bottom. Follow this with alternate layers of tortillas, cream, and brains in sauce. Continue until all ingredients are used, ending with tortillas and cream. Pour over reserved sauce and sprinkle with cheese. Bake in a 350° oven for 15 minutes, or until heated through. Serves 6.

Arroz a la Mexicana

Mexican Rice

1 tablespoons olive or salad oil
Salt, pepper to taste
Fresh red peppers, cut into rings
Fresh cilantro
1 large avocado, peeled and sliced

Cover rice with hot water and let stand for 15 minutes. Drain and rinse in cold water until final water is clear. Drain and dry. Put onion and garlic in an electric blender with a little stock or water and blend smooth. Heat oil in a skillet and sauté rice until it is golden. Transfer rice to a saucepan, add onion, garlic, tomato, stock, salt and pepper. Bring to a boil, cover, lower heat and cook until rice is almost done. Fold in the peas and continue cooking until rice is tender and all liquid absorbed. Serve garnished with peppers, sprigs of cilantro, and slices of avocado. Serves 6.

Chiles en Nogada

(Chiles in Walnut Sauce)

This is a famous dish from Puebla, where it is served on St. Augustine's Day, August 28. It is also a popular dish throughout the Republic on September 15, Mexico's Independence Day, since the colors are those of the Mexican flag: red, white, and green.

6 large poblano chiles or bell peppers
½ recipe cooked picadillo (see page 225)
4 ounces peeled walnuts, chopped very fine
2 ounces peeled almonds, chopped very fine
3 ounces cream cheese
1 cup milk
Sugar and cinnamon to taste (optional)
1 pomegranate

To prepare chiles for stuffing, hold on a fork over a gas flame or electric burner until the skin blisters. Wrap in a damp cloth and leave for ½ hour, when the thin papery skin will easily peel off. Poblanos should be slit lengthwise with the stems, seeds, and veins removed. With bell peppers it is better to cut off the stem and remove the seeds and replace it as a sort of lid. Poblanos can be secured with toothpicks although [illegible] each they are fried usually stay closed effectively. If poblanos are very picante, soak for 1 hr. in 1 tablespoon salt to 1 quart water for 5 minutes, drain and cool. They are now ready to use.

Stuff chiles with picadillo, fasten with toothpicks if necessary, and arrange on serving platter. Mash nuts into cream cheese, thinning with milk to make a thick sauce. Add sugar and cinnamon if desired. Pour over chiles and decorate with pomegranate seeds. If you wish to serve hot, separate the whites from the yolks of 2 eggs. Beat whites until stiff and fold in beaten yolks. Dust stuffed chiles with flour, dip in egg and fry in deep fat. Arrange on platter, pour nut sauce over them and decorate with pomegranate seeds. Serves 6.

Frijoles

(Beans)

2 cups pinto, black, or red kidney beans
2 onions, finely chopped
2 cloves garlic, chopped
Sprig epazote or 1 bay leaf
2 or more serrano chiles, chopped, or 1 teaspoon dried pequin chiles, crumbled
3 tablespoons lard
Salt, pepper to taste
1 tomato, peeled, seeded, and chopped

Wash beans, but do not soak. Put in cold water to cover with half of the chopped onion and garlic, the epazote or bay leaf, and chiles. Cover and simmer gently, adding more water, always hot, as needed. When beans begin to wrinkle, add 1 tablespoon lard or oil. When beans are soft, almost done, add seasonings. Cook another half hour without adding more water; there should not be a great deal of liquid when beans are done. Heat the remaining 2 tablespoons lard and sauté the remaining chopped onion and garlic until limp. Add tomato and cook for 1–2 minutes, then add a tablespoon of beans and mash into the mixture, add a second tablespoon of beans without draining them so that some of the bean liquid evaporates in this cooking process. Add a third tablespoon of beans and continue to cook until you have a smooth, fairly heavy paste. Return this to the bean pot and stir into beans over low heat to thicken the remaining liquid. Serves 6–8.

Frijoles Refritos

(Fried Beans)

Cook beans as above, but when mashing them, keep adding beans until all have been mashed into lard over low heat. Add lard from time to time and cook until beans are creamy and have become a heavy, quite dry paste. You may cheat a little by using the blender to purée beans, adding them to the skillet bit by bit, and frying them dry in the hot lard.

Eggs

Huevos Rancheros

(Eggs, Ranch-Style)

1 large onion, finely chopped
1 clove garlic, chopped
1 pound tomatoes, peeled and chopped
Salt, pepper to taste
½ teaspoon sugar
¼ teaspoon oregano
3 or more canned serrano chiles, chopped
12 tortillas
12 eggs
Cooked black beans or frijoles refritos, heated

Heat 2 tablespoons lard in a skillet and fry onion and garlic until limp. Add tomatoes, salt, pepper, sugar, oregano, and chiles. Simmer this sauce gently for about 15 minutes. Heat 3 tablespoons lard in a skillet and fry the tortillas on both sides until limp or, if preferred, until quite crisp. Place 2 tortillas side by side on each plate and keep warm. Fry eggs in lard, or butter if preferred. Slide an egg onto each tortilla. Pour sauce over eggs and serve with a couple of tablespoons of hot beans or frijoles refritos on the side. Serves 6.

Huevos con Nopales

(Eggs with Cactus Leaves)

8-ounce can nopalitos
(tender, young cactus leaves)
3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons heavy cream
6 eggs, lightly beaten
Salt, pepper to taste

Rinse cactus pieces well with cold water and drain thoroughly. Heat butter in a skillet and sauté the cactus lightly. Add heavy cream to eggs and season with salt. Scramble eggs into the cactus. Season the scrambled-egg mixture with freshly ground pepper. Serves 6.

Huevos en Rabo de Mestiza

2 poblano chiles or green bell peppers
4 tablespoons olive oil
1 onion, finely chopped
1½ pounds tomatoes, peeled, seeded, and mashed
Salt, freshly ground pepper to taste
½ teaspoon sugar
6 ounces Monterey Jack, Cheddar, or similar cheese
6 eggs

Roast peppers over gas flame or electric burner, wrap in a damp cloth for ½ hour, peel, remove stems, seeds, and veins, and cut into strips. Heat the oil in a skillet and sauté the peppers, being careful not to let them brown. Add onion and continue cooking until it is transparent. Add tomatoes, salt, pepper, and sugar. When the tomatoes have cooked down, lay slices of cheese on top and continue cooking for a few minutes. Slide eggs on top of sauce and cheese, cover and cook for a few minutes, then turn off heat and let stand until white is cooked. Serves 6.

Variation: In San Luis Potosí the rabo is made with hard-cooked eggs, and heavy cream is poured over the dish while the egg halves warm in the sauce.

Main Dishes

Pescado Yucateco
(Fish, Yucatan-style)

1 whole fish, such as pompano or snapper
Juice of 1 lemon
Salt, pepper to taste
4 tablespoons olive oil
1 onion, finely chopped
3 ounces green olives, chopped
1-ounce can pimiento, chopped, with juice
1 teaspoon annatto (achiote)
2 tablespoons fresh cilantro, chopped, or 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
Juice of 1 orange
2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped

Marinate fish for 15 minutes in lemon juice, salt, and pepper. Heat olive oil in a skillet and sauté onion until limp. Add olives, pimiento, and juice, achiote, cilantro, salt, and pepper. Cook for a few minutes and add orange juice. Put fish in buttered casserole, cover with sauce and cook in a 400° oven for ½ hour or until tender. Serves 6.

Pescado en Salsa de Avellanas
(Fish in Hazelnut Sauce)

3 pounds fillets of any non-oily white fish
2 cups white wine court bouillon
3 ounces hazelnuts
3 tablespoons olive oil
1 slice thin white bread
1 clove garlic
1 bunch parsley
1 teaspoon powdered saffron

Par-cook fish in the court bouillon. Soak hazelnuts in hot water for a few minutes and remove skins. Heat olive oil in a skillet and fry the bread with the garlic, being careful not to let the garlic burn. Put the bread, garlic, hazelnuts, parsley, and liquid from the poached fish in an electric blender. Blend to a smooth, medium-thick sauce. Add saffron and adjust seasoning. Put fish in a shallow casserole and cover with the sauce. Heat gently to finish cooking fish. Serves 6.

Pipián de Camarones
(Shrimp Fricassee)

2 pounds large shrimp
½ cup Mexican pepitas (pumpkin seeds)
1 small onion
2 cloves garlic
6 sprigs fresh cilantro
½ pound tomatoes, peeled and seeded
6 pequin chiles (Spice Islands) or to taste
3 whole canned pimientos
½ tablespoon ground coriander seeds
Salt, pepper to taste
½ teaspoon sugar
3 tablespoons salad oil
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Cook shrimp for 5 minutes in boiling water, cool and peel; reserve water. Put pepitas in an electric blender and blend as fine as possible. Reserve. Put onion, garlic, fresh cilantro, tomatoes, pequin chiles and pimiento in blender. Blend to a smooth sauce. Add ground coriander, salt, pepper, sugar, and pepitas. Heat oil in a skillet and cook mixture for 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Thin with about 1 cup of the reserved shrimp water to make a thick sauce. Add shrimp and heat, stirring without letting sauce come to a boil. At last minute, add lemon juice. Serves 6.

Adobo Rojo de Lomo de Cerdo
(Red Adobo of Pork Loin)

3 pounds boneless pork loin cut in 2" chunks
1 whole onion stuck with 1 clove
6 dried ancho chiles
1 onion
1 clove garlic
½ teaspoon oregano
½ teaspoon cumin
Salt, pepper to taste
½ teaspoon sugar
½ pound tomatoes, peeled
2 tablespoons lard

Put pork in salted water to barely cover with onion stuck with a clove and cook until tender, about 2 hours. Pour off stock and reserve. Discard onion. Meanwhile, remove stems, seeds, and veins from dried chiles and soak them in 1 cup hot water for 1 hour. Put chiles in a blender with onion, garlic, oregano, cumin, salt, pepper, sugar, and a little of the pork stock. Blend until smooth, add tomatoes and blend a second or two longer. Heat lard in a skillet and add the chile mixture. Cook for 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Thin with about 1 cup pork stock, add to meat. Cook, uncovered, over low heat until very thick. Serves 6.

Picadillo

This dish, with variations, occurs throughout Latin America. Mexico has two versions—this and Picadillo de la Costa, which includes tropical fruits.

Olive oil
2 pounds lean chopped beef
2 onions, finely chopped
1 clove garlic, crushed
2 apples, peeled, cored, and chopped
1 pound tomatoes, peeled, seeded, and chopped
3 canned jalapeño chiles, sliced
½ cup raisins
1 ounce pimiento-stuffed green olives, cut in half
Pinch each: ground cinnamon and clove or, if preferred, thyme and oregano
Salt, pepper
2 ounces slivered almonds

Heat 4 tablespoons olive oil in a large, heavy skillet and brown meat. Add onion and garlic and brown. Add apples, tomatoes, chiles, raisins, olives, clove, cinnamon, salt and pepper. Simmer gently, uncovered, until cooked, about 20 minutes. Fry almonds until golden in a little oil and add. Cook a minute or two longer. Serves 6.

Pipián Rojo de Ajonjolí
(Red Chicken Fricassee with Sesame Seeds)

This dish is probably very little changed from the early days of the Conquest when, in 1529, Fr. Bernadino de Sahagun pursued his researches into the "things of New Spain" by sampling the savory stews that were sold in the market from big earthenware pots.

3½–4-pound fryer, cut in serving pieces
2 cups stock or water
6 dried ancho chiles
1 cup sesame seeds
1 large onion
1 or 2 cloves garlic
1 sprig epazote
⅛ teaspoon each: cloves and cinnamon
4 tomatoes, peeled
2 tablespoons lard
Salt, pepper to taste
Pinch sugar

Poach chicken in stock or water until almost done. Set aside and keep warm. Remove stems, seeds, and veins from chiles and soak in 1 cup of water for about 1 hour. Put sesame seeds in blender and blend until they are as fine as possible. Remove. Put in blender onion, garlic, epazote, chiles, cloves, and cinnamon, and blend until smooth. Add tomatoes and blend for a second or two longer. Heat lard in a skillet and add sesame seeds. Cook, stirring, for a minute or two, then add mixture from blender and cook, still stirring, for 5 minutes. Add salt, pepper, and sugar. Gradually add chicken stock until the sauce is of medium-thick consistency. Pour sauce over chicken and cook, stirring from time to time, for about 5 minutes. Serves 6.

Tapado de Cerdo
(Smothered Pork)

3 pounds boneless pork loin cut in 2" chunks
6 dried pasilla chiles
3 cloves garlic
4 tablespoons lard
1 large onion, finely chopped
3 large tomatoes, peeled, seeded, and chopped
10-ounce can Mexican green tomatoes
Salt, pepper to taste
3 chorizos (Spanish sausages)
4 ounces boiled ham, chopped
1 ounce slivered almonds
2 ounces pimiento-stuffed green olives
½ cup dry sherry

Cook pork in salted water to barely cover until tender, about 2 hours. Pour off stock and reserve. Meanwhile, remove stems, seeds, and veins from dried chiles and soak them in 1 cup of hot water for an hour. Put chiles in blender with garlic and enough of the water in which they soaked to form a thick paste when blended. Heat 2 tablespoons lard in a skillet and fry paste for 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Cool and mix with pork. Put into heavy saucepan or casserole. Heat remaining lard in skillet and fry onion until transparent but not brown, add tomatoes and drained green tomatoes, reserving liquid. Cook until sauce is smooth and thick, adding liquid from tomatoes as necessary. Season with salt and pepper and set aside. Skin chorizos, cut in slices and fry in a very little fat. Drain and cover pork with a layer of chorizo followed by a layer of ham, almonds, and olives. Pour sauce over all and then pour on sherry. Cook, covered, over low heat until thoroughly heated through, shaking from time to time to prevent burning. Or, cook in a 350° oven for ½ hour. Serves 6.

Ternera en Salsa Verde

(Veal in Green Sauce)

3 pounds boneless veal in 2" pieces
1 large onion
1 clove garlic
1–3 jalapeño chiles, or to taste
10-ounce can Mexican green tomatoes
6 sprigs fresh cilantro
½ cup blanched almonds
6 medium-size leaves romaine lettuce
3 tablespoons butter
Salt, pepper to taste

Cook veal in salted water to barely cover until tender, 1½–2 hours. Drain, reserving stock. Put onion, garlic, chiles, drained tomatoes, cilantro, almonds, and lettuce in an electric blender with some of the liquid from the tomatoes and blend until smooth. Heat butter in a skillet and cook mixture for 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Dilute sauce with the rest of the tomato liquid and veal stock, about 2 cups. Correct seasoning. Pour sauce over veal and warm through, but do not let sauce boil. The sauce should be as thick as heavy cream. Serves 6.

Mole Poblano de Guajalote

(Turkey Mole in Puebla Style)

3-pound turkey, cut in serving pieces
4 tablespoons lard
6 ancho chiles
4 pasilla chiles
4 mulato chiles
2 onions
4 cloves garlic
4 ounces blanched almonds
½ cup raisins
½ teaspoon each, ground: clove, cinnamon, coriander seeds
½ teaspoon anise, optional
4 tablespoons sesame seeds
1 sprig fresh cilantro
1 tortilla or 1 slice toast
1 pound tomatoes, peeled, and seeded
2 ounces (2 squares) chocolate
Salt, pepper to taste

Cook turkey in salted water to barely cover for 1 hour. Drain, reserving 2 cups stock. Heat lard in skillet and brown turkey. Transfer turkey to casserole. Soak chiles, remove stems, seeds, and veins. Soak in 2 cups hot water for 1 hour. In the skillet put onions, garlic, almonds, raisins, clove, cinnamon, coriander, anise (if desired), half the sesame seeds, cilantro, tortilla or toast, chiles and the water in which they have soaked, and the tomatoes. Blend to a fairly coarse mixture. This will be too much for the blender at one time, so blend it bit by bit.

Heat lard remaining in skillet, adding a little more if necessary to bring it up to 3 tablespoons, and cook blended mixture for 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Thin mixture with 2 cups turkey broth and add chocolate, salt, and pepper. Cook over low heat to melt chocolate. Sauce should be quite thick. If too thick, use more turkey stock or water to thin. Pour sauce over turkey in casserole and cook over the lowest possible heat for ½ hour. Sprinkle with remaining 2 tablespoons sesame seeds when served. Serves 6–8.

Note: This mole can also be made with chicken or pork. If the 3 types of chile are not available, use all ancho or pasilla.

Pollo Almendrado Verde

(Green Chicken with Almonds)

4 tablespoons olive oil and butter (2 of each)
3½–4-pound fryer, cut in serving pieces
1 large onion, finely chopped
1 clove garlic, chopped
1 cup chicken broth
½ cup orange juice
½ cup dry sherry
Salt, pepper to taste
1 cup blanched almonds
10-ounce can Mexican green tomatoes
½ cup coarsely chopped cilantro

Heat oil and butter in a skillet and sauté chicken pieces until golden. Remove to a lidded casserole. Sauté onion and garlic until limp in oil and butter that remains in pan. Add to casserole with chicken broth, orange juice, dry sherry, salt and pepper, and cook over very low heat, covered, until chicken is tender, about 1 hour. Put almonds in blender and blend very fine. Drain green tomatoes, reserving liquid from can. Add tomatoes and cilantro to almonds and blend for a few seconds longer. Add to casserole and cook for 5 minutes, or until sauce is thickened. Sauce should be of medium consistency; if it needs thinning, use liquid from canned tomatoes. Serves 6.

Tapado de Pollo

(Smothered Chicken)

6 tablespoons olive oil
3½–4-pound fryer, cut in serving pieces
1 large onion, sliced
2 cloves garlic, chopped
3 large tomatoes, peeled and sliced
½ pound baby peas
1 pound zucchini or summer squash, sliced
2 cooked apples, peeled and sliced
2 pears, peeled and sliced
4 slices pineapple, cut in chunks
2 large or 4 small bananas, peeled and sliced
Salt, pepper to taste

Heat 4 tablespoons olive oil in a skillet and sauté chicken pieces until golden. Place a layer of half the chicken pieces in a heavy lidded casserole and follow with layers of half the onion, garlic, tomatoes, peas, zucchini, apples, pears, pineapple, and bananas. Season with salt and pepper and sprinkle with 1 tablespoon oil. Repeat with remaining chicken, vegetables, and fruit. Season with salt and pepper and sprinkle with remaining oil. Cover and cook on top of the stove on low heat until chicken is tender, about 1½ hours. The amount of gravy will depend on the ripeness of fruit and vegetables. Serves 6.

Desserts

Budín de Piña

(Pineapple Pudding)

1 pound finely chopped fresh pineapple
4 ounces ground almonds
4 egg yolks, lightly beaten
½ to 1 cup sugar, depending on sweetness of pineapple
½ cup dry sherry
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
12 lady fingers
Apricot jam
Sour cream
1 ounce slivered almonds

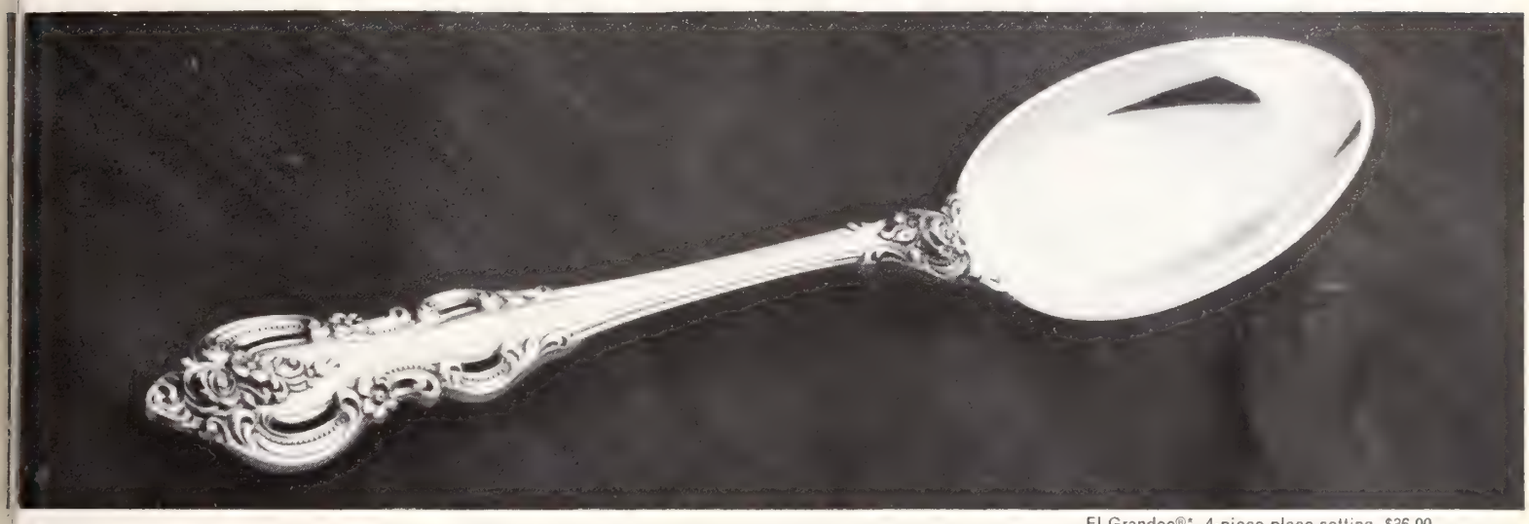
Mix pineapple, ground almonds, egg yolks, sugar, half the sherry, and cinnamon. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until thickened. Cool. Split the lady fingers and spread with a thin layer of apricot jam. Place half the lady fingers in the bottom of a serving dish. Sprinkle with half the remaining sherry. Spread with half the pineapple mixture. Add second layer of lady fingers, the rest of the sherry, and the remaining pineapple mixture. Chill, spread with a layer of sour cream, and stick with slivered almonds. Serves 6–8.

Tamales de Dulce

(Sweet Tamales)

Make tamales in usual way, adding ½ to 1 cup of sugar, according to taste, to 2 cups masa. Spread sweet masa on corn husks and put about a tablespoon of mixed raisins, slivered almonds, and chopped citron in the center of the masa. Roll up and steam in the usual way. Sweet tamales may also be filled with candied fruits, strawberry preserves and so on.

Buñuelos



2 eggs
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
2 tablespoons sugar
4 cups flour
¼ cup melted butter
Sugar and cinnamon or ground cloves

Beat eggs thoroughly. Whisk milk into eggs. Sift dry ingredients and add gradually to the egg-milk mixture, then add melted butter. Turn on to a lightly floured board and knead very gently until the dough is smooth. Roll out as thin as possible and cut into 2"–3" squares, or circles the size of small or large tortillas. Fry in very hot deep fat or oil (370°) until delicately browned, turning as the first side puffs up. Roll in sugar and cinnamon, or in sugar and ground cloves, and serve as a cookie. Makes about 40 3" squares.

MEXICAN DRINKS continued from page 218

Margarita

2 ounces tequila
½ ounce Cointreau
Juice of ½ lime
Salt

Rub the rim of a cocktail glass with the rind of a lime, then spin it in a plate of salt. Pour tequila, Cointreau, and lime juice over ice in a bar glass, stir until well chilled, and strain into the prepared glass. (Today, Cointreau is being made under license in Mexico, but when this cocktail first appeared, the Mexican imitation, called "Controy," was used. Margaritas are better today.) If you find this recipe is not sweet enough for you, simply increase the amount of Cointreau; if too sweet, decrease it.

Tequila Sour

3 ounces tequila
Juice of ½ lemon
1 teaspoon sugar
Dash of Angostura bitters
Club soda

Shake the first four ingredients well with cracked ice, pour into a sour glass, and add a splash of club soda. Decorate with fruit if you must. The quantities of lemon juice and sugar may be juggled to suit your taste, but it should definitely be on the sour side.

Tequila Sunrise

2 ounces tequila
3 dashes grenadine
Juice and peel of ½ lime
½ teaspoon crème de cassis
Club soda

Put first four ingredients into a sour or highball glass with several ice cubes. Add club soda to fill and stir very briefly. This used to be a great favorite in Aguascalientes during Prohibition, when that town was a popular sluicing rendezvous for thirsty Southern Californians.

Tequila Daisy

4 ounces tequila
1 ounce lemon juice
1 ounce grenadine
1 ounce club soda

Shake all ingredients well with cracked ice and strain into two chilled cocktail glasses. Pink, pretty, and delicious.

Taxco Fizz

2 ounces tequila
Juice of ½ lime
½ teaspoon sugar
2 dashes orange bitters
Club soda

Stir first four ingredients in a Collins glass with plenty of cracked ice, then fill with club soda. Drop in half of the lime shell as a garnish. (Close your eyes as you sip, and imagine that you are sitting on the balcony of Bertita's bar, across from the cathedral in Taxco.) Another way of making this is to add an egg white, shake all ingredients vigorously, strain into a Collins glass over ice cubes, and fill with club soda.

Tequila Cocktail

2 ounces tequila
1 ounce dry vermouth
Few drops vanilla extract

Stir with ice and strain into a chilled cocktail glass. As you can see, except for the vanilla this is pretty much like a tequila Martini ("Tequini"). As a matter of fact, tequila is a fine substitute for gin in many drinks. Its slightly peppery quality is a most welcome change. Try your favorite Martini formula using tequila—you will like it and so will your guests.

Tequila also makes a fine apéritif. Keep a bottle in the freezer or the freezing compartment of the refrigerator. To serve, simply pour the super-cold liquor into pre-chilled shot glasses or liqueur glasses.

And here are a pair of after-dinner tequila drinks:

Piña Borracha

Soak slices or chunks of ripe fresh pineapple in tequila for at least 24 hours in the refrigerator. Drain off the liquid and drink as a liqueur.

Por Mi Amante

Wash and stem 2 baskets of ripe strawberries. Cut them in halves. Put them into Mason jars and pour in tequila to come to the top, then seal tightly and keep in the refrigerator for at least three weeks. Drain off the beautiful deep pink liquid and serve cold. Keep whatever you have left in the refrigerator, as it loses its color when exposed to the light and heat. This is truly a nectar "for my beloved."

To demonstrate the versatility of this bottled sunshine, we include a recipe for:

Aztec Punch

1 gallon tequila
Juice of 12 lemons
Sugar to taste
4 cans (46-ounce size) grapefruit juice
2 quarts strong cold black tea
1½ teaspoons ground cinnamon

Mix all ingredients together and let stand for an hour or two to blend. Pour over a block of ice in a punch bowl. This makes a little over 3 gallons—120 punch cups.

Rum

Rum is drunk in all the usual mixtures—Planter's Punch, Collins, Daiquiri, and so on—as well as neat. However, here are a few Mexican rum drinks that are a little out of the ordinary.

Mexicano Cocktail

2 ounces light rum
½ ounce kümmel
½ ounce orange juice
Dash of bitters

Shake well with cracked ice and strain into a chilled cocktail glass.

Coctel Veracruzana

1 jigger dark rum
1 jigger French (dry) vermouth
1 jigger pineapple juice

Shake well with cracked ice and strain into a chilled cocktail glass.

Pancho Villa Cocktail

1 ounce light rum
1 ounce apricot brandy
1 ounce dry gin
1 teaspoon pineapple juice
1 teaspoon cherry brandy

Shake well with shaved ice and serve in a champagne glass. This drink has quite a little authority, but it's a very pleasant combination of flavors.

Rompope (or Ronpope)

This curious Mexican drink is a sort of eggnog, cooked so that it keeps indefinitely. Although it is made commercially and sold in liquor stores, many people make it at home. Most recipes call for pure alcohol, which is obtainable in Mexico at a low price, but rum may be used advantageously.

1 quart milk
½ pound sugar
1 vanilla bean
8 egg yolks
1 pint light rum

Bring the milk to a boil; let it cool, add the sugar and vanilla bean, return to the fire and let simmer for 20 minutes. Beat the egg yolks long and hard (in Mexico there is a wooden paddle made just for this purpose, but a modern egg beater does very well). Let the milk-sugar mixture cool, remove the vanilla bean, then little by little beat it and the rum into the egg yolks. Let the mixture sit overnight, then put into a bottle and cork tightly. It should be kept for several days before drinking. Serve in small liqueur glasses.

Kahlúa

In Mexico just about every kind of liqueur known to man is reproduced and put into bottles similar to those in which the original liqueurs are sold. A number of the well-known liqueur producers, in self-defense, have established plants in Mexico where the genuine article is made from the original formula. Of the native liqueurs, by far the most notable is Kahlúa, which is the foremost of coffee-based cordials. Although rather sweet and heavy, its flavor is rich and good. Besides being a fine after-dinner drink, it mixes well for a cocktail, and is a superb sauce for coffee or chocolate ice cream.

Black Russian

1 part Kahlúa
2 parts vodka (or more)

Stir with ice until well chilled and strain into a cocktail glass. Or pour ingredients over ice in an Old-fashioned glass, stir and serve on the rocks. Or to serve as a frappé, pack shaved ice into a large cocktail glass or wineglass, and pour the Kahlúa and vodka in slowly.

Picador Cocktail

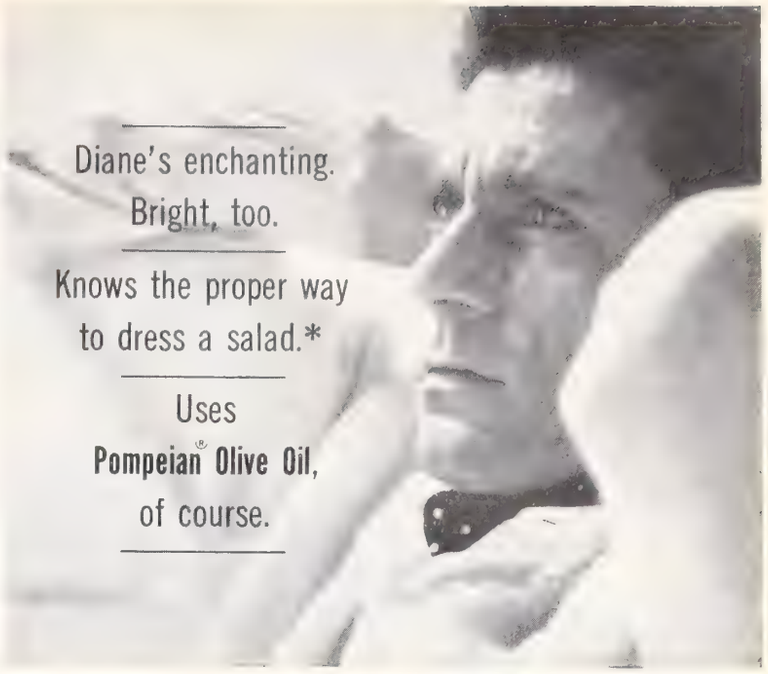
1 part Kahlúa
2 parts tequila

Stir well with cracked ice, strain into a cocktail glass and serve with a twist of lemon.

Kahlúa Toreador

1 part Kahlúa
2 parts brandy
1 egg white

Shake vigorously with cracked ice (or whirl in the blender) and strain into a cocktail glass.



Mexican Grasshopper

1 part Kahlúa
1 part green crème de menthe
1 part cream

Whirl in the blender with crushed ice and serve in a cocktail glass.

Xochimilco

Simply pour Kahlúa into a cordial glass and float a thin layer of cream on top. A wonderful after-dinner libation.

Timeless Traditions for Windows

The patterned window shade

When you visit the Farmer's Museum at Cooperstown, N. Y., Old Sturbridge Village at Sturbridge, Mass., and other restorations from the early nineteenth century, you may be surprised to discover that the early window shade was no mundane room-darkener but an important decorative device that often took the place of curtains. Made of muslin, cambric, or paper, window shades were sometimes painted with rural scenes, seascapes, or even portraits of famous men, sometimes stenciled or block-printed with flowers and other pretty motifs. This engaging tradition for windows is now having a revival. Today you can get striped and patterned shades, shades in a range of decorative textures—shantung, homespun, bouclé, moire. Or you can have almost any fabric you are fond of—perhaps the same one that covers the walls or the furniture—laminated to cloth shades.

Nineteenth-century shade replaced a view

In the "Stenciled Alcove" of the Village Tavern at Old Sturbridge Village, a light cambric shade, circa 1820, unfurls to show a hand-painted New England scene. Hand-stenciled patterns of the period embellish the walls and some of the furniture, and stand in lieu of carpeting on the floor.

A modern version of the stenciled shade

A flower motif hand-stenciled in tones of yellow and blue on a plain white shade is repeated as a decorative frame for the window, and again as a dado on the wall in a tiny dining area. This is an ingenious way to give a small room a strong decorative motif that will not overpower the space. "Regalite" shade by Joanna Western Mills.

Patterned shades suggest old wall hangings

Floor-length shades screen-printed with an eighteenth-century design in black and white give extra height to ordinary, double-hung windows in a dining room. To emphasize the illusion: floor-to-ceiling wood window frames painted white, trimmed with black and white braid. Shades: "Roman Lamp" by Joanna Western Mills. Conso braid.

Printed shade to match the wallpaper

Matching window shade and wallpaper maintain the flow of pattern around one end of a living room. The shade, printed in red and black on mustard in a pattern called "Persano," is from a new collection of vinyl-impregnated cloth shades specially printed in vinyl inks to match designs of wallpapers or upholstery fabrics. By Howard & Schaffer.

Stripes disguise a room-darkener shade

Slim alternating stripes of orange and beige give a gay, crisp look to a new room-darkener shade. Extra yardage of the vinyl-coated shade cloth covers the tall screens that frame the window. Trimmings: orange braid by Conso. "Carousel Stripe" window shades are by Breneman-Hartshorn.

For additional information on any of these shades, write to Window Shade Manufacturers Association, 341 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y., 10017.

All around us we saw demonstrations of the many uses of this versatile garment: to carry the baby or the groceries, to serve as a shawl or a magnificent turban. As interesting and colorful as anything we saw in the market was the dress of the Tarascan women: a bright-hued rayon blouse, twenty pounds of red wool homespun pleated across the back into a voluminous skirt, and red beads, from which hang a silver cross (the design reveals the wearer's village) or a fish, a pervasive Tarascan motif.

Before buying any folk art, we made a point of visiting the Pátzcuaro Popular Arts and Crafts Museum, a block east of the main plaza, to become acquainted with the local crafts. Although many of the articles shown are no longer made, we were able to judge on our subsequent shopping tours what things were really Mexican in spirit, as distinct from those contrived for the tourist. The museum, housed in a colonial building, forms a delightful setting for its treasures. We noticed the striking use of inlaid cattle joint bones as a decorative element in the stone floors, the hollowed-out bond beams over the recessed doors, and the chip-carved cupboards for pottery. Under the direction of Señora Maria Teresa Davalos de Luft, who is also responsible for Morelia's Casa de las Artesanias, the museum has helped to renew the Tarascan's interest in his own arts. One whole room is devoted to the highly developed craft of tule weaving. A new form in which the pieces are flat makes a stunning mural treatment. Another room displays antique pottery from nearby villages; some of the old designs, such as that on the black pottery from Santa Fé de la Laguna, were so direct and marvelous we wished they could be revived.

A highlight of the museum is a faithful reproduction of an old colonial kitchen. A freestanding adobe island counter is inset with alcoves all around for charcoal cooking in great pots. In a corner is a beehive oven that turned out only tortillas. Chip-carved wooden shelves, suspended by ropes, hold food and pots.

But it was in the garden that we found the object that started us on a new train of thought about the Tarascan and gave impetus and excitement to the rest of our exploration. This was an ancient nailless wooden Tarascan house, called a troje, that with its pitched shingle roof might have come from Japan. If something so oriental was representative of the pre-Hispanic Tarascan, then we had to look at these people, their arts, and their way of life in a different light.

So on our second visit to Pátzcuaro we paid more attention to the countryside, the shops, and the historic landmarks along the way. The little clusters of self-sufficient farmhouses we passed every so often might also have been Japanese if their tile roofs had been charcoal instead of terra cotta. They seemed so well attuned to their sites they might have grown right out of the soil. The streets of the first village we came to, Quiroga, were lined with tourist shops, so we kept on until we reached Tzintzuntzan, ancient capital of the Tarascan Empire. The name means, and sounds like, hummingbird. Now it is just a village, but we found the roadside stands a good place to buy tule articles, pottery, and the lovely wheat ornaments the Tarascan fashions and offers on his home altar for a good crop (we used eight of them to make a Christmas wreath for our home). Our favorite vendor, Consuela, who owns the last stall on the right, has Tzintzuntzan pottery with black on brown designs on a cream background, or the reverse colors, the motifs drawn from Tarascan life. The Patamban ware she sells, dark brown with a fresh green design, to my mind is the handsomest folk pottery in the world. (When buying casseroles with covers, it is advisable to try several lids and find the one that fits tightest.)

The third day we took the trip around Lake Pátzcuaro, which is thirteen miles long and thirty around. The only way to see this lake is to hire a boat by arrangement with the captain of the port in Pátzcuaro and take along a guide-interpreter (the best is Señor Rafael Calderon Aleman, who can be reached through any of the hotels in Morelia). The lake is idyllic. Five small islands punctuate the surface, and fifteen villages dot its sinuous shore. Looking back at Pátzcuaro climbing the hillside, with its curious overhanging roofs, we agreed with James Norman in his Terry's Guide to Mexico that the scene needed only a torii to fit into a Japanese lakescape.

The main island, Janitzio, is craggy and steep, with bright-hued houses literally clinging to the slopes, whitewashed stone walls and fishing nets draped in the sun to dry. The view from the head of the statue of the patriot Morelos that crowns the island is worth the climb, although the statue itself is squat and ungainly (the result, so the story goes, of the money running out before the original design was completed).

Among the shore villages, Espiritu is notable for the little church wedged between huge boulders, and Erongaricuaro for weaving and its Sunday barter market.

Ever since we saw the "Japanese" Tarascan house, we had been determined to penetrate deeper into the mountain village region by making a side trip to Uruapan. The road route took us through Mexico's Switzerland—Alpine country where the air is nippy—and forest country where the air is heady with pine scent. Sure enough, in the mountain villages of Chèran and Arantzan above Valle Guyangareo we were amazed at the similarity they showed to a Japanese village in form and mood. There were even gate-houses like those in Japan.

From the mountain villages, the road descends steeply into Uruapan, gateway to the "hot country" of Michoacán. Where Morelia is distinguished, even aristocratic, Uruapan is merely pleasant. Warm and tropical, it is a town of luxuriant gardens and few tourists.

The city's chief monument is a gem of a sixteenth-century hospital and chapel called La Guatapera that houses an exceptionally good regional museum. Most of the crafts are displayed in one of those rare large rooms that is so pleasingly proportioned it gives you a sense of well being. There is also a good display of antique lacquer and traditional paper cutouts and, in a separate room, a reproduction of an early Mexican kitchen.

We ate our box lunch in a pavilion beside a foaming stream called Cupatitzio (singing river) in the Parque Nacional Eduardo Ruiz at the edge of town. This lush, tropical wood has pleasant shady walks along leafy banks. At the entrance to the park is a municipal museum that displays and sells the regional crafts of lacquer and wood carving. We bought a dozen-and-a-half semi-realistic lacquer vegetables we had not seen elsewhere. Assembled in a shallow, red and green, octagonal, lacquer bowl from Pátzcuaro they make a striking dining-table centerpiece.

Later, we drove to Angahuan, a small isolated village north of Uruapan, to see the stone façade of the village church, a fine specimen of sixteenth-century Plateresque art with a strong Tarascan influence. Rugged travelers can take a trip on horseback from here to the now quiet twenty-year-old volcano of Paricutin, but we were content to go back to Morelia.

Two new ways to store your table linens

Even with plenty of space for storing table linens, who hasn't been caught at least once at an awkward moment with a crumpled cloth and a bent-eared napkin or two? To put an end to such dispiriting discoveries just before a party, Elizabeth D. Logan has designed for H&G two devices to keep table linens as crisp and fresh as when they first come from the laundry, and both are surprisingly simple to make. One is a rack for tablecloths so that you can hang them, folded only twice, rather than having to stack them in a drawer. All you need to make it are pliers, a hacksaw, and a few of Alcoa's sturdy new anodized aluminum hangers which you will find in notions departments. The other is a set of cardboard trays and binders that holds mats and napkins flat in a drawer or upright on shelves.

HOW TO MAKE A TABLECLOTH HANGER

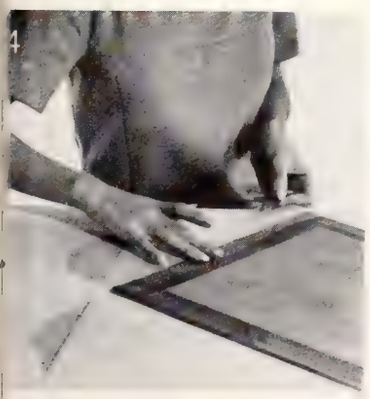
1 Place an aluminum hanger flat on the edge of a work table and saw through the shoulder bars a little below the neck. Your hacksaw will leave a smooth edge, but you can give the cut edges a whisk with a metal file.

2 With pliers, open the angle of the rods a bit, then bend the ends downward to form U-shaped hooks. Hang the hooked rod on the bottom of an uncut hanger. Make and add more hooked rods until you have a four- or five-rung ladder. For permanency, close the hooks with pliers.

3 Place a towel over each rod as padding, then hang over the towels your freshly ironed tablecloths. (Be sure they are completely dry when you put them away.) To protect them from dust, cloak the rack in a plastic bag; hang it on a hook inside a closet door or over the closet pole.

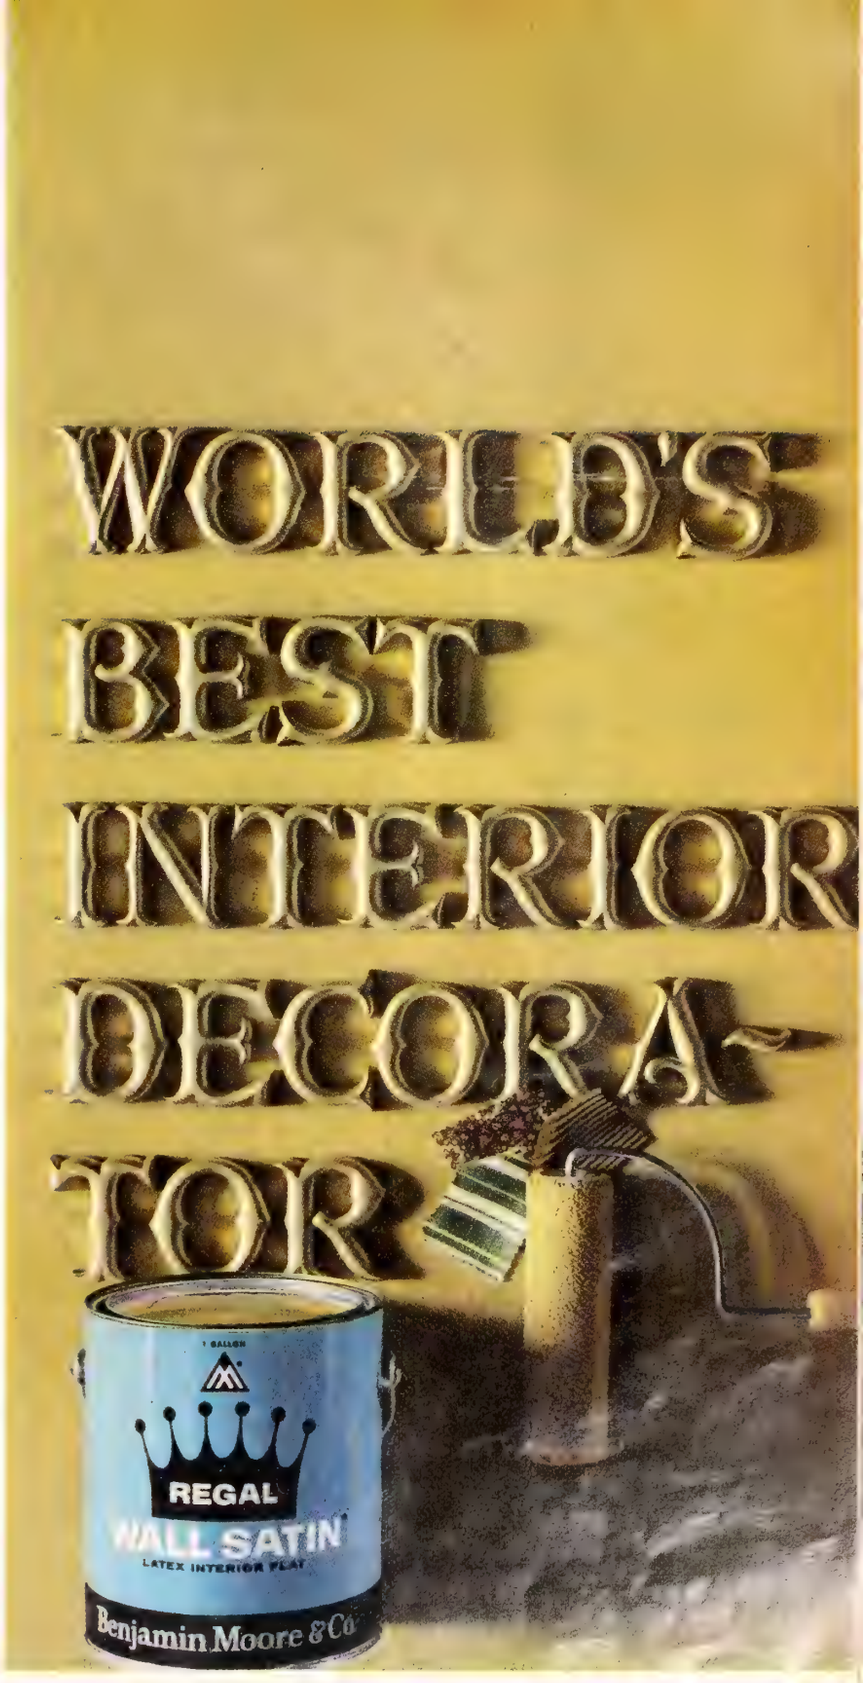
)W TO MAKE TRAYS AND BINDERS)R MATS AND NAPKINS



1 You will need: scissors, heavy chip cardboard available at art shops (cut it 9 by 9 inches for trays and binders for cocktail napkins, 18 by 18 for dinner napkins and 15 by 21 for mats). You will also need pretty paper, Krylon Spray Adhesive, protective Krylon Crystal Clear Spray Coating, sheets of clear plastic (from a yard goods department), and bias tape.

2 For each tray, cut colored paper to cover the top side of each piece of cardboard, allowing a 2-inch overlap on all sides. Spray glue on the cardboard and underside of the paper, wait thirty seconds, then press together and smooth out.

3 With cardboard side up, pare overlap corners of the paper and miter as neatly as a picture frame before gluing the overlap to the cardboard. Spray the top side with Krylon Crystal Clear Spray Coating to preserve the paper and prevent its color from rubbing off onto your linens.



4 Pre-cut four strips of transparent plastic the length of the four sides of each tray, to make flaps. The flaps should be wide enough to hold your linens snug against the surface of the tray. Fold each strip of plastic lengthwise about 2 inches under each edge of the tray and glue to the tray bottom. After all four plastic flaps are glued, mask this undersurface with decorative paper cut to exact size. Turn the tray over and round the two corners of each plastic flap. Bind the edges with bias tape or scallop the end sides with pinking shears. Place your freshly ironed (and dry) mats or napkins on the trays and fold the flaps over them.

5 For each ribboned binder for your trays, take a piece of cardboard cut to the size of the trays. Make a ¾-inch slit parallel to the center of each edge and about ¾ inch in from the edge. Cut ½-inch-wide bias tape into four pieces 12 inches long. Run tape through the slits in the cardboard, leaving an inch of tape on underside of each slit. Glue these ends to the cardboard and cover this undersurface of the cardboard with paper, wrapping it over the edges of the cardboard by ¾ inch. Cover the outer surface of the binder with decorative paper cut to size, permitting the tapes to emerge along the four edges. Sandwich trays of linen between two such binders and tie tapes.

6 The result of your handiwork: a stack of pretty trays to hold your linens, tied together securely in binders for filing flat in a drawer or vertically in a closet.

have a problem in home decorating? short on storage space?

Lustra Quality Shelf Hardware can help you with both, for Lustra shelves are decorative and functional in home decorating and storage.

Lustra components serve as shelves, of course, and serve well . . . but they also function as room dividers (with floor-to-ceiling poles), or a music center . . . as casual shelves or a center of interest on one wall . . . or as an open vanity or study desk. Lustra shelves can provide display space for prized art objects, flower arrangements, hobbies and collector's items. They accommodate books, record albums, television or stereo sets, aquariums, toys, school study materials, and home or business records.

Lustra can be used in every part of your home . . . entry hall, living room, kitchen, bedroom, bathroom, children's room, rumpus room, den or study.

You will be surprised at how easily and how rapidly Lustra shelf hardware and shelves can be installed. There is no need to spend large sums for permanent installations when with a minimum of expense, you can do it yourself. As a bonus, Lustra has built in flexibility and mobility. It can be rearranged or moved handily.

STAIN . . . or PAINT?

Deck House designed by William Berkes, Wayland, Mass.; Cabot's Weathering Stains on siding.

Cabot's STAINS

TROUBLE-FREE . . . WILL NOT CRACK, PEEL, OR BLISTER

For those planning to build or remodel soon, the hour for decision is approaching. Will it be stain or paint for your home? Think it over carefully, for a building once painted can never be stained . . . and the unique beauty, economy, and protection that stains provide may be lost forever. Today the trend is toward stains.

- Economical — ½ the cost of paints; easier to apply and maintain
- Need no thinning; surfaces need no scraping, sanding, or primer
- Penetrate deeply, dyeing and preserving the wood fibers
- Enhance the beauty of the wood grain
- 35 different shades, unique color effects
- A stained surface grows old gracefully

H&G'S GARDENER'S

'Perlina,' rosy new greigii

Tulips are always making news. This is not so much because there are stop-press announcements to be made about sensational new varieties, or because the catalogue writers have discovered a new language in which to describe tulips, but rather because the ways in which tulips can be used and enjoyed are as fresh and variable as spring itself. Leaving the catalogue writers to their adjectives, it is still true that a few new varieties come along each year. Occasionally, whole new classes of tulips emerge—and with them, new garden effects are possible. A generation ago, a new hybrid of an ancient species, Tulipa fosteriana, blazed, literally, across American gardens under the name of 'Red Emperor.' Sensible people paid several dollars a bulb for it at first, and for a number of years i was the costliest popular tulip o the market. Early, hardy, shor stemmed, but with a flaming flowe as big as a dinner plate, it gave al tulips both a shot in the arm and black eye (shot in the arm becaus the familiar parade of garden tulip was becoming monotonous; blac eye because 'Red Emperor' eventu ally became a garden cliché). Bu T. fosteriana has probably contril uted more, in a recognizable way to the remaking of the tulip's imag than any other species. With T. eich leri and T. greigii, especially th latter, it constitutes the most impor tant triumvirate in tulip breedin today. Within the past dozen year (what might be called in tuli breeding the post World War II pe riod), the eichleri and kauffmann ana hybrids have tended to form group of their own, with new vari tal names added relatively slowly and the fosteriana and greigii hy brids have ramified in some of th boldest of new directions.

'Salmon Joy,' with white edge

The current bellwether amon fosteriana hybrids is the so-calle Darwin hybrid, which is perha best known in the variety 'Gud shnik,' whose striated yellow-an flame petals form an enormous cu on a long "garden tulip" stem. N less beautiful, although having shorter stem, is 'Purissima'—a pur

TWENTY-FOUR HOURS MAKE A BIG DIFFERENCE in the condition of tulip flowers, especially wit the short-stemmed varieties whose blossoms are larger than most of the familiar garden hybrids. Th planting below in the Keukenhof Gardens, in the Netherlands, was still chiefly a garden of buds at thre o'clock of a Tuesday afternoon. At the same time next day, most of the greigiis in the foreground bed wer fully open, opposite page, below. There had been no significant change in the weather or the temperatur white variety owing its chief allegiance to a species noted for the most brilliant vermilion-scarlet flowers in the whole plant kingdom. 'Gudoshnik' is classed as a Darwin hybrid; 'Purissima' is included among fosteriana hybrids. The reasons are of no importance whatever to laymen—perhaps as little to professionals. But both varieties owe their glory to their fosteriana blood.

ANSWER: PLANT THE NEW HYBRID TULIPS

Greigii tulips, stemming from an original species of which the flowers are primarily scarlet, introduce a characteristic purplish mottling or streaking in the leaves that immediately identifies the greigii influence in all the hybrids. Only a few short years ago, the Dutch breeders, who have been almost exclusively responsible for all the modern hybrid tulips, were shouting the praises of the greigiis. There was only one thing wrong: all the flowers were in uncompromising shades of red. Now all that is changed, and the good qualities of the greigii influence—dependability, handsome foliage, huge flowers, and the modest height so well adapted to massed effects—now include combinations of cream and buff and rosy pink, in a wide variety of flashing and edgings, to give the gardener's tulip plantings an exciting new look (see page 189). The new colors and shadings are brilliant, goodness knows, but they are no longer obsessively red, and their availability is increasing every year.

'Rose d'Amour,' carmine, ivory

What has been happening with tulips is perhaps not too dissimilar to what has happened within the past twenty-five years to peonies. The constant inbreeding of the same old hybrids with the same old hybrids has been replaced with the crossing of species with species as well as with hybrids. Thus really new blood in sizable amounts (up to fifty per cent, plus whatever may have already been involved) has not only augmented the lists, but mightily enhanced them. It should be the fervent wish of every gardener who opens his heart to tulips every spring that the breeders will keep the strength of the species uppermost in (Continued on page 254) in the interval (for colors, see page 189,B). Two days later, the key varieties were past their prime. In a week they would have gone altogether. All this is by way of emphasizing the need for succession flowering—which in the small home landscape can be accomplished only by careful selection and placement of varieties. Daffodils, muscari, and both earlier and later flowering tulips are required. With thoughtful interplanting, a bulb border, however small, can produce brilliant masses of color for more than a month.

Parker

is making grass GREENER these days

Is thatch making your lawn brown and ugly? Thatch, that matted, dead grass imbedded in the turf is the worst enemy of a healthy, green lawn. Well, Parker is making grass greener these days with the new Thatch-O-Matic Power Rake that easily, quickly, removes thatch by power raking instead of arduous hand raking. And, the Thatch-O-Matic removes thatch without damage to living grass. You can rent the Parker Thatch-O-Matic at most Hardware Stores and Garden Centers.

Parker

is keeping grass GREENER these days

After de-thatching your lawn, keep it greener by regularly using a Parker Lawn Sweeper or Vacuum. Unlike the bag-type mower that catches only a portion of the grass clippings as you mow, a Parker Sweeper easily removes practically all of the grass clippings, leaves and other debris; prevents thatch build-up . . . keeps your lawn greener. Manual, trailer and powered sweepers and vacuums are available.

Notes for September gardeners

Now is the time when lawns not only need attention, but can gain the most from it

First weekend

Turf trimmings. This is the optimum germination season for good lawn seeds. The days are warm but shortening, the earth still warm, the nights cooling, lengthening, increasingly moist. Whatever the scale of your involvement, the principles of lawn seeding remain disarmingly the same: With a coarse-tooth comb you turn or loosen or ameliorate the upper few inches of ground. You spread the best seed you can buy (keep it simple—fescues for shade and hard wear, improved Kentucky blue grass strains for sun, or a mixture of both and let them fight it out). You riffle the surface after seeding and firm it if you can. Then you keep it moist continually and leave it alone until you mow it in mid-October. As the junior lawn builders say, no sweat. This goes for a square foot or a square acre (yes, there is such a thing, and it is roughly 209 by 209 feet.)

Here is a suggestion for lawn trimming: Outline your turf area (after grading, but before sowing) with strips of nursery-grown sod. Many garden centers and nurseries near most large suburban areas can supply turf by the square foot—always in better condition than anything you can raise in a hurry yourself, and often in the varietal proportions you want for your conditions. This setting of a foot-wide edge all round the new surface does four important things: It gives your lawn a ready-made margin, with no risk of toothy gaps or spill-over grass plants in flower borders or the like. It gives you a check on your grading efforts and your eye for line (if curves are involved). It prevents the erosive effects of winter on tender new grass edges. And it makes your new lawn look better right from the start.

Reading notice. "Insects are a nuisance. They bother us." So says Eleanor Ivanye Fanning on the first page of Insects from Close Up (Crowell, $6.95). Then she proceeds to make insects not only interesting but even, in an odd way, endearing. Mrs. Fanning's concise and expert text adorns and is adorned by Larry F. Brevoort's wondrous photographs. This is not a gardener's book, nor is it a guide to anything except a fascinating part of the world around us.

Second weekend

Fall painting. The garden furniture never gets painted before rust or rot sets in because everybody thinks you have to paint the garden furniture in spring, and in spring there is always too much else to do. Actually, newly painted furniture is an eyesore—in spring or any other time. It takes a little weathering to supply just the right patina. There is time in the autumn, and freshly painted pieces—especially if you leave them outside—will winter far better than unpainted ones. Then, when spring comes, you will have neat, clean, well-preserved (hopefully), and inviting-looking chairs and tables on your porches and terraces.

Despite the marvelously weatherproof qualities of the new aluminum alloy furniture with its anodized finishes and plastic coverings, the esthetic virtues of cast-iron, wrought-iron, reed, and old-fashioned wood in many situations cannot be surpassed. Most such materials require regular painting for good appearance, some painting for survival. But one caveat about any fall painting outdoors: Do it before the leaves really start to come down. Leaf-studded finishes can be unattractive.

Third weekend

Hedge hogs. There is nothing like a bad pun to put you in the resigned mood with which you should approach the care and feeding of a hedge. In this instance, we are concerned with the double chore of restraining the root-spread of a healthy hedge while keeping it healthy at the same time. This may not be a momentous matter if your hedge is adjacent to turf. But if it adjoins shrubbery or, especially, a flower border, the problem may be acute. The more you improve the ground under your shrubs and flowers, the more attractive the ground becomes to hedge roots. And the more—well, why go into the grim details? At all events, if every few years (say every three) you will dig an honest spade-depth trench a couple of feet from your hedge line, you will by that process alone effectively prune the business portion of the hedge's root system. Then if you mix ordinary complete fertilizer with the removed earth as you put it back into the trench, you will encourage the proliferation of new and shorter roots into the trenched area. (Of course you may encourage roots from the other side of the trench, too.)

Surface fertilization of the hedge—that is, hoeing fertilizer along either side of the hedge plants—may encourage some surface roots to stay close to home. But such methods will not, for example, discourage privet. And it will not do the most effective feeding job for any plant. Naturally, the law of diminishing returns sets in somewhere along the line, and for owners of several hundred feet of hedge, trenching may be a fool's exercise. Better change the plantings near the hedge.

Reading notice. One of the shortest but most useful manuals on orchid care has just come to hand. It bears the simple title Orchids (Universe Books, $1.95 in paper, $2.95 hardbound). Written in Holland by Michel Paul and splendidly translated by Marieke Clarke, it is so pleasantly brief you suspect that it must be superficial. It is not. It contains rich, lean meat; no fat. It is confined to the essentials only. You will never get to be an orchid expert on the basis of this book, but you might get to want to be one.

The Rockwells' (Fred and Esther) Complete Guide to Successful Gardening (Doubleday, $6.50) is a compact but astonishingly inclusive distillation of two lifetimes of gardening and writing about gardening and taking pictures of gardens. In a way it is the authors' best, even if the most discursive and least specific. It presents on a personal basis an image of gardening knowledge and dedication it would be hard to find in any husband-and-wife team writing today. The appeal is to a nationwide readership, and many charts, tables, and maps have been designed to serve the needs of gardeners from coast to coast.

Fourth weekend

How big a hole? The ordinary gardener makes a planting hole with anything from a forefinger or a trowel to a shovel. These are still about the three best tools. With them you can dig all the holes that will be required by any plant you will be able to handle yourself—and some others besides. (Remember, the two-foot earth ball of an eight-foot hemlock may weigh 250 pounds or more.) The question is not so much how big a planting hole can you dig as how big a hole should you dig for any given plant. We have invented a minimal rule of thumb: Find the circumference of the earthball with a piece of string, or measure half the circumference by rolling a spade handle around it. Then make a hole whose diameter is equal to at least half the circumference of the ball. You will be surprised at the ease with which you will learn to achieve the same result by guesswork.

With seedlings of seed-packet annuals, a finger may do for the first go-round, a trowel for the second. For plants with established root systems (alyssum, foxglove, garden phlox, day-lily divisions), you may need a real hole, dug perhaps with a trowel if the earth is loose to begin with. Dig compost, dried manure, peatmoss or bonemeal into the bottom of the hole and open it to a diameter a few inches larger than the spread roots of the transplant. A pot plant of whatever sort needs a hole no bigger than its root mass, but the surrounding earth in which the hole is dug should be prepared with similar supplements so that the new roots will find a ready environment as they form. Almost any vigorously growing summer pot plant may extend its root length by from five to ten times in a season. Naturally you can't prepare all that large a hole, but in ordinarily fertile soil you won't need to. Rule of thumb: For a six-inch pot plant, improve a foot-wide area, then dig out a pot-size hole for the initial root mass. With potted or canned shrubs or trees (in other words, normally long-lived plants), simply do a little more thorough job.

Balled and burlapped (B&B) plants require a hole that gives you a little maneuvering room—say a minimum of from six inches to eighteen inches beyond the perimeter of the ball. And there should be at hand enough improved soil to fill in comfortably and leave a slight saucerlike rim around the top to hold water. An important factor with all heavy plants such as these is a firm floor beneath them that will not settle, thereby dropping the crown of the newly set plant either too deep in the hole (causing poor drainage) or too far below the new earth surface. Thus, all loosened and improved earth under the ball should be trod or tamped firmly before the plant is set.

Bare-root trees and shrubs should be given a hole as much wider and deeper than the present root spread as B&B plants need. But with bare roots, all the earth to be put back in the hole should be improved—with the choicest part of the mix toward the root tips (for that is where new feeding roots start). Tamping the filled earth firmly about the roots with hands or a blunt stick is to be taken for granted.

Furniture with hidden assets

Among the furniture in our House of Color, pages 200-209, you will find a number of new and ingenious designs with hidden surprises. What may look at first glance like an armoire turns out to be a bar. A double headboard offers a half-dozen built-in conveniences. Other pieces have specially fitted drawers or interior lighting. All these designs, admirable for today's short-on-space living, are by Drexel.

Tucked into a little niche in the fireplace wall between the living room and the dining room (page 202) is a semainier (so-called originally because it was designed to hold a priest's vestments for each day of the week). Small silver jugs, bowls, or plates fit neatly into its drawers. 50 inches tall, 18 inches wide, 14 inches deep. This and all other pieces are of walnut. $179.

The buffet in the dining room (page 203) has one drawer which is fitted with cutlery dividers for silver storage and fully lined with a specially treated anti-tarnish cloth. All cabinet sections below the drawers have interior lighting. Buffet measures 76 inches wide, 30 inches high, 19 inches deep. $399.

An armoire in the recreation room (page 208) comes completely outfitted as a small bar. Its removable refrigerator unit has a drop-down front door lined with plastic laminate that doubles as a drink-mixing and serving counter. For storing glasses and bottles, there are adjustable glass shelves, and next to refrigerator, a lockable liquor cabinet. 40 inches wide. $789 with refrigerator.

The tall, glass-paneled cabinet mounted on a low credenza in the dining room (page 203) makes an impressive display and storage center. Concealed lighting enhances the contents of the cabinet—in this case, a collection of orange Fitzhugh china. Bamboo laminated in plastic faces doors of credenza, and automatic lights illuminate interiors. 70 inches wide. Cabinet, $499. Credenza, $319.

The king-size headboard of the bed in the parents' bedroom (page 207) reveals a number of surprises. Arm rests fold down from both sides of the vinyl-upholstered back rests, and the outside arm rests contain high-intensity miniature lamps. In center of headboard, there is space for a clock-radio plus a control panel with lamp switches and an outlet for an electric blanket. 78 inches wide. $399.

Father's dresser in the same room has a special drawer for shaving accessories concealed behind the doors of the cabinet section. Covered with black vinyl, the shaving drawer is topped with a hinged mirrored lid. A panel at front of drawer contains a built-in light, and another panel on the bottom contains an outlet for a razor plus a switch for the drawer light. 50 inches tall. $359.

The French Provincial semainier in the daughter's bedroom (page 206) makes an excellent storage cabinet for bed linens. The top drawer is sectioned and plush lined for jewelry. We lined the others with scented, toile-patterned paper. 48 inches tall, 24 inches wide, 17 inches deep. $199. Scented paper (four sheets for $5) by Lubin Parfums.

an oil-based paint thinned with turpentine.

6. Apply the trim.
A wooden trunk allows for greater freedom in decoration. Even the most rank amateur can produce attractive results. The best method is découpage: Select old prints of shells, flowers, butterflies, glue them to the trunk, then cover them with clear varnish. (See H&G, February, 1963, Creative Crafts: Découpage.)

For tin trunks that have decoration embossed in the surface, Mrs. Hunt suggests bringing out each pattern in oil paint, with perhaps one découpage on a smooth surface.

7. Make the lining.
For this, you will need pretty fabric, ribbons, cotton batting, cardboard, and glue. Cut the pieces of cardboard to fit all the sides, and the top and bottom of your trunk and tray. Pad one surface of the cardboard pieces with cotton batting, glue the fabric snug and smooth over the batting and onto the backside of the cardboard, squaring the corners carefully. Now glue the pieces of cardboard to the trunk and tray. Glue strips of ribbon to cover the raw edges.

As a final touch, glue a picture to the inside of the lid, and your old treasure is ready for use.

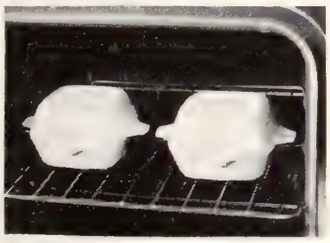
THE PETITE PAN SET



Whether your kitchen prepares meals for one or for a family of eight, a wonderful complement to a wardrobe of cooking accessories is a set of four miniature cook-and-servers called Petite Pans. Made of Pyroceram—the creamy, white, heatproof glass-ceramic—each little dish holds 1½ cups and can be used for cooking either on a direct flame as a skillet, or in the oven as an individual casserole. With their clear plastic snap-on lids, you can also use the dishes as refrigerator containers, then transfer them directly from freezer to flame without fear of their cracking. The set includes a detachable handle that fits any of the dishes, snapping securely onto lugs on the side and turning it into a little saucepan for melting butter, making sauces, heating up individual servings of soup —or into a skillet for frying a single egg or a hamburger. The handle is also a help when you remove the little dishes, used as ramekins, from a hot oven. Made by Corning Glass Works, a set of four blue-cornflower-decorated Petite Pans, with lids and one detachable handle, costs $7.95. In addition, you can buy separately four lids (for 98 cents) or a detachable handle (for $1.75).

With their lids on, the pans stack to make excellent freezer dishes.

Detachable handle clamps on, turning pan into a handy little frying pan.

Pans can be inverted one above the other to create well-sealed casseroles.

You can attach handle with one hand when removing hot pans from oven.

Out of the oven, a pan makes a pretty enough ramekin or tiny serving dish to place on the table.

the hybrids rather than crossing hybrid with hybrid until mongrelization causes the strains to weaken as had been the case, say, thirty years ago.

The all-species garden

An entire tulip season (and the same general application could be made to several other spring bulbs) could well be planned solely around the tulip species and a relatively small number of hybrid groups in which the influence of one species is predominant. The season might start in March with T. turkestanica and it might end with the multistemmed T. sprengeri (if you can obtain it). In between would range T. praestans (page 189, A, for the magnificent hybrid 'Fusilier'), all the fosteriana and greigiis, T. eichleri and its dainty hybrids, fastidious T. clusiana, T. tarda, and T. marjolettii. Among these, of course, it would be silly not to include some of the early singles and doubles of standard vintage, certainly the lily-flowered and Darwin hybrids, which are closer to the species than they look, and the late doubles often called peony-flowered.

There are, each year, additions to the list of "parrots" and other broken varieties (broken usually means tulips that had been infected with a virus and then at least partially cured but left with the stigmata that many growers find attractive), as well as the so-called green tulips. The autumn catalogues of dealers who pay special attention to hardy bulbs will offer a bewildering assortment to choose from. But among the groups that we have discussed here, you need no advice about making your selections. You can scarcely go wrong. Of course the suggestions on pages 188 and 189 will help. You will do your best, however, to provide a sequence of flowers, not only with tulips, but with other kinds of hardy bulbs that can do much to ameliorate the rise and fall of the tulips. The "prime time" of any one tulip variety is quite short (see bottom of pages 244 and 245).

As for ordering tulips: do it early—as soon as you can lay hands on the lists of available varieties. But do not be in a hurry to plant them. Get the daffodils in first, and such other bulbs of the spring group as you may buy. But leave the tulips until October (in most temperate regions) or even November where hard frosts do not come until nearly Christmas time. And plant them deep. Nature sets them in their habitats ten or more inches down. You can at least spare them seven or eight.

Now the magic of the theatre comes to your home

Shown above: Julie Harris, Claire Bloom, Laurence Olivier, Judith Anderson, John Gielgud and Ralph Richardson as they appear in Society production

You will receive this exciting 2-record album, with illustrated companion Folio, when you accept this demonstration offer.

Through a unique new theatre club, you can enjoy thrilling performances of the world's greatest plays in the comfort of your own living room. Start with Tennessee Williams' haunting drama The Glass Menagerie for only $1 (catalogue price: $12.90)

YOU LOVE THE THEATRE . . . if you and your family treasure the performances of truly great dramatic artists . . . you will be delighted at this extraordinary opportunity.

The Theatre Recording Society is presenting, for the first time on longplaying records, exciting all-star productions of the great masterpieces of the theatre — newly recorded in stereo and monaural high fidelity for your listening pleasure.

As a member, you will thrill to the performances of such artists as Julie Harris, Richard Burton, Claire Bloom, Paul Scofield, Judith Anderson, Laurence Olivier, Ingrid Bergman, Rex Harrison and others. You will come to know at first hand the great plays of Sophocles, Euripides, Marlowe, Shakespeare, Moliere, Sheridan, Shaw, Ibsen, Chekov, O'Casey, Williams, Sartre, Ionesco and other masters of the drama — both classical and contemporary.

What is more, you will "go to the theatre" as often as you wish — in the comfort of your own living room, where the actors play only to you, your family and invited guests. Each production, skillfully orchestrated with incidental music and subtle background effect, conveys all of the movement and color of the living stage — yet provides a "close-up" experience of the drama which is possible only in the home.

Special $1 introductory Offer. To demonstrate the pleasures of membership, the Society will send you its superb production of Tennessee Williams' unforgettable drama The Glass Menagerie (catalogue price: $12.90) for the introductory price of only $1, plus shipping.

This two-record album — featuring Montgomery Clift, Julie Harris, Jessica Tandy, and David Wayne — utilizes a special eight-microphone recording technique which recreates the drama in your living room with extraordinary intimacy. It is a striking demonstration of the new kind of entertainment experience offered by the Theatre Recording Society.

If you are pleased with the introductory album, you will be offered an outstanding new play production six times a year. Each play is recorded on 12-inch longplaying discs, and packaged in a colorful boxed set, much like full-length opera albums. Included in each album is an illustrated Folio companion to the production, with fascinating details about the play — its setting, its place in the dramatic repertoire, its influence on contemporary society. Together with the recordings, this unique Folio provides a total theatre experience you could enjoy nowhere else.

As a member, you take only the plays you want. You are not obligated to accept every Society production. You may select as few as four 2-record albums over the next two years — from a wide variety offered. Although these lavish play albums cost up to $12.90 in stores, you will pay only $8.90 for each album you choose — same low price for monaural and stereo versions.

Enroll now as a Charter Member. Send no money. To accept this $1 introductory offer from the Society, simply mail the coupon at the right. If you are not delighted with the demonstration album, you may return it within 10 days, cancel your membership, and owe nothing.

Theatre Recording Society
461 Eighth Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10001

As a member, I will receive advance notice of all new Society releases. My only obligation is to select four 2-record albums over the next two years at the special members' price of $8.90 (catalogue price: $12.90) in either monaural or stereo.

Until further notice, please send records in:

☐ Stereo (play on stereophonic equipment only)

Antiques Questions & Answers

By Thomas H. Ormsbee

WEDGWOOD BLACK BASALT

We recently acquired this black, ribbed cream pitcher and sugar bowl. Both are marked Wedgwood. What can you tell me about them? H. B. F.—Indianapolis, Ind.

They are black basalt made by Josiah Wedgwood & Sons, Eturia, Staffordshire. In 1768, the famous English potter perfected a kind of pottery he named black basalt. It was considered one of his major achievements. The popularity of black basalt waned, but was revived by the company in 1900. Your table pieces date around 1918.

SCOTCH TALL CASE CLOCK

My in-laws sent this clock to us from Scotland. It had been in their family for many years. "Alexander Brand, Edinburgh" is inscribed on the face. How old do you think this clock might be? S. M. J.—Merion Station, Pa.

Alexander Brand is the name of the maker of the movement of your clock; he worked in Edinburgh from 1711 to 1757. The case must be the work of some unknown cabinetmaker living in Edinburgh during those years.

HALF SQUARE PIANO

The label on my rosewood square piano reads, J. P. Hale & Co., New York, and the serial number is 616070. When I bought it twenty years ago, it had an ebony finish. I would appreciate any information you can give me on this piece. J. B. D.—Haskell, Tex.

Joseph P. Hale established his piano factory in New York City about 1865. He was very successful and in time his factory produced 100 instruments a week. From the style and serial number of your square piano, I would date it circa 1870–1875.

"Before you go out and spend a lot of money on custom draperies, you owe it to yourself to ask these questions.

1. Do you need an airy weave to bring the outside in?
2. Or do you need a denser weave to keep the outside out?
3. Will the fabric you've chosen shrink or stretch out of fit?
4. Is your window exposed to a great deal of sunlight that might damage the drapery fabrics?
5. Will the fabric wrinkle?
6. Can you afford or do you want to afford the cost of cleaning bills?
7. Are you decorating windows in an "active" room where spotting, spilling, even an accidental fire can be a problem?
8. Is this fabric truly as beautiful as you were hoping to find, or are you just compromising?

Owens-Corning Fiberglas custom drapery fabrics come in every type of beautiful weave, style, pattern, and color to suit any decor, enhance every type of window or room.

Fiberglas* fabrics are the only ones that are also sun-safe, fire-safe, washable, wrinkle-proof, and never need ironing. Isn't it worth your while, and money too, to ask your decorator about Owens-Corning Fiberglas Fabrics, or see them in better fabric departments?

ENGLISH PORCELAIN JEWELRY

This pin and earrings set came to me as a present from Montreal. They are marked "Coalport China, Made in England." Do you know anything about this manufacturer of porcelain jewelry? B. A. T.—New York, N.Y.

Your jewelry was made by Coalport China Ltd., Stoke-on-Trent, Staffordshire, England, and is of recent date. While they are sold widely in Canada and in the English West Indian colonies, such floral pins and earrings are handled by few American shops.

How old do you think my whatnot is? It is made of walnut with a very nice grain in the wood. There is a secret drawer in the bottom.
H. McC.—San Leandro, Calif.

I would say your whatnot dates between 1850 and 1865. It was factory made of an American Victorian style. A few such pieces have a secret drawer beneath the lower shelf.

AMERICAN VICTORY WHATNOT

AMERICAN JUG

Please tell me what you can about my brown-and-cream-colored jug. The only mark is a blue heart with 6 in the center.
A. J. P.—Easton, Pa.

It is an American stoneware jug of the kind widely used for cider, molasses, vinegar, perhaps for homemade wine. It dates about 1900–1920; the mark is unknown.

Could you tell me the style and approximate age of this desk? The bookshelf is not fastened to the desk part.
P. T. L.—Gadsden, Ala.

Your mahogany drop-front secretary is American Empire and was probably made between 1825 and 1830.

AMERICAN SECRETARY

ALABASTER GARNITURE

I would appreciate any information on this carved object, which I think is of alabaster. It is about 27 inches tall.
F. H.—Grand Rapids, Mich.

Your ornately carved garniture was probably created in Italy. It is a Victorian piece and dates around 1850–1875.

EARN BIG PAY IN AN EXCITING CAREER!

Easy to learn even if you've never taken shorthand before!

STEP UP from routine office work into a glamour job where the pay is far above the average. Sit beside top corporation executives at board meetings and big conferences. Even cover conventions and courtroom trials!

With Stenotype, the world's fastest shorthand, you can qualify for one of today's top-level secretarial positions. This modern machine shorthand is a synonym for highest speed and accuracy in thousands of executive offices and important places everywhere. Your Stenotype machine uses only 22 symbols...types an entire word at one stroke..."takes" in plain English letters...provides clean, easy-to-transcribe records for permanent future reference.

Even if you've had trouble with ordinary shorthand, you can quickly become proficient in Stenotype. Notes are so much easier to take and read. You learn at home, in your spare time. The cost is remarkably low, and the machine itself is included with your course. Take the first step toward an exciting high-pay career today. Send the attached mailer for free booklet. LaSalle, 417 S. Dearborn, Chicago, Illinois 60605.

STENOTYPE MAKES ORDINARY SHORTHAND OUT OF DATE

- Stenotype is a machine shorthand. It is not a pen-and-pencil system that forces you to memorize thousands of hooks, circles, and special signs.
- Stenotype types an entire word at one stroke. Ordinary handwritten systems may require many strokes for a single word.
- Stenotype "takes" in plain English letters. This provides employers with a permanent, easily-transcribable record that is simple for any Stenotypist to refer to at any time in the future. Notes never grow "cold."
- Stenotype has no speed limit but the experience of its operator. Trained Stenotypists attain speeds of more than 200 words per minute. Complicated push-pencil systems can't compete.
- Stenotype is a small, compact, portable machine that is easy to take to courtrooms, conventions, or outside conferences at offices other than your own. This use of Stenotype—in a variety of unusual situations—is just another of the important advantages the skilled Stenotypist has over ordinary shorthand secretaries.

Notes for the Hostess

BY DIANA BRYAN

The brunch Carol Simpson gave in honor of her weekend guests had all the style and sumptuousness of an old-fashioned hunt breakfast. Refreshments began with the usual Whiskey Sours and the various vodka with juice or consommé combinations. There was also a surprisingly good new drink (new to me anyway): a frosted Old Fashioned—really a frozen Old Fashioned—just light enough for a midday tipple. When we all sat down to the delicious food, our appetites were as keen as if we had actually ridden to hounds.

Although it was a buffet, we were not condemned to lap dining because small tables had been set up and decorated to match the long table in the dining room. This was indeed a hunt board, covered with hunting-pink felt instead of a cloth—a bold background for the black and white and pink of the china, which was Carol's very special set of Crown Staffordshire in the "Hunting" pattern. I have loved this pattern since I was a child; it is so witty and full of action. On Carol's pink-covered tables, the pink-coated riders looked even gayer than I had remembered. Of the finest bone china and beautifully made, "Hunting" still has a childlike naïveté about it—just right in a country setting. Tiffany always carries it.

The menu was masterful—a choice of fresh melon, eggs baked in tomato shells, kebabs of chicken livers, stuffed mushrooms with bacon, and thin potato pancakes. Rather than setting baskets of rolls on the buffet, Carol provided each of the small tables with miniature loaves of homemade bread on little breadboards complete with small bread knives. Small tubs of sweet butter and jars of Greek honey were placed on each table, too. Seconds were passed—and rarely refused—to prevent our trouping back to the buffet table.

In country and suburb alike, a large party can very often present a parking problem. Few homes, even large ones, have enough driveway space, and parking along the road can be dangerous—or illegal. The Iovinos solved a potential traffic jam brilliantly when their daughter was married last week. There was plenty of parking space at the church, but after the ceremony, instead of letting the guests drive themselves to the reception, they were transported to the house with dispatch in rented school buses. Each car had been assigned a numbered ticket, as in a parking lot, and when the time came to leave, the cars were called for by walkie-talkie and delivered up to the Iovinos' front door. In many communities you can hire volunteer firemen and high school seniors to carry out this project, and I have been told off-duty firemen and policemen can also be employed for this service. Another system that could work for a large party: Have a central meeting place at some parking area and run a shuttle service for the first hour or so of the party, then a car-delivery service afterward.

Now that the nights are getting cool and we open the windows less, we sometimes find a large party can sooner or later produce a smoke-tainted room. For everybody's comfort, I bought a number of air fresheners and placed them around the house at strategic points. Of fine white bisque

Here are your Room Service directions:

How to make draperies with turn-back lining.

Place drapery fabric and solid color lining right sides together. Sew one edge. Smooth out fabric to half of width, iron. Baste to make sure layers stay flat together. Smooth out balance. Sew edge. Sew top. Remove basting. Turn drapery right side out. Hem bottom of lining. Blind stitch drapery hem. Iron flat. Sew pleat tape to heading.

How to make a four-poster and drape it with ready-mades.

For this you may need a man handy with tools. Make posters of 3″ x 3″. Headboard and tester of ¾″ plywood with 1″ panel moulding applied. Attach rods and hooks on inner side of tester to hang ready-made draperies. Paint four-poster in two contrasting colors from Devoe's Library of Colors.

How to make a Roman Shade.

Cut fabric to window size. Allow 2″ for side hems, up to 3″ for bottom. Have thin brass rod cut width of shade. Use extra inches at bottom to attach rod for firmness and weight. Buy Roman Shade tape and traverse cord. Apply tape and install shade according to instructions in leaflet that comes with tape.

How to make a fabric screen to hide a radiator.

Cut section of fiberboard 22″ wide and length from ceiling to floor (minus 1½″ top and bottom to allow for frame). Buy extra draperies (in longer length than used for windows). Cut off top pleating, let down bottom hem and press. Stretch fabric over one side, lap around, staple to back. Frame section in 1″ x 2″ clear pine, stained or painted. Support fiberboard section in back with 1″ x 1″ struts. Tack 1″ x 2″ strips to ceiling and floor (6″ in front of radiator). Nail screen to strips.

How to upholster walls with a panel print.

This pattern is particularly adaptable to wall covering as there are two repeats of the printed panel in the fabric width. Cut sections of fiberboard or plywood 2″ less than width of fabric, and the length from floor to ceiling. Wrap fiberboard with fabric and staple to back (center design carefully). Nail covered sections to wall with finishing nails. For narrow panels at end of room, split fabric and proceed as above.

How to cover cracked walls with fabric.

Nail lengths of lath stripping vertically to wall 18″ apart. With staple gun attach fabric to strips, stretching tightly from one to another. Nail lath strips, painted to match one of your fabric colors, on top of first strips to hide staples. Add painted moulding at ceiling and floor.

All [illegible] from Devoe and Raynolds.

china, they are good-looking enough to sit in the open, but you could place them inconspicuously on shelves or in nooks. Their blend of oils and herbs disperse just the right amount of uncloying fragrance while absorbing odors. They are called Air Caddies and I found them at Bloomingdale's.

Discovered the other day that a wonderful place to buy candles is a religious supply store. They carry many sizes and many different qualities—votive lights to fat, high, altar candles, slim tapers to large, glass-enclosed sanctuary lights. The latter look marvelous when set in the midst of a bowl of greenery and, of course, they burn on and on and on. The biggest altar candles are often just the right size for those very modern fat candlesticks. The most expensive church candles are made of pure beeswax—worth the extra cost because they smell so good and are so creamy and luxurious looking. And the unbleached beeswax tapers called "black" candles have that lovely natural maple color. I understand that, lacking a religious supply store handy, you can often order candles through a local parish.

The only thing more depressing than lukewarm "hot" hors d'ouvres is cold eggs and bacon. To avoid serving them at a company breakfast requires a constant stream of help running between the kitchen and the guests. However, a grand solution for me is the excellent new hot tray designed by George Briard. It is actually a well-and-tree platter with a deep depression on each side—primarily meant, I am sure, for a small roast and accompanying vegetables. But it is just the right size for our large Sunday breakfasts as well as for piping hot goodies at parties.

After a considerable round of parties over the years, Don and I have come to the conclusion that live music makes an incomparable contribution to their success. The music may be an accordion or a full-fledged dance orchestra, a strolling violinist, or a Spanish guitarist. And by the way, a lively local high school or college combo can usually be booked quite easily to provide music for a dancing party.

A friend of mine has an entrancing centerpiece she often uses with her checked gingham place mats for informal luncheons. It is a round raffia basket, the lid of which is a small garden of field flowers all wonderfully contrived of colored raffia. About 12 inches across and 5 inches high, it can be both the center of attention or hide hot rolls. Once she even used it as a kind of Jack Horner Pie—a cache for small surprise birthday presents. She tells me her sister sent it to her from Halls, 1114 Grand Ave., Kansas City, Mo., 64106,—it provides instant spring at any time of year.

A dear old lady whom we annually visit always keeps lavender and verbena sachets in her guest room beds. She removes them just before the beds are turned down at night—leaving the sheets delicately scented and the guest feeling cherished.

Tips from my party-food file, hot hors d'oeuvres department: Deep-fried okra rings (cut the okra into half-inch-thick slices, dip in corn meal, and fry). Deep-fat-fried, extremely thin circles of eggplant—thin to the point of being chips. Canned tamales, unrolled from their wrappers, cut up into bite-size pieces, and heated in Tacos sauce.

I often like to use hurricane shades indoors as well as out because I have found that drafts often make my candles gutter messily on the dining table. So I'm doubly delighted with my new glass candlesticks that came with their own hurricane shades. I got them in blue, to blend in with my blue dining room, but they also come in green, amber, or smoke glass. You can even tuck small flowers in the candle cups if you want.

Can a youthful furniture grouping from a little town in the East win fame and happiness with families everywhere?

A year ago, Kent-Coffey created "El Chico" in luscious Fruitwood or Antique White finishes for the private snuggeries of young women. And they loved it! Then a charming 84-year-old grandmother bought it because "it makes me feel young!" And her daughter bought it for the master bedroom, and her granddaughter ordered it in Antique White. That's the way it's been ever since. Ah, "El Chico," you're all things to all people (and there's just enough Spanish in you to stir the blood!). Do send ten cents for a full-color folio that tells the delightful story of "El Chico," to Dept. HG05.

HOW GOOD IS YOUR WATER?

With today's conditioners, even the best water can be made etter—for spotless cleaning, tastier cooking, pleasanter laving

Suddenly, all across the country, we are acutely water-conscious. We are aware of ruinous floods in some places, severe drought in others. There is a growing concern about water pollution, and until recently we were appalled by the eerie spectacle of household detergents spewing into our waterways and slithering downstream in billowing, meringue-like clouds.

Although household water consumption amounts to only a tiny fraction of our national needs —industry and agriculture consume the lion's share—it is a crucial fraction. Fortunately, today's scattered emergencies are spurring an accelerated national effort to maintain a water supply that is both plentiful and safe.

But safe water may be far from ideal water. Water is an essential tool for everyday living. Regardless of its quality, it is a medium that must be put to work in dozens of household tasks—in cleaning, laundering, cooking, bathing, shampooing, drinking, ice-cube making, car washing. But how well your water supply assists you in performing these many functions depends literally on what condition it is in.

There is no such thing as "pure" water. As the greatest solvent known to man, water tends to dissolve particles of nearly everything it comes in contact with. First, while it is still rainfall, it picks up pollutants from the air on its way to earth, cleansing the air of smoke, dust, and gases. Then, as it runs its course through the earth or into lakes and rivers, water dissolves such minerals as limestone, calcium, magnesium, and iron. By the time water reaches your house, it contains these and other minerals in variable degrees, depending on local conditions.

Studies have determined that four out of five homes in the United States are supplied with "hard" water. Water is considered hard when it contains sufficient amounts of calcium and magnesium to produce a gummy soap curd. The most readily identifiable sign of hard water is the ubiquitous ring around the bathtub. This is not "dirt," as commonly imagined, but a residue of calcium and magnesium, together with the soap which these minerals consume as they isolate themselves from the water. And until their demand for soap is satisfied, absolutely no suds or lather is produced.

The unhappy consequences of this soap-and-minerals conspiracy are many. Greater amounts of soaps and particularly detergents are necessary in hard water to perform their cleaning job. And the more soap required, the more soap curd is formed. It is this soap curd which is the real hard water culprit. It irritates sensitive skins, dulls hair, clouds and films china and glassware, works its way into clothing and fabrics when laundered, causing grayness, stiffness, and excessive wear. Experts reckon that the hard-water minerals and other impurities which lodge themselves in the fibers of clothing when laundered cause them to wear out 20 to 40 per cent faster than they do in soft water.

Hard water also precipitates a build-up of lime and other mineral deposits in hot water pipes, sometimes clogging them completely and making repairs and replacement necessary. This same lime scale can cover the heating elements in water heaters, thereby increasing fuel costs because of the reduced ability to transfer heat through the lime scale to the water.

Traditionally, most American families have accepted the water that reaches their house—either through city mains or from a well—as a precise, unchangeable substance: If the water is soft and free of offensive odor and color, you're in luck; if the water is poor, so is your luck. Today, such fatalism has been outmoded by the growth of the water conditioning industry. A considerable range of equipment is now available to soften water and filter away objectionable tastes and discoloration. Like air, water can be conditioned to overcome any local problems and to provide an automatically controlled quality standard of your own choosing. The specific, everyday benefits of such conditioned water are remarkable for their scope and variety. For example:

The money-saving advantages of conditioned water are real and substantial. Studies by government agencies and universities agree that a family of three using soft water can save at least $8 or $9 a month on soaps, detergents, bleaches, and bluing in laundering; on shampoos, lotions, and even men's shaving creams (without abrasive and soap-consuming minerals in water, many men find that a razor glides smoothly even through a lather made with ordinary soap). And with mineral and chlorine tastes removed from water, it takes less coffee or tea to achieve an even better flavor; some restaurant owners claim a coffee savings of 25 per cent. And fabrics free of soap-encrusted mineral deposits not only wear longer but look, and, in fact, are, cleaner.

The cooking advantages: Conditioned water boils faster than hard water. Certain vegetables, notably peas and beans, retain their color, hold their true taste, and remain more tender. For these reasons many quality canneries use conditioned water for processing foods before canning.

The cleaning advantages: The greatest drawback of hard water is its persistence in working at cross purposes with you when you are trying to get things clean. Chrome fixtures always seem to have water spots on them, as do stainless steel countertops, dinnerware, pots, and silver pieces. This is because hard water, as it evaporates, leaves visible deposits of minerals as a sure sign of its hardness. When you wash kitchen or bathroom floors, these deposits form a dirt-catching film which not only prevents a vinyl or tile surface from ever being really clean, but also makes it necessary to scrub more often. With conditioned water, all such surfaces are spot- and streak-free because no residual impurities are left.

Conditioned water leaves no ring around the bathtub—an advantage worth untold hours of scouring in a family with young children. Nor does conditioned water leave stains on plumbing fixtures. Such stains as have accumulated usually disappear after mineral-free water has been introduced into a house. Moreover, the flow of soft water through rusty or lime-scaled pipes eventually will flush away the sediment; the same cleansing action will take place in hot water tanks and even in the tea kettle.

The health advantages: Soft water is generally conceded to have a salutary effect on skin, scalp, and hair because the major irritants—primarily the gummy soap curd caused by calcium and magnesium—have been eliminated. When a family switches from hard to conditioned water, it must adapt to a new slipperiness in the water. This is nothing more than perfectly clean water, with none of the accustomed soap curd which tends to adhere to the pores and make the skin feel sticky. Many women with conditioned water in their homes report that they shampoo their hair themselves before going to the hairdresser, since a soft water shampoo not only removes all dirt but leaves no deposit of soapy film, as hard water does.

The maintenance advantages: In addition to clogging pipes, hard water contributes to leaky faucets; its mineral deposits are an abrasive which, over weeks and months, cause wear and leakage in washers. No such problems occur with conditioned water. Similarly, dishwashers and laundries are less prone to mechanical breakdowns because they do their jobs effectively with mild soaps and detergents which are not corrosive; they do not cause metal parts to deteriorate, as do the harsher detergents necessary in hard water.

Assuming one is interested in having conditioned water in his house, how does he get it? There are many types of water softeners and conditioners—from small manually operated units with changeable filters to fully automatic systems that not only soften water, but also may filter out tastes, odors, and turbidity (cloudiness).

As a long-range investment calculated to provide you with the full benefits of conditioned water, an automatic system is the wisest choice. Basically, these systems consist of a cylindrical tank, similar to a hot water tank, containing a combination of synthetic resins through which plain tap water passes. In so doing, the calcium and magnesium elements that cause hardness are transformed by what is called an "ionic exchange" into sodium. Periodically, the softening resins must be "regenerated" by running salt brine through the tank. The minerals which cause hardness are flushed away in the salt brine. Then the softening process starts all over again, automatically.

The cost of an automatic water conditioner depends in part on the size of your family and its

For people who are not ashamed of having brains.

Here is the most superb home library ever assembled—Great Books

It may not be popular to admit it, but all people aren't created equal. Not with equal intelligence, anyway. And the longer they live (and learn), the less equal they get.

You were probably born with a bigger share of intelligence than most of your fellow men . . . and right how to use it.

Chances are, the records you own play a more sophisticated brand of music. The books in your library offer more nourishment. The home you live in is equipped for a more gracious way of living. Most of all you appreciate the difference.

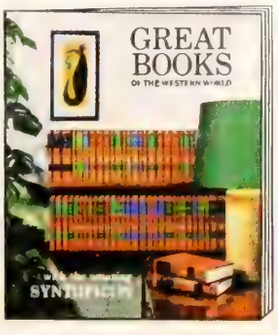
Certainly, you are not ashamed of having brains. You enjoy using them.

For this reason alone, Great Books belong in your home. These are the writings of Plato, Homer, Cervantes, Tolstoy, Dostoevsky, Freud, Rabelais, Aristotle, Shakespeare and many, many more. They contain just about every important thought of Western man for the past 3,000 years! The Great Books were published in collaboration with the University of Chicago, by Encyclopaedia Britannica. A set of 54 beautifully bound volumes containing 443 masterpieces by 74 of the greatest geniuses who ever lived. A library you couldn't duplicate at any price.

The $1,000,000 Syntopicon included

With the Great Books (and available only with Great Books) is a unique reference work called the Syntopicon. An amazing index that required 8 years and cost more than $1,000,000 just to write.

Unlike a dictionary that indexes words, or an encyclopaedia that indexes facts, the Syntopicon indexes ideas—every one of the thousands of topics and subtopics within the Great Books.



In minutes, the Syntopicon enables you to look up an idea in the Great Books and find what each of the great thinkers thought about it.

Also included with the Great Books are the handsome 10-volume reading plans. And you may also get a remarkable 10-volume set called Gateway to the Great Books as well.

Certainly the Great Books belong in the home of every thinking person. What do they cost? About the price of a good set of luggage.

To learn more, just fill out and mail the attached card to Great Books, 425 N. Michigan Ave., Dept. 112-J, Chicago, Illinois 60611. You will receive a full-color, 16-page booklet describing the Great Books in detail.

Consulate by Drexel—Josephine would know it. And remember the Tuileries. For this is the furniture of living in the grand manner as Napoleon understood it. Part Empire. Part Regency. Part Directoire. All Napoleon at the crest of his imperial majesty: the First Consul.

With bold genius he changed the face of Europe and the furniture of France. From the femininity of Louis Seize to the stately classicism of Consulate.

A collection wherein Drexel blends the best of the originals—the caning, the marble, the star-studded friezes and finely chased hardware—with well-planned storage and function in scale for today's return to elegance.

A complete collection for living, dining and bedroom that includes such collector's items as the sleigh bed with caned scrolled ends, at left. An étagère with bamboo-turned legs and cane shelves. A pierced panel chair. An escritoire.

A one-of-a-kind-interior collection laced through with accent pieces in Venetian Red, Empire Black and Antique Gold.

Consulate: a mood the sophisticated will understand. An import look the decorator-minded will be quick to recognize. Vive l'Empereur!

CONSULATE

ch less costly than its import look—the Consulate Chair above approximately $95, each section of the 3-unit bookcase, $280 (slightly higher in the West).

Consulate . . . with the warm patina of rare antiques caught in fruitwood finished cherry veneers. And authenticity further stated in line and detail. Above: the Empire Black posts touched with gold on the caned Sofa Lounge . . . the rosette-studded frieze of the open bookcase, designed to stand by itself or pair with arched bookcases as space and taste dictate. Right: the Pier Mirror . . . the curved post detail of the night stand . . . the brass pineapple finials of the caned Empire bed. Far right: the mullioned glass and side door grillwork of the interior-lighted china cabinet . . . the saber legs of dining table and chair.

BIG WHEEL

(A trialogue in-the-round)

Scene: A suburban yard
Time: An autumn morning, 1965
Cast: Father and two sons

Son I: This is a wheelbarrow?
F: Webster's New International says a barrow with one or more wheels is a wheelbarrow.
Son II: Motorcycle wheels. But where is the motor?
F: That's where you come in.
Son II: I should have known.
Son I: It's got plywood sides. Where are the planks of yesteryear . . .
F: Don't you know that ⅜-inch marine plywood will outlast half-inch oak planking . . .
Son II: You have been reading the publicity. How about a few days with wet sand and a steel spade. What happens to plywood then?
F: You undo these rust-resistant bolts and insert new pieces of plywood on these welded steel channels . . .
Son I: Insert, he says. So what do we have to do to give this many wheeled barrow a workout?
F: Well, first we take down this section of fence and break it up and stack it out back. Then we take down that big apple tree and saw it up. That should give any Carry-All a good test.
Son II: And us.
Son I: Lovable old codger . . .
Son II: How lovable can a codger get?
F: You'll need the big axe, the straight and curved pruning saws, the bucksaw, the heavy sledge, and the coil of rope to the left of the shed door—oh, yes, and the extension ladder.
Son II: Aren't you forgetting the wheelbarrow?

Waiting for Waterford is such sweet sadness.

Enjoy the bittersweet beauty of the wait. Don't be melancholy because you have to count the weeks or months between the time you order Waterford Irish Crystal and the time it arrives. There is no such thing as instant Waterford. It takes 10 years to teach a man to pull a stem. Or blow a goblet. Waterford is born to live many lifetimes. No matter how long you wait, the time is short, measured by the infinity of happiness carved into every piece of Waterford Irish Crystal.

BIG WHEEL continued from page 44

Two hours have passed. Same place, same characters

Son I: What kind of test is this? A hundred pounds of old fence rails...
F: Keep going. I'll stick a couple of upright pieces at the sides and you can pile up an indefinite amount.
Son II: He thinks of everything.
Son I: Hey, the load really does balance.
Son II: Look, Ma, one hand.
Son I: You're not kidding. Now take it away.
Son II: I always get stuck with the mean, rotten jobs.

Hauls loads as high as your head, if you stack it right, has better-than-barrow balance, and is steady as a Rolls Royce.

Empties end-over-end. Here a handhold, there a handhold, everywhere a ready handhold.

Interlude while Son II hauls off load and dumps it

Son I: So now it's a sawbuck.
Son II: We'll shake the wagon to pieces.
F: Bow your backs, men.
Son I: Hey, it works. How about that?
F: I'm going to our friendly garden center and pick up a bale of peatmoss while you jokers clean up this mess.
Son I: He likes to hear the plywood reverberate.
Son II: He likes to hear us reverberate.

Thirty minutes later

F: The peatmoss is in the trunk. Don't tear the bale open getting it out.
Son I: Shall we draw lots?
Son II: No, I'll go quietly. (He grunts and heaves once.) What do you know, it fits! Where shall I bury the body? (Sings as he goes off)

"He wheels his wheelbarrow
Through paths broad and narrow,
Crying 'Fence rails and peatmoss, alive, alive—O'"

Six cubic feet of wet peatmoss fit in a T. Big tires give like springs; the bottom is resilient as a drumhead.

Stands on end alone, almost loads alone, holds a full-sized barrel yet will pass through gate or doorway.

More time passes

Son I: You can't think of any more things for us to do with this?
F: Nope. I'm tired. Just stash it away in the tool shed.
Son I: He's tired, he says. Stash it, he says. Do you know what's in that tool shed now?
Son II: Just fill the barrow with old lawn mowers and stand it on end.
Son I: You know, it just so happens it will hold a couple of old lawn mowers. And it will stand on end.
Son II: Close the door before he thinks of something else.

The notes of a happy housekeeper

BY MARY ELIZABETH FALTER

Here begins my favorite month of the year—October. All through the hazy quiet days of September I've been waiting for that final burst of beauty that comes only in October. In a brief week or two, the glory appears—golden elm, flaming maple, and brilliant pin oak, showing off their colors against the blue sky. It's a time of ending and beginning, the flamboyant richness of summer giving away to the fury of winter.

I was alone in the vegetable garden this morning and I thought about how much we'll miss it when the freeze comes. Only the chard will remain after those first freezing days, and we think the frost improves it. We will have a fine stand of Indian corn this year and pumpkins for Halloween, too. As I picked our dinner I made a mental note to save all the remaining parsley and chives. They can be coarsely chopped and put into small plastic bags for the freezer, a bit of summer freshness and flavor for a winter meal.

We made a very useful discovery the time we ran out of dishwasher detergent on a Sunday morning with a large load of breakfast dishes to be washed. We had to improvise. We rinsed and loaded the dishwasher as usual, added a teaspoon of scouring powder and a tablespoon of ammonia, shut the door, and pushed the button. The results were spectacular. Every dish was sparkling clean and so was the inside of the dishwasher. So, ever since, we have used this method once or twice a month to thoroughly clean the machine. It prevents a film of grease from accumulating on the agitator blades, walls, and bottom of the dishwasher, which in turn can make spots on the dishes.

* * *

We are really enjoying this summer's collection of rocks and pebbles. Instead of just picking up "pretty" shells and rocks, we decided to do our beachcombing with more purpose. Tom concentrated on finding interesting large rocks, the best of which are now used as doorstops. His other specialty was medium-sized stones of the kind that have a sort of black-and-white tweed look. These have a rough surface and work beautifully as knife sharpeners. One now sits on the kitchen counter and serves this useful purpose while looking quite decorative. The children and I collected pebbles. We picked up most of them at the water's edge where they're worn smooth, and tried to find as many black ones and white ones as we could. Once home, we put them in the bottom of the trays the house plants sit in and also used them as a groundcover in the garden where there are a few scrawny spots—around the bases of the trees, for instance, and where the faucet sometimes drips.

I like to begin bringing the house plants in for the winter about this time of year—a bit earlier than some indoor gardeners do, but it is my theory that the plants fare better if they can get used to being in the house before the heat is turned on. I fix up a sort of first-aid station and beauty shop on the terrace and go over each plant carefully as I move it in. First I discard those that have gotten gawky and tired-looking; only the best-looking plants pass inspection. These I trim and prune and give a good bath to remove the summer dust (the garden hose with the nozzle adjusted to the finest spray possible works well for this). I loosen the surface earth in each pot and add some fresh potting soil containing vermiculite. As a final touch I give them a light feeding, and then in they come to their favorite spots in the house.

I opened the door the other morning to find our postman looking very perturbed because of the smashed and tattered package he held in his hand. A friend of my mother's had made some sweaters for the children, wrapped the package in what she thought to be sturdy paper and string, and sent it off. As it progressed through the postal processing and delivery, it got beaten and banged until the sweaters were almost spilling out of the box. Fortunately, they were intact, but the postman told me that far too many packages arrive this way because they are not wrapped to withstand the rigors of modern mechanical mail handling. He gave me some very good tips about wrapping the right way: (1) Always use a box plus heavy corrugated board all the way around it, taped or tied firmly; (2) wrap the box with heavy wrapping paper, and cover all seams with wide, gummed paper tape (but not masking tape, the P.O. says); (3) label complete address of both sender and destination, cover the label or lettering with transparent tape to protect from rain en route, and use zip code whenever possible.

While shopping for bed linens several months ago, I discovered a new kind of mattress pad that has turned out to be quite wonderful. It is made of Fiberglas Beta yarn —soft, smooth, and absorbent, and apparently indestructible. Our pads have proved to be shrinkproof, are still free from lumps and matting after countless washings. What's more, these mattress pads are said to be non-allergenic and fireproof. I got one for each bed in the house (they come in several sizes, both fitted and flat), and I really don't need more than one apiece because they can be washed and dried quickly while the beds are airing.

Tom loves gadgets, and while sometimes his fancy is caught by something silly, most of the contrivances he brings home are so useful we wonder how we ever got along without them. His latest acquisition is a Puritron Air Purifier, and it's such a serious little miracle worker I shouldn't even call it a gadget. When he first brought it home and plugged it in,

I thought it was a new kind of radio—it's about the same size as a table model. You can set it upright or flat on a table or desk, or hang it on the wall. We use our Puritron for combating strong cooking odors, dust, or smoke, and find that it works better than any type of ventilator or air freshener. An added blessing—it is soundless.

THE DELIGHTS OF A SMALL GUEST LIST

A solicitous couple entertains their three small sons at a full-dress dinner party and makes some enlightening discoveries

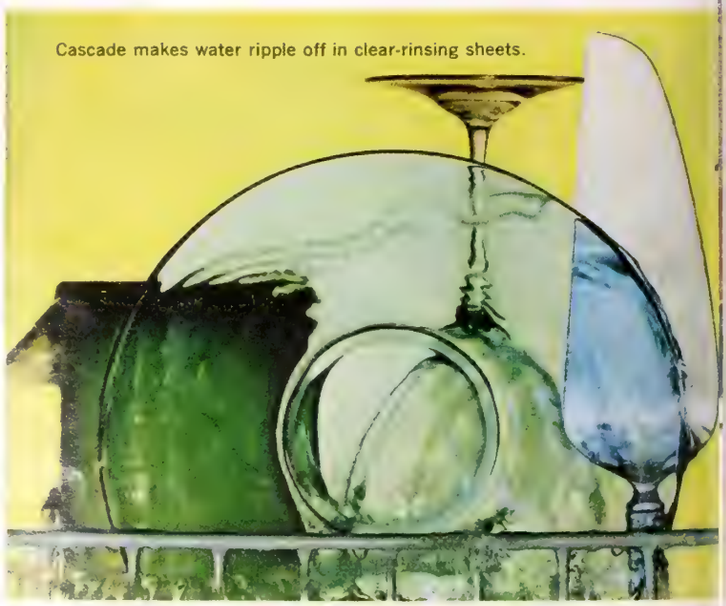
By Edith Sonn Oshin

Whenever we are expecting a few couples over for dinner on a Saturday night, the last part of the afternoon turns into what our family calls "the storm before the calm." While I madly tear through chores at tornado speed (to get ready for a serene, relaxing evening), every man, boy, and dog in our family knows enough to keep out of the way if he doesn't want to be drawn into toil or turmoil.

No matter how much I plan ahead, by six-thirty my work pattern resembles that of a broken egg beater—I work busily for a brief period, stop fitfully, and start up again when I remember to put ice in the ice bucket or wine in the refrigerator, or to fix a "picnic" supper for the boys. This "picnic" has always been held in our youngest son's room (the principle: upstairs and out of the way—and his linoleum floor can take any spillage that occurs).

After having their supper, the children come downstairs for a few minutes to say hello to our friends, nibble hors d'oeuvres, and handle their end of the conversation with responses ranging from a quiet shoulder shrug to a scintillating remark such as, "You should've heard Mommy this afternoon when . . ."

Although the boys are the usual hamburgers-French fries-and-lots-of-catsup type of gourmands, on company nights they suddenly develop a taste for the exotic. They sample canapé after canapé. And they linger. Finally, on firm orders from their father, the oldest child, as chief baby sitter, sees that the herd goes upstairs (boys do sound like a herd on the stairs) and supervises it until bedtime.



By the time our oldest was about eleven years old, my husband and I began to wonder what effect this party system was having on the boys. Guilt feelings began to accumulate. We relax in good company. But what about the boys? During the pre-dinner storm period, I virtually ignore them. Then, once they're upstairs, we forget them for hours. Do the boys feel discarded? Neglected? Resentful? Our hypothesis was that they did. After all, they have only a few minutes with our friends—and they like our friends, too, to say nothing of the party atmosphere and the food.

The thought struck us: Wh not invite them to dinner som time? We could give them thei own sample of our Saturday nigh parties. We'd devote an entire eve ning to them, with plenty of tim to eat, talk, and be together, com pletely unhurried.

We decided to turn our pla into a surprise party: the boy wouldn't know ahead of time tha they were to be the company, s they'd be at their spontaneous best This plan took maneuvering. First we set aside a Saturday, and o the large kitchen calendar (whic the children always check) wrot fictitious names for our expecte company. Then, that Saturday, w made special requests of the boys

"The people who are coming tonight haven't been here for a Saturday night party before," I explained. "so please be on your best behavior to make it a good evening for all of us. And please change into decent clothes." I often make similar speeches, but usually don't ask them to do more than fix their hair and tuck in their shirts.

They took my speech with the usual half-awareness. But, somehow, that evening they did come downstairs looking quite neat.

"We're hungry," said the oldest.

"I haven't fixed your picnic, and the company is coming earlier than usual," I told the boys. "You'll have to eat later. You'll get whatever, if anything, is left," I predicted direly, expecting a small revolt.

No reaction! (Were they so secure—or, Pang #1, so used to shabby treatment?)

A few minutes later, I rushed upstairs to get earrings, the signal for their father to call the boys together near the front door. "As a joke," I could hear him whisper, "go outside, ring the bell, and I'll answer and say our company has come."

Anything to fool their mother! The boys stepped outside and rang the doorbell. I hurried downstairs, and we opened the door.

"Well, well, our guests are here," announced the host. "Come in."

The boys laughed and for a moment hung around aimlessly in the living room as we all grinned at each other. I offered hors d'oeuvres. "As long as you're our guests, have some of these."

They just laughed. They still thought they had played a joke on me. With a little urging (very little), each took a highly seasoned meatball perched on a toothpick.

"These are great," said Mark. "Can I have another?" And he answered before I could: "I guess not," he said. (Pang #2: they do expect such shabby treatment!)

"Have some more—really."

"How about a drink? asked their father. "What'll it be: tomato juice? Grape juice?"

"Say," said David. "Really?"

"I think we are the company," Mark announced.

"Are we?" John, the youngest, asked incredulously.

"We are going to eat all the delicious food tonight?" asked David. (Pang #3 rushed in: was the usual picnic fare that bad?)

"All for you!" Dad announced.

"Wow-weeeee," shouted John. He took another miniature meatball. "I love these!"

"Try this cheese, too. I think you'll like it." I passed around decorative canapés on a silver tray, then a dip and chips, while the host poured grape juice cocktails into crystal stemware.

"A toast!" said our debonair seven-year-old. He held his glass high. I started to blurt out, "Please watch the juice!" but stopped in time. The host and hostess had agreed in advance not to issue warnings or correct manners this evening. John had controlled the slurping purple sea beautifully and without saying what the toast was, he and we drank in unison, knowing it was official and nice.

Then the boys plunged into the remaining canapés with fervor that left the host and hostess dumbfounded and the platters clean. No urging them to have more! We tried to start a little small talk, but the guests were too anxious to have dinner. "Why wait? It's ready," said Mark. He was right. All we had to do before serving was remove the extra place setting (as subterfuge, I had set the table for three couples, because five place settings might have been a giveaway) and light the candles.

We had the feast they'd sniffed, seen, and admired before the "company" came: shrimp cocktail, three kinds of pickles, stuffed olives, steak with sauce Béarnaise, potato boats, baby peas, garlic bread, no salad, ginger ale. For dessert: cold orange soufflé topped generously with whipped cream and slivered almonds. The meal was a success.

"You know, garlic bread tastes much better warm," was one of David's comments. (That set off Pang #4: what did cold, slightly stale garlic bread taste like the morning after?)

The dinner conversation resembled adult dinner talk in many ways: the children talked about children, schools, children, and schools.

After dinner, our happy company, bright-eyed and comfortably full, were in high spirits and anxious to continue playing their role as guests. To conclude the evening, their father suggested a five-handed game of Michigan rummy. All of us enjoyed it. Surprisingly, after the appointed number of rounds, the younger ones didn't fight going up to bed.

But before going all the way upstairs, David turned and said, "Say, why did you two decide to do this anyway?"

We confessed: for rushing

POLYCREST IS THE U.S. RUBBER REGISTERED TRADEMARK FOR ITS POLYPROPYLENE OLEFIN FIBER.

New Polycrest is Douglas-proof!

"Aaaaaagh—Douglas!" Forget it, Mommy.

Anything this two-year-old tiger can dish out, Polycrest can take in stride. It's the most stain-resistant and wear-resistant fiber in the business. Ink, grease, coffee—there's hardly anything that can't be wiped right up from a carpet made of Polycrest and leave its color just as bright and sharp as new. So, Doug, you're out of luck.

Now, ignore the mess and take a good close look at the carpet itself. The depth and richness of the color. (And Polycrest looks this good in any color.) The deep, clear, clean pattern lines. (A pattern you can depend on to keep its original shape and definition, too.) You can almost feel its full, lofty, bulky texture and deep pile luxury.

One thing you won't feel is a shock. Polycrest has virtually no static electricity. (You won't get a shock at the cash register, either!)

AUSTR

BY DAL STIVENS

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dal Stivens, a well-known Australian novelist and short story writer, lives in Sydney with his wife and two children. An amateur naturalist with a particular interest in animal behavior, his hobbies include travel, theatre, conversation.

Americans visiting Australia often experience a shock of near recognition. It seems like home, and yet unlike home. Australia is big, sprawling, almost as large as the continental U.S.A., and Sydney, the fourth largest city of the British Commonwealth, rears a spectacular skyline on a harbor and bridge as radiant as that of San Francisco. Leave the cities for the outback or bush, as Australians call it, fly over smoky blue hills and brown plains, and the second shock of recognition comes. This is not America of today, but the American West of a century ago. True, the chocolate-brown aborigines have been dispossessed of their tribal lands (just as the American Indians were), and much of the pioneering is over except in the remote north where cattle are still grazed on unfenced ranges by cowboys who rope and brand in the open. But as American travel writer Richard Joseph said when he was in Australia recently, "It's a true geographical and emotional frontier. Things can be done by the man who wants to do them, and if life gets too sticky where you are, you can always pull out and go somewhere else."

Recently, I traveled fairly widely in huge empty Northern Territory, which is twice as large as Texas, but has only 27,000 white inhabitants. Most of them live in Darwin, the capital on the blue waters of Beagle Bay, and in Alice Springs, 1,000 miles to the south in the red Arizona-like center of semi-desert sprinkled with gray acacia scrub. The further I moved out from the towns in the Territory, the more friendly, relaxed, and courteous the people were. Some of the largeness and the simplicity of the natural environment seems to have rubbed off on them. There is an absence of pretentiousness, of keeping up with the Joneses.

Even in the large, prosperous inland towns you find this same easeful air. Australians still have space. Over half of Australia's people live in the east (Continued on page 64) coastal towns and cities, yet outside even the big cities men can drive comfortably to work, or reach a trout stream or a golf course within a few minutes. Shortly after leaving an air-conditioned airport you can be over eucalypt-clad mountains with sandstone outcrops—so wild and fierce that if you survived a crash landing, you might die of starvation before you were found. It has happened.

Australia's older major cities reflect its early colonial history. The prosperous wool trade in the years after Waterloo gave New South Wales and Tasmania some of our finest houses. Englishmen of taste and wealth took up grants of land outside Sydney and in northern Tasmania where they built fine homesteads, usually of two stories, with porticoes or long colonnaded verandas and broad eaves, using honey-colored sandstone and bluestone or warm brick which was often painted white. The native materials—stone, brick, and timber, particularly cedar—the craftsmanship, the climate, the way of life all fused together to produce an indigenous architecture. The bright, hot Australian sun demanded that the rooms be tall and cool, the walls thick, and the verandas and porticoes wide. Working inside these imperatives, using Georgian and Regency elements, architects of the day—such as John Verge, designer of Elizabeth Bay House in Sydney (1832), Camden Park at Camden (1831) and Denham Court at Ingleburn (1832-33), and John Lee Archer who built Saundridge at Cressy—created a succession of superb houses.

Most visitors start their Australian travels in Sydney, the oldest Australian city. Its climate is much like Florida's but perhaps more favored because some (Continued on page 66)

50 inches of rain fall throughout the year.

Architecturally there are three Sydneys. The first, the colonial city of Lachlan Macquarie, the building governor of the early nineteenth century, is preserved in a small enclave in Sydney's heart. Parliament House and the Mint in Macquarie Street the two surviving wings of the Rum Hospital (so-called because it was built by three colonists in return for a monopoly of rum)—are austerely charming if not great architecture. The wide verandas, colonnaded on two floors, have affinities with British colonial buildings in warmer countries, particularly India. The clean, chaste St. James' Church in King Street and the nearby Hyde Park Barracks in Queens Square, both essentially eighteenth century in feeling, are among the major works of Francis Greenway, the convict architect. Some of the best Greenway buildings are to be found some distance from Sydney. At Windsor, 35 miles away and magnificently sited on a hill overlooking the Hawkesbury Valley, is the mellow red-brick church of St. Matthew, the best preserved and possibly the finest of Greenway's creations. Liverpool, 21 miles from Sydney, has his Old Hospital; also St. Luke's Church, unfortunately spoiled by the addition of an ill-designed chancel.

To see early colonial houses, it is worthwhile going to Parramatta, 15 miles from Sydney, and the second oldest settlement. Experiment Farm Cottage (1798) and Elizabeth Farm (1794) are both examples of simple, unassertive early colonial single-story buildings with hospitable verandas on slim pillars, louvered shutters, low shingle roofs, brickwork, and white paint.

The second, inner Sydney (now rapidly being demolished to make way for the third, modern Sydney) has a distinctive character of its own—that of the opulent Victorian Renaissance and Gothic Revival. Gothic Revival is an acquired taste. I have a warm feeling for the romantic Victoria Markets and the restless and comical Town Hall in George Street, both ostentatiously Renaissance. (But, then, I like the Law Courts in London with its Renaissance form and Gothic detail and even the Albert Memorial.) The Renaissance buildings of the Customs House, the Museum, the Lands Department, the Department of Public Works, and the General Post Office were built over a twenty-year period by James Barnett, who shared some of Macquaries's vision for public building. During that time, Sydney acquired its two neo-Gothic cathedrals: St. Mary's and St. Andrew's. The latter was designed in part by Edmund Blacket, considered by some a better Gothic Revivalist than Pugin, designer of the Houses of Parliament in London. To Blacket also goes credit for the handsome Gothic Revival Administration Buildings and Great Hall of Sydney University.

Today, many of these ebullient Victorian buildings are being pulled down and replaced with rather characterless, aseptic window-walled skyscrapers. Many of these glass egg boxes are not even efficient. Only recently have architects begun to follow Brazil's lead and use sunshades and louvers to achieve grace of line or harmony of color. There has been no over-all planning for city renewal, but there are exciting proposals for unified redevelopment of two districts, The Rocks and the Circular Quay area. And the magnificent conception of the Opera House by the Danish architect, Joern Utzon, may (Continued on page 248)
